Final count: transfers up, freshmen down

Enrollment figures at Austin Peay's main campus show that efforts to recruit more community college students are paying off, and an increase in graduate students shows the university is meeting the educational needs of this region. Freshmen enrollment numbers are down by 5.2 percent for Fall 1997.

Students taking classes at Austin Peay at Fort Campbell aren't included in these numbers, since there are two fall sessions at Fort Campbell.

"We have made a commitment to quality at Austin Peay, and that's reflected in the increases in the number of transfer students as well as graduate students," said Dr. Sal Rinaldi, APSU president. "Better retention and increased transfers indicate a growing appreciation for the quality education offered at Austin Peay. The number of students who have returned for graduate studies is also a good indication of the quality."

Students transferring to APSU are up to 16.2 percent compared with 436 last year. Of those 463 students, 180 are community college transfers.

"We made a concerted effort to focus on transfer students from community colleges," said Dr. Steve Pontius, vice president of academic affairs. "Those transfer students tend to graduate at a higher rate since they already have made a commitment to further their education. If they graduated from a community college, they're coming to get a four-year degree."

Of those 463 transfer students, 54 come from Hopkinsville (Ky.) Community College. The enrollment figures also show that APSU is drawing more from the Nashville area, with 34 students transferring from Volunteer State Community College and 19 from Nashville State Tech.

Students from across Tennessee are continuing to come to APSU, with 74 of the state's 95 counties represented, as well as the Kentucky border counties of Logan, Todd, Trigg and Christian. Students from those border counties pay the same tuition as Tennessee residents. APSU students also come from 35 of the 50 states, the District of Columbia and 15 foreign countries.

More graduate students also are coming to the university, with 411 graduate students this year compared with 386 last year, representing a 6.5 percent increase. In that category, those seeking the education specialist degree is up by 115 percent with 28 this year compared with 13 last year. Pontius said those graduate student figures show APSU is willing to shift programs as demands shift and that's reflected by the increase in graduate students.

Total enrollment at APSU's main campus is slightly up from last year's numbers with 5,233 students this year compared with 5,206 last year. That represents an enrollment increase of about a half percent. Several schools across the state have faced declining numbers of students and point to a strong economy as the reason. When unemployment is low, students may opt to continue working rather than returning to school. When unemployment is high, students go to school to retell their skills.

Enrollment at the new Fort Campbell Education Center, which will open soon, should have a positive impact on overall numbers at Austin Peay.

According to officials, freshmen numbers are low but that was not a surprise, due to concentrations on recruiting transfers.

Students respond to media coverage

By TANEE REYES
staff writer

The world recently lost two popular public figures: Mother Teresa and Princess Diana. Media coverage of both has been heavy in the wake of their deaths.

At a forum held Friday in the University Center on the media's behavior in light of Princess Diana's death, members of the local media defended their positions on the subject.

They also criticized some of the coverage that they thought went above and beyond what they considered to be necessary to cover the news.

There was a general agreement that "real" media does not use paparazzi techniques, and does not bow to sensationalism; however, it was also acknowledged that there is at times a very fuzzy line between the two.

Following Diana's death

there was public outrage at the paparazzi, who many believe to be responsible for the princess' death. Some of that outrage poured onto the media in general, causing many people to examine the media more closely for underlying problems.

In contrast, when Mother Teresa died there was not as much coverage about her death. This left many people wondering whether or not the media was any different from the paparazzi, or if they too had fallen prey to sensationalism.

Regarding the disproportionate amount of media coverage between Princess Diana and Mother Teresa, junior Tom Berry said, "People are more interested in a fantasy life of riches and fame than a life of self sacrifice for others."

Another junior said, "The media's lack of concern for the death of Mother Teresa shows how warped we as a society judge the merit of one's life."

Jay Richardson said "Mother

Teresa was not only diminutive in stature, but also in celebrity. Since Princess Diana was just another pretty face, society mourns the shell of a person, rather than the beauty of the soul."

These opinions lead us to believe that the media has fallen for sensationalism, but there is another explanation.

Many people believe that there was more coverage of the princess's death because it was just more news.

"No, Mother Teresa didn't get as much coverage as Princess Diana, but when a 90-year old lady dies it is a little easier to understand and accept. Diana was 36 and her life had just begun," said Jon Palmer.

Leon Walsh said, "Princess Diana's death overshadowed Mother Teresa's death because she was first, younger and a people princess; also the tragedy around how it happened; media, alcohol and whom the princess was with."

Student organizations are invited to wear shirts, carry banners, wave pom-poms, cheer, shout and raise spirit for their organization and for Austin Peay. Homecoming queen finalists will be announced during this time.

The annual parade will be held on Saturday, Oct. 4 starting at the Burt parking lot at 10 a.m. Applications for floats are due Friday, Sept. 26.

According to Student Activities, building floats create positive public relations for organizations.

The Street Fair, which is fast becoming an annual event, will be held from 10:30 a.m.-2 p.m. in the dormitory parking lot. Applications are due Friday, Sept. 19.

Set along the street, organizations can raise money as well as school spirit. Some suggestions are face painting, sponge tossing, ring tossing, softball tossing, basketball tossing, a dunking booth, cotton candy and popcorn. The football game will begin at 2 p.m. at Governor stadium as APSU takes on TN Tech.

For further information contact the Student Activities Office at 648-7431.

Technology access fee allows upgrade of labs

By DANNY PEPPERS
staff writer

Austin Peay's computer labs will be upgraded with the budget increase from the Technology Access Fee, which added approximately $385,000 for the 1997-98 school year, according to Dr. Bruce Myers, co-chair of the Academic Technology Council and head of the Technology Board.

According to Nancy Smithfield, assistant professor of computer sciences and chair of the Lab Sub-Committee of the Academic Technology Council, there are approximately 14 labs on campus open to all students.

"Some of the labs close temporarily for classes and some labs are departmental labs reserved for students in the department," Smithfield said. Additionally, funding is a problem in all departments and each is responsible for its labs and workers.

"A spending plan for the entire amount of the technology fee as required to be submitted to the Tennessee Board of Regents by the first of September," Myers said. He went on to say the plan had been approved at this point and any expenditures, other than regular operating costs for lab workers and supplies from these funds, must await approval of the plan.

According to Myers, the spending plan submitted to TBR included four major categories. One request was for Windows 95 software to be installed in all labs, another was to replace departmental equipment to make requests for equipment and to replace old equipment.

"We proposed over the next two years to include the Music/Mass Communications Building and the Dunn Center in the network on campus," Myers said.

According to Myers, the life of a computer system is expected to be about five years before it becomes obsolete. "We'll recycle and move where we can, but sooner or later the computers have to be replaced," Myers said. Meetings of the council and the board are open and any faculty member with an interest can be on the Academic Technology Council.

IBM compatible labs are open to all students when a class is not in session. Labs are located in Kimbrough 213, library 209, Marks 201, Harned 207 and 108, Claxton 300 and 303, Clement 148, 145, 142, 104 and the Dunn Center 288.

There are only two Macintosh Computer labs, Trabern 212 and Music/Mass Communications 327. The library has two Macintosh computers, and the rest are IBM compatible. Open hours are posted outside each lab.

The lab sub-committee was formed for all departments to come together and discuss common lab problems and concerns such as virus protection on all computers," Smithfield said.

Additionally the committee has made recommendations as to how the money will be spent and has suggested minimum requirements for all labs, training of lab workers and the upgrading of equipment.

The committee is working on compiling and organizing information on all labs on campus and more information should be available by the end of October," Smithfield said.

December graduates must take ACT COMP

The Tennessee Board of Regents requires all students graduating with a bachelor's degree or an associate of science in general studies degree to take the ACT COMP Examination prior to receiving their degree. This test instrument is used to evaluate the effectiveness of the university's educational program. Graduates who achieve exceptional scores on the COMP will be recognized in the graduation program.

Seniors who plan to graduate in December 1997 must take the COMP during the following scheduled testing sessions. Those seniors that do not take the COMP will have a hold on their diplomas.

The following sessions are scheduled:

Friday, Sept. 19, 2-5 p.m., Claxton 103.
Thursday, Oct. 9, 4-7 p.m., Claxton 103.

Tuesday, Oct. 28, 12:30-3:30 p.m., Kimbrough 119.

Thursday, Oct. 30, 5-8 p.m., Claxton 103.

Saturday, Nov. 1, 9 a.m.-noon, Claxton 103.

Seniors on the graduation list will be notified by mail. Any senior who has not received information and/or signed up to take the test should call 648-6184 or go by Browning 115.

Death of Di no reason to censor media

From the editor-in-chief

There was a death and someone had to take the blame. Princess Diana died from injuries sustained in a car accident which occurred while the paparazzi was chasing the vehicle. Immediately after her death, the paparazzi was blamed.

Diana's brother, the ninth Earl Spencer, said on the day after her death that the editors who had bought paparazzi photos of Diana through the years had "blood on their hands." WHAT? Blood on their hands? It takes two to tango, my friend and if one is chasing, then there has to be a willing chase.

When you were a kid and wanted someone to chase you, didn't you hit them and then run? You had to be running for them to give chase. I am not saying that the media was right in chasing Diana's vehicle at such a high speed, but if the car hadn't been traveling at over 100 miles per hour, then there would have been no need for a chase.

Diana used the media to her advantage when she wanted to exploit her good works, but then shunned the media when they wanted more. It is a simple game of cat and mouse, of here I am, but I don't want you to catch me. Only this game went a little further than it was supposed to and the media is taking all of the blame.

Never mind the fact that the driver was drunk and was found to have drugs in his body. Those facts seemed to have been left out of the equation when everyone decided to blame the paparazzi for the death of the princess.

Many of England's papers have decided to no longer carry pictures of the princess in private situations because of the paparazzi's involvement in the accident. Why? Why now that she is gone? Is it not going to bring England's beloved princess and humanitarian back. It makes no sense to me.

The Independent, a respected broadsheet, wrote in an editorial on Sept. 8, "If we are not all sadder and wiser," we ought to be. "The hunt became a blood sport. The query dead, let us find gentler pursuits."

Has the media lost its edge? Does the media have an edge or should it have an edge? Should we stop reporting things just because of an unfortunate accident? Do those papers who are no longer running pictures of Diana in personal situations still planning to run pictures of other public figures in personal situations? I do not believe that we should invade people's personal lives, but I think there is a place in our society for the tabloids and the paparazzi.

Obviously the magazines and tabloids that employ the paparazzi have a large readership. If they didn't, they wouldn't be able to stay afloat.

Additionally, from time to time, they do print worthwhile stories. Should we sacrifice this entire industry for one accident? And why do the tabloids feel so sorry all of a sudden? Did it take the death of a princess to make them realize that what they were doing was wrong? Would a comon man dying in a car accident with the paparazzi following generate remorse? I think not.

Basically, the publications that have publicly decided not to run pictures of Diana in private situations are censoring themselves. I always thought that it was the government and political activist groups that tried to censor the media, not the media itself. And the tabloids, for goodness sake. The tabloids are the newspapers who pride themselves on covering the abnormal and not suppressing anything. If the tabloids start censoring themselves, then what's next? Is the Leaf Chronicle going to stop sending their photographers because they may have to chase someone? I clearly remember the Leaf sending a photographer out to chase a car which carried a gunman. If the gunman wrecked and was killed, would the Leaf Chronicle feel responsible for the death? Would they decide to no longer print pictures of gunmen in vehicles?

The point is this: Censorship is censorship, whether it is self-imposed or government regulated. A free press is what journalists in the world are most proud of, and it amazes me that tabloids would impose restrictions on themselves for something that was not their fault. There needs to be self-regulation, but there also needs to be common sense.

Being true to your school!

JONATHAN SCOTT CARTER

So here we are, four weeks into the fall semester. I know that many of you are asking yourselves, "Did I make the right choice?" Was choosing "Excellence by Choice" a wise thing to do?

Here at the All State, we have done our own little school by school comparison.

The University of Tennessee at Knoxville or Austin Peay State University? Hmmm, decisions, decisions. These are just a few of the things we came up with:

At the University of Tennessee:

106,000 faithful fans pack Neyland Stadium to watch a team that has the potential to beat any other team in the country.

Daily campus newspaper prints interesting stories covering campus life. Journalism is spelled in a capital "J."

The women's basketball program is the best in the nation. The male head coach's salary is nearly equal to the male head coach's salary, whose team is mediocre at best.

Undergraduate classes are led by disinterested people with little experience who hope to be professionals in their field one day.

School Song: Rocky Top

Couples walking through the Commons have the opportunity to be noticed by future #1 draft picks.

While it's not New York City, Knoxville offers a variety of things to do and an interesting nightlife.

Two words: Too big!

At Austin Peay State University:

100's of Gov's fans have plenty of room to spread out in Governor Stadium to watch a team that has the potential to beat any other team in the county.

Weekly campus newspaper can cover all of the news that is fit to print in one paragraph. The editors can spell journalism.

The female head coach of a pretty good women's basketball program is paid less than the male head coach of a pretty good men's basketball team.

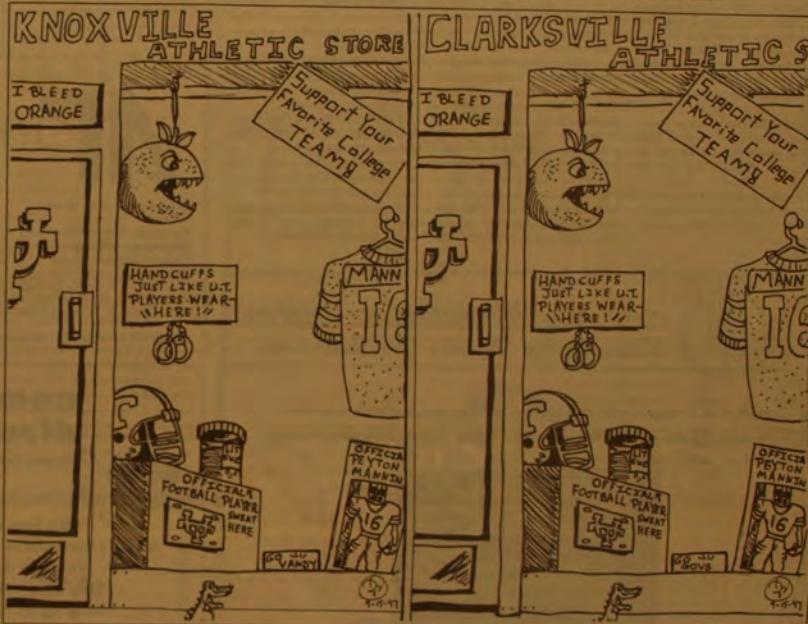

Undergraduate classes are taught by interesting professors who already have years of experience in their field of study.

School Song: We have a school song?

Student's number one activity along fraternity row - howling at the moon.

Two Rivers mall, Carmike Cinemas, and (the soon to be defunct) Red Rooster Club.

Two words: Too small!

Letters to the Editor

A call to prayer

"If my people who are called by my name will humble themselves and pray, then I will hear from Heaven and will heal their land." (2 Chronicles 7:14). This morning a group of Christians, joyfully gathered around the campus flagpole, claimed this promise as their own.

A few weeks ago General Borisov, a born again Christian and high ranking officer in the Russian Army proclaimed on this very campus that he deplored the removal of prayer from America's public schools. He said, "When I go back to Russia and tell the people there about your country, they do not believe me when I tell them that the Bible is not taught in your schools. They say, 'but General, that can't be. You're talking about America.'"

If we Christians want the world to know that Jesus loves them, then we've got to pray and we've got to do it in unity with one another. If you could not make it this morning, then please, lay this paper down and pray for our school, our nation and our world; not just today but as long as we are residents upon this earth.

Mike Warren

Let us then turn our admiration into application and live our life in the fullness of our aspiration by dying to our own self-gratifying nature and living a life of love for our forgotten neighbor. When the end comes, how will your life be perceived by God and man? What matters is now, for tomorrow is not promised and time will not wait for us to choose to die.

Mike Warren

Dying to live or living to die?

Death has a funny way of making us think about life as much as finals will make us think about the subjects we've studied over the semester.

When death makes us think of life, life ought to cause us to reconsider our priorities so that when the final test comes we may be prepared as we have studied. In the past few weeks, we've been able to stroke this topic in our minds with the sudden death of Princess Diana and Mother Teresa.

On television we see the admiration for their lives as each lived to their fullest potential giving all they had to what they believed was love for humanity. In their daily life was the dying of themselves for the sake of others and we as a whole admired this giving lifestyle.

But before their bodies even begin to decay we will return to our "daily grind" none the better despite our philosophical thoughts.

Some say "life is worth the living," but those we admire live their life as though "life was worth the dying." Take a moment to mourn their dying because time will not longer pass their way, and let us mourn also our own living, for we are enslaved to our unfriendly master, time, who without warning nor bias issues the final and grants no respite.

were incapable of seeing how it was immoral to own humans? If so, then you, yourself, could be the proof positive of the "nature over nurture" argument.

Your frequent use of racial epithets is more indicative of your own, inner issues than anything else. Can you simply refrain from using epithets? Even Rush Limbaugh can spout his trash without stooping to racial slang. If he can do it, why can't you?

Until I heard you, I never thought I'd ever find anyone who would actually improve by emulating any aspect of Rush Limbaugh.

You have all the social awareness and sensitivity of a mudslide. When you make glib references to racial issues, you show your readers that you will not treat the issue AND THE VICTIMS WITH the respect they deserve. Move on to another subject. Speak about something you know about, well, if there is such a thing.

Bill Horn

A wolf in an opinion editor's clothing?

In reply to Jonathan Carter and his race piece of last week. You seem to think that it's your duty to make glib commentary on racial issues. Why must you refer to "happy Little Black Sambo's"? Just once can you say something without using derogatory racial references?

In your Thanksgiving piece of last year, you made sarcastic light of racism to make a point, or, at least that's what it seems you'd like us to believe. Your insensitivity astounded me and many who read it. What makes you feel it's acceptable to make such patronizing references to other people's struggles?

Last week, you said that your ancestors were slave owners, fought as Confederates, and that you were proud of them. Then you said not to judge them with today's eyes. I gather you meant that they couldn't have known any better.

That line was not and will never be true. There were many people back then who knew better and wrote volumes about the evils of slavery. Are you saying that your ancestors were less intelligent than their contemporaries in that they Austin Peay's Governor football team was turned away from its first victory of the season Saturday night by a combination of turnovers and bad luck.

The Govs (0-2) fell to the visiting Samford Bulldogs by a 21-13 count after holding a 13-7 lead through three quarters.

We only had the ball nine snaps in the 4th quarter," Austin Peay head coach Bill Schmitz said. "We were winning in every category, but it's a 60 minute game. You can't play just three quarters."

A costly fumble by O.T. Todd late in the third quarter and a fumble on a Samford squib kick ruined the Govs' chances of victory.

Todd's fumble came after quarterback Adam Pineo connected with him on at the Govs 31-yard line. Todd was hit hard by a Samford defender and lost the ball. Samford recovered and scored three plays later to take a 14-13 lead.

Samford quarterback Jake Rackley scored on a five-yard run with 1:46 to play in the game to seal the win.

After the touchdown, Samford's squib kick hit Peay's Mike Merriman and bounced back to Samford, who recovered the fumble and ran out the clock.

APSU started the game strong for the second week in a row. Joe Palmer connected on a 42-yard field goal on the Govs' opening drive to give the team a 3-0 lead.

Samford (1-1) took their first lead of the game after tailback Jerome Russell broke free in the secondary for a 42-yard touchdown run to make it 7-3.

With time winding down in the first half, Pineo found Frank Escobar open in the end zone for a 31-yard touchdown pass to put the Govs on top 10-7 at halftime.

The Govs extended their lead to 13-7 when Palmer booted his second field goal of the night from 35 yards.

Things went downhill from there.

"We played a much tougher team, but we did things better offensively," Schmitz said. "I think in every area we improved."

One area the Governors improved in was defense. The Gov defense held the Bulldogs to 342 yards offensively after giving up over 500 yards and 55 points to Morehead State in the opener.

The defense improved greatly upon their performance versus Morehead." APSU defensive coordinator Pete Rekstis said. "It's definitely a step in the right direction."

On the offensive side of the ball, Austin Peay continued its impressive passing game. Pineo threw for 235 yards and one touchdown on 15-of-34 passing.

The Austin Peay running game, absent in the Morehead State loss on Sept. 4, managed 101 yards on 35 carries. Chris Black ground out 95 yards on 27 carries to lead the Govs.

Todd hauled in seven passes for 98 yards, while Frank Escobar caught five for 107.

The Governors must prepare for nationally-ranked Western Kentucky Hilltoppers this weekend in Bowling Green, Ky.

Western is coming off a 37-21 victory over Ohio Valley Conference opponent Eastern Kentucky.

Quarterback Willie Taggart will be the focus of the Governor defense.

"Western Kentucky poses a lot of problems. They've got great athletic talent," Schmitz said. "They've got three big-time players on offense."

Willie Taggart may be the best quarterback in Division I-AA. Stockton is a threat in both the passing and kick returning."

The Austin Peay offense will also have to contend with a very physical Hilltopper defense.

"They've got two players who are legitimate NFL prospects," Schmitz said.

"On paper it's a very tough challenge. We're going to have to play within ourselves."

Lady Govs on top of OVC

By SCOTT HOSKINS
Sports editor

By sweeping their two matches last week, the Lady Govs volleyball squad claimed the early lead in the Ohio Valley Conference championship race.

The Lady Govs (6-1, 2-0 OVC) defeated Morehead State University by a 15-13, 15-6 and 15-12 mark to beat the Lady Eagles for the second time in a week.

Eastern Kentucky fell to APSU in three straight sets as well, 15-6, 15-3 and 15-11.

"I'm excited about the way we've started," Austin Peay head coach Cheryl Holt said.

Austin Peay's freshmen continued to play well in the early stages of the season, combining for 24 kills in the Morehead victory and 3 against Eastern Kentucky.

Laura Mitchell had 12 kills and nine digs against MSU, while Annie Gieber contributed 21 assists.

Becky Sowinski added 14 digs and Jenny

Wenning had 11.

"Laura and Becky do a great job," Holt said. "They are real focused and hard workers. I believe they'll get better and better and can become premier players in the conference."

"The key is that we've worked together really hard and we're playing well together," — Austin Peay head coach Cheryl Holt Against Eastern Kentucky, Jennifer Anderson led the Lady Govs with 22 assists and Gieber had 14 in a balanced attack.

Mitchell had nine kills and nine digs in the winning effort.

Holt was pleased with the way the team has come together, even though five freshmen have been seeing significant playing time.

"The key is that we've worked really hard and we're playing well together," she said. "We've got a lot of ability and parity."

"It takes a whole team effort. It's not a one-man show. One person can't dominate."

This weekend the squad travels to Starkville, Miss., to participate in the Mississippi State Tournament. Along with APSU and Mississippi State, the field will consist of Troy State, Southwest Louisiana and Buffalo.

The tournament will be a good opportunity for the squad to work on different aspects of their game that they wouldn't normally do in conference play.

"The tournament will give us flexibility and allow us to try some different offenses," Holt said. "We can experiment with lineups. It will allow us to fine tune some aspects of the game and take chances we wouldn't normally take."

Harvill Hall: reward for students

staff writer

There are several Enrichment Programs at Austin Peay which have brought about a major change. Students involved in leadership development and community involvement programs have the opportunity to live in the newly established Harvill Hall Enrichment Programs Living Center. "I moved to Harvill because it's in a good location. I have classes with a lot of people in here and it's really cool," said student Christine Hinton about Harvill's location and atmosphere.

Joe Mills, director of Housing and Residence Life said, "It's been a very successful program...I think the students are very satisfied." "It's not just for any student," said Dr. Joe Filippo, assistant vice president for Academic Affairs and professor of theatre. Students, both male and female, who are involved in one or more of these programs and have a 3.0 cumulative grade point average are eligible to live in Harvill. "I'm delighted to see this (concept) has been strongly and warmly accepted by the students," said Filippo.

The 24-hour dorm is relatively quiet compared to most dorms on campus. There are special rooms that the students use to study individually or with each other and to converse with professors. "It makes it easier for them to converse with students with like minds," said Filippo.

Harvill Hall has two guest suites set aside for visiting faculty who are involved in one or more of the Enrichment Programs. "We're all in the same classes together, and if one of us has a problem in class or anything we can go talk to each other about it," said student Dina Fallding about living in Harvill. As for the program being beneficial for the students, Mills responded by saying, "I think that it is just due to the different mix of students living there."

The leadership development and community involvement programs that the students must be involved in to live in Harvill include the African American Cultural Center, African American Studies, Center for Creative Arts, Center for Field Biology, Distinguished Speakers Series, Environmental Education Center, Heritage, Honors, International Education, International Studies, Presidential Research Scholars Program, President's Emerging Leaders, and Women's Studies. All of the concentrations find themselves in the core of liberal arts.

Rabung's exhibit is titled "Home and Yard: The Material Culture of the Rural Elderly Living Along the Mississippi River Valley in Southern Illinois." By looking closely at the material culture of the yard and the home, the exhibit examines the way 40 elderly families have shaped the spaces in which they live. These spaces can be seen as expressions of cultural values, ideals and beliefs. Providing the landscape for this exhibit are the rural towns of Prairie Du Rocher, Evansville, Chester, Grand Tower, Ware, McClure, Thebes and Cairo.

A resident of Wadsworth, Ohio, Rabung received a master of fine arts degree in photography from Illinois State University and a BFA in photography from the University of Akron School of Art. He has taught at the University of Akron, Illinois State University and the University of Akron/Wayne College and served as a photographer's assistant for Dave Base Photography in Akron.
