Committee to examine criteria

By Kathie Krause
Staff Reporter

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools accreditation committee will visit Austin Peay April 1-4 to examine criteria ranging from institutional purposed organization and administration educational programs and faculty.

APSU President Robert O. Riggs said, "The accreditation study is done once every 10 years to insure that the university offers quality programs to its student.

"While this is a detailed and involved process, accreditation allows us to review progress over the past decade and make plans for further development," he added.

Two years ago, a steering committee, headed by Dr. Ellen Weed, chairwoman and associate professor of sociology, and 11 subcommittees began preparation for accreditation with the circulation of a questionnaire dealing with academic departments during the 1982-83 year.

According to Weed, each department had to complete a self-study by Fall 1982. This involved describing and evaluating the standards outlined by SACS for departmental programs.

The visiting 13-member SACS team is comprised of administrators will meet with Austin Peay faculty department chairmen to examine documents such as policy statements, syllabi of courses, faculty handbooks and budgets.

"Accreditation assures that the institution meets certain standards and certain levels of competence," Weed said.

She added that the students will benefit from the accreditation because transferring credits to and from Austin Peay will be easier. Non-accredited schools don't transfer credits as well.

The accreditation study, which is Austin Peay's fourth since the first in 1950, will not be completed until formal approval is given by the 700-member association, based on the visiting committee's recommendations.

Dr. Pinckney leaves APSU after 13 years

By Allan J. Daniels
Managing Editor

After 13 years at Austin Peay, Dr. Tom Pinckney is leaving the political science department to take the position of Law Clerk with Federal District Judge John Nixon in Nashville.

It's a pretty prestigious position," Pinckney said, adding that "it's a pretty nice plum." Pinckney has been attending Vanderbilt Law School for the last few years and will add a law degree to his collection.

He has already amassed a bachelor's degree, a master's degree and his doctorate in political science. Pinckney received his B.A. from The Citadel and received the other two degrees from UT-Knoxville.

Dr. Vernon Warren, chairman of the political science department, said that he perceived Pinckney's new position as "a kind of executive assistant to a federal judge, doing research for him" and that "the judge would serve as a manager and an editor."

Pinckney will not be replaced as "we are one of the smaller departments on campus," and his position has been reassigned to another department, Warren said.

"The real loss with Tom leaving is not in quantity, but quality," Warren added.

One of the main reasons for Pinckney leaving is that his wife is graduating from Austin Peay and is thinking about getting her Master of Social Work. Warren listed several of Pinckney's achievements at Austin Peay in an interview Friday. Pinckney was one of the founders of the Faculty Senate. "He has served several times and has been an officer."

Pinckney has been prolific and "the reason we have advisor cards for students is Tom Pinckney," Warren added.

Pinckney is currently working on two papers with Glenn Carter in the sociology department concerning law and social work. He is also collaborating with Dr.

Briefly

Recitals scheduled

APSU's Music Department scheduled two senior recitals this week.

Craig Dillingham, tenor, performed Monday, March 26. Mary Wyll, mezzo soprano, will perform at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Senior recitals are held at Clement auditorium, and are free to the public.

WAPX tryouts set

There will be a meeting for students interested in working on Austin Peay's radio station on March 28 at 4 p.m. in room 236 of the Truhers building.

For more information contact the Speech, Communications and Theatre dept. at 648-7738.

Seniors take note

Seniors who plan to graduate by either June 1 or August 22 are required to take the COMP test to graduate.

The test will be administered on the following dates:

April 10 - 9:00 A.M. & 1:00 P.M.

April 11 - 9:00 A.M. & 1:00 P.M.

April 12 - 9:00 A.M.

The seniors will be mailed a bulletin in order to choose a time of preference. The completed forms should be dropped in the boxes in the psychology department and the University Center.

Future RAs needed

There will be an information session for persons interested in RA positions for the 1984-85 academic year on April 2 at 4:30 p.m. in room 313, University Center.

Information packets will be available at that time and in the Office of Student Life (Ellington Hall) beginning on April 3. Deadline for applications is April 6.

Applications sought

Applications are now being accepted from anyone interested in being a Student Orientation Leader this summer.

Qualifications include a 2.0 GPA, excellent communications skills, the ability to work well with other people and a concern for the future of Austin Peay.

Applications are available in the Student Life Office in Ellington Hall, the University Center and the Dean of Students Office in the Browning Building. Deadline for applications is Friday.

Special Olympics run

A practice meet for the Special Olympics Spring Games will take place April 2 at the football stadium. Persons who volunteered to be officials must be at the stadium by 8 a.m.

For further information contact Glenn Carter at 648-7730.

WalkAmerica held

For those who enjoy fun and doing something meaningful at the same time, the March of Dimes WalkAmerica will be taking place on April 29. All students and faculty are encouraged to put on their walking shoes and join the 20 kilometer (12.5 mile) walk to prevent birth defects.

For more information, contact the March of Dimes office at 552-0603 or pick up sponsor forms at WJZM or WARD radio stations.

Renowned author visits AP

Robert Penn Warren to speak

By Molly Jordan
Associate Editor

Robert Penn Warren, renowned 20th century author of local origin, will speak at Austin Peay on April 9th, as Austin Peay's speaker for the Clarksville Bicentennial.

Warren was born in Guthrie, Ky. in 1905 and received his B.A. from Vanderbilt in 1925. He will focus on his early years in this area when he speaks in the Clement auditorium at 8 p.m. on April 9.

Warren has drawn greatly from his Southern heritage and is probably most famous for his Pulitzer prize winning novel, "All the King's Men," a novel based on the rise and fall of Louisiana Senator, Huey P. Long.

Warren has also produced numerous other works of fiction, drama, poetry and criticism and has won virtually every major award given to writers in the United States.

Among his writings are "The Cave," "Who Speaks for The Negro" and "A Plea in Mitigation: Modern poetry and the End of an Era."

He has also been published in such journals as the Sewanee Review, the New York Times Book Review, and the New Republic.

According to one critic, no other American literary figure of the twentieth century has exhibited greater versatility than Robert Penn Warren. "His total accomplishment surpasses that of any living writer."

Warren is presently Professor Emeritus of Yale University and has focused primarily on poetry during his later years.

Warren's visit to AP's campus will begin with a question and answer session in the Gentry Auditorium of the College of Business at 3 p.m. April 9. At 8 p.m., he will speak in the Clement Auditorium after which a Presidential reception will be held in the lobby.

At 9:30 a.m. on April 10, he will attend an autograph party in the Cumberland room, where his books will be available for sale.

Admission for all these events is free and open to the public.

Ellen Weed, Chairperson of the sociology department, on a chapter for a book on Tennessee politics.

Lastly, Pinckney is working with someone from the Vanderbilt Institute of Public Policy on a paper "mainly about the Reagan Administration," and will also submit a paper in a national contest for graduating law students this summer.

Pinckney has also worked in areas politics while at Austin Peay. "I was active in George Grayson's campaign, a few years ago and at one time I ran for Democratic Party Chairman of this county," he said.

"Peggy Knight was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, in 1977 and I advised her."

"Considering the teaching he has done and the resources we have, he has been outstandingly productive. I hope he doesn't leave teaching completely... because he is as fine a teacher as there is," Warren concluded.

Procedures help

By Donna Holder
News Editor

By now, students are settled down from spring break, and academics will again play an important role in their lives until the end of May.

However, a few students are bound to come upon some type of academic difficulty before the quarter's end unaware that some of these could be avoided or minimized by following certain simple procedures.

Should a problem surface during the quarter, students should be aware of a "chain of command" procedure before taking an academic problem straight to the president's office.

Most academic problems can be resolved in step one of the chain which involves the student meeting with the instructor and explaining the problem or misunderstanding.

This is sometimes a difficult step, but with respect on both sides, a solution is usually found.

If the problem is great enough to require it, the chairman of that particular department may be needed. From an objective point of view, the chairman may offer insight and a solution.

If the problem goes unresolved and the department chairman failed to help, the next person to consult is the dean of the college who oversees for the course.

Vice President for Academic Affairs James Sawrey is next in the line of people to consult.

If the problem is of a nature that needs over further attention, President Robert O. Riggs is the final authority to be contacted.

To go straight from the classroom with the problem to Riggs would result in the student being advised to back-track and see the proper persons first.

"This isn't a policy made to discourage students from coming to see me, and if I'm needed to aid in solving a problem, I'm happy to help," Riggs said.

However, grading is a professional judgment of each faculty member and with problems concerning grades or related problems, students must deal with faculty."

ALMOST DONE—APSU President Robert O. Riggs nears the finish line of the Coors "Get in Shape" run on March 8. Riggs, an avid runner, entered the 3 mile competition.

President Reagan compensates vets

President Reagan has signed legislation approving a 3.5 percent rate increase in compensation for service-connected disabled veterans and in dependency and indemnity compensation for widows and children of veterans who died from service-connected causes.

The increase will be effective April 1, 1984 and means an increase in monthly compensation payments VA makes to 46,740 Tennessee veterans and their survivors, according to Nashville VA Regional Office director Robert Bielak.

He said the legislation also increases benefits for a few service-connected blinded veterans who also suffer from service-connected deafness. In addition, it increases the membership of the VA Board of Veterans' Appeals in Washington, D.C., from 50 to 65 to ease an ever-increasing caseload and expedite appeals.

Disabled veterans and survivors affected by this legislation will receive their increased benefits for April in their May 1 checks, Bielak noted.

The bill also extends for five years the VA program which helps finance state veterans cemeteries. Since its inception in 1960, the State Cemetery Grants Program has awarded matching funds totaling $4.1 million to six states for establishment, expansion or improvement of state veterans' cemeteries.

Additional information can be obtained on this subject and other related benefits between the hours of 7:45 a.m. and 4:15 p.m., Monday through Friday, by calling a toll-free number.

AP program goes Mexican Learning by living is the idea behind a summer educational program offered by Austin Peay State University this year.

Students signing up for the program will travel to Mexico Aug. 10 through Sept. 10, living with a Mexican family and studying at the Center for Bilingual Multicultural Studies in Cuernavaca, Morales, Mexico.

Dr. Ramon Magrans, assistant professor of languages and literature at Austin Peay, said the month-long program is open to anyone over 17 years of age.

The program will allow students to gain proficiency in Spanish language, particularly competency in speaking and understanding spoken Spanish.

However, the social, cultural and educational life found in Mexico will be a focus of the program, too, as participants will live with a Mexican family while in the country and will take part in numerous special activities.

Nine to 12 quarter hours of academic credit are offered through the program sponsored by Austin Peay, Magrans said. "Prior knowledge of Spanish isn't required," he added. "When a student arrives at the Center, a short oral test to assess speaking proficiency is given."

The student then is grouped with others at the same level with native Spanish-speaking teachers working with an individualized type of language instruction. Magrans said no more than five students will be in any class.

In addition, various field trips through Mexico will be taken on the weekends with social and cultural events such as ballet, concerts and symposia scheduled for Wednesdays.

The nine-hour program is $1,500 which covers tuition, room, board, transportation and airfare from Nashville. Deadline for enrollment is April 30.

For more information about the summer study program in Mexico, telephone Magrans, (615) 648-7891.

POINT OF VIEW

School prayer amendment falls short

A constitutional amendment to 'put prayer back in school' was voted on last week by the Senate. Sponsored by President Reagan and the first time in a while, there was 100% attendance of Senators on the day of the vote. Many observers have noted that the timing of the amendment's introduction was consistent with the President's impeccable political intuition.

The President's sponsorship and considerable lobbying efforts, in concert with Sen. Baker's promotional efforts presented a remarkable challenge to Democrats, and to liberals and moderates of both parties, in terms of party loyalty and job security.

Those who voted 'no' are to be commended for political courage and good sense. The school prayer issue has received a great deal of media attention, quite often polarized; and a vote of 'no' under the circumstances set forth in some quarters is congruent with an anti-religious stance.

With the school prayer issue, however, this is not the case. Vocal prayer was rejected chiefly on the basis that it represents an unknown quality.

Who would compose the 'non-denominational' prayer? Who would insure that children who did not want to pray, or whose parents did not want them to participate in organized school prayer would be protected from the intrusion of others' religious ideals?

There was too little time allotted to answer questions of this nature in the congressional debate that preceded the vote. A vote 'no' in this instance was wise.

A piece of legislation of this nature, if it has a hope of state ratification, must surely be more thoroughly expounded, and concentrated guidelines for the protection of non-participant minorities set forth.

Driving it Home

By Vianne Hurt

Associate Editor

introduced by Sen. Howard Baker, the measure fell 11 votes short of the 2/3 majority needed for Senate passage.

No one took the prayer amendment lightly. A poll taken before the amendment's introduction indicated that 80% of all Americans favored some sort of school prayer. It is notable that for

For 2,490 the war isn't over yet

And you say that the battle is over/
And finally the world is at peace/
You mean no one is dying/
And mothers don't weep/
Or it's not in the papers at least.

John Denver

John Denver didn't know how right he was when he recorded the above lyrics a few years ago. There are 2,490 Americans, the war in Southeast Asia is still going on.

After roaming the length of the memorial taking photographs, I looked up the name I had come for.

While taking a photograph of the name, I made the acquaintance of Vic Dahlquist. Vic is one of the Vietnam Vets who volunteer their time to help people locate the names of a friend or loved ones.

"Were you over there?" Vic asked, noticing my field jacket.

"No, I missed it by a little more than a year," I replied.

I looked around, and could see that many of the men combing the walls for names were Vietnam Vets. Some were walking with the aid of crutches.

I felt like taking my jacket off. Even six years of service in peacetime made me feel like I had no right to wear olive drab.

We were talking about the push in Congress to get the resolution passed, and how some Congressmen were not backing the measure. Vic told me that I could pick up a copy of the resolution at the booth near the entrance.

We were interrupted by a family taking a photo of a name on the panel near us. After the shutter had been clicked, Vic walked over with a white sheet of paper and a nub of pencil.

"Would you like a rubbing of the name to take with you?" Vic asked the family, who looked old enough to have been parents of one of the Vietnam soldiers.

After getting an affirmative reply, Vic placed the paper over the name and almost lovingly rubbed the pencil over the area of the engraving. Eventually the name appeared in white against a black background.

"You do this for everyone?" I asked the volunteer.

"Our job is supposed to be just to help them find the names, not to give the rubbings, but we all do it," Vic replied. "We even use a ladder to get to the high ones."

"It's like giving them a piece of the wall to take home with them, like they gave a part of themselves, their sons, to our country."

After getting Vic's name and a pamphlet on the memorial I turned to leave, then looked down the wall to see him doing another rubbing for another family.

I not only got a copy of the resolution and a list of Representatives that were in favor of it (Only Albert Gore of the Tennessee members of the house has put his name to it), I also signed my name to the petition they had.

More than 125,000 names will be sent to Congress, to urge passage of the measure. Seventy panels contain 57,939 names in granite. They are all just numbers, something almost unreal to many people.

Almost unreal except to the families and friends of the 2,490 men that have yet to come home.

For them, the war isn't over yet.

Through the Viewfinder

By B.J. Taylor

This I learned while in our nation's capital over Spring Break. On a cloudy Saturday afternoon I went to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial to find a name among the 57,939 inscribed in the granite panels.

Besides the name I learned something that I had not known before. I learned that there is a resolution in both houses of Congress demanding that the President force the governments in the Vietnam area to account for the 2,490 men still listed as Missing in Action or Prisoners of War.

The policy

The All State is the official student newspaper of Austin Peay State University. It is published every Wednesday of the academic year, except during final exams and holidays.

News information should be sent to The All State, Box 8504, APSU, Clarksville, TN 37064 or brought to Ellington Hall South, room 104 by the Friday before the Wednesday printing. Advertising material should also be sent Friday before the Wednesday printing.

Letters to the editor are welcome and should be less than 300 words and be subject to editing for brevity or clarity.

All editorial are the official opinion of The All State except letters and columns. The Editorial Board approves all editorials.

Credit card question confronts editor

For those of you that managed to get away during Spring Break, congratulations and welcome back! For the rest of you, all I can say is, I'm sorry.

Down the Drane

By Allan J. Daniels

As you read this be aware that this is a first. I am actually doing something ahead of time and not waiting until the last minute. I'm referring to the fact that I am writing this two days before deadline and not waiting until Friday afternoon or later.

As most of you are aware, college life is full of decision-making. Decisions range from the important, such as choosing your major, to the trivial, such as deciding what to order for lunch.

Well, the quarter is barely under way and already I am confronted with decisions. In the last week I have received four different credit card applications.

Three of the four tell me that I have already been accepted, and that all I have to do is fill out a form and send it in. It sounds easy enough, especially when you consider that when I was still part of the work force and actively sought such things I met with no success.

My first impulse was to say, "Hell yes!" and send the forms in. I tried to tell myself it would only be to establish my credit record.

The only problem with that is that I find it difficult to lie to myself. (Not impossible, merely difficult.) Two of these applications were sent to me by gasoline companies, and the thought of how easy it would be to get some decent tires for my poor little '64 Chevy kept running through my mind.

Thus, the question that came to my mind then was, "Can I trust myself with one of these little pieces of plastic?"

I still haven't decided on that, but I have until June or so to make up my mind.

College is very much a part of the real world as in the real world you are responsible for your actions, which includes debts incurred by the use of a credit card.

I realize that many of the students here already have credit cards and some of this will not apply. However, responsibility does not stop with your credit record.

Responsibility begins every time you accept it. If you learn nothing else while at the Peay you have still learned something very worthwhile.

This doctrine of responsibility can be applied to the many facets of college life. Using The All State as an example, if I accept an assignment to do a story I should be responsible enough to complete it.

Why did you come to college? To answer that question you must understand responsibility to yourself.

I hope this does not come across as a lecture, it is only intended as food for thought. I have at times subscribed to the philosophy of yielding to temptation, and I am in no way qualified to lecture people on responsibility.

If, by chance, you should hear of a certain managing editor being sent to a debtor's colony, then you know what happened.

Yes to daycare

To The Editor:

I am a 25 year old first quarter freshman at Austin Peay and very impressed with your paper. I'm taking this opportunity to speak up about our daycare issue.

Being the mother of 2 preschoolers, I am in favor of bringing a daycare center to the campus. It would be convenient for most parents (I leave my children at a preschool in Springfield) to be able to drop their children nearby, saves time and gas.

They'd be on hand if one of their children becomes ill and worried mothers could check up on them. I would venture to say that a majority of A.P.'s older students have small children deposited at daycare centers throughout the area.

Wouldn't it be simpler to bring them all together? The center could even hire Elementary education majors part-time. It would be a terrific experience for them (or change their majors) Thanks for letting me speak out. Keep up the good work.

Lisa D.
Room 104

P.S. I would like to take this opportunity to say thanks to Kevin and the rest of the yearbook staff. As a part-time, small town DJ at a local radio station, I sometimes feel as though no one out there is listening and thanks to their phone call on Sat., March 3rd, at least I know that there is someone out there.

So thanks, guys, and keep up the hard work and don't forget to tune in.

Visiting companies to conduct interviews

Night of One Acts opens tonight

The speech, communication and theatre department will present a night of one-act plays tonight at 8 p.m. in the Truhers Theatre.

"An Evening of One-Acts" consists of 3 short plays produced in a directing class taught last fall by John Griffin, associate professor of speech, communications & theatre.

Griffin said, "Each student in the directing class was required to select a play, cast, rehearse and present it."

"A Pair of Lunatics", "Spell #7" and "Diary of Adam and Eve" were chosen to be presented as an AP Playhouse major season offering," he added.

"A Pair of Lunatics", written by W.R. Walikes, and directed by Jim Townsend, is a comedy-drama that takes place in a mental institution.

Ellis Adames and Lee Bonner star in this first production.

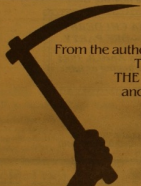

"Spell #7", is Ntozake Shange's dramatic play about racial awareness. It is directed by Angela Love.

JoAnn Pettus, Sandra Pettus, Leroy Everett and Liz Jenkins are featured in the second production.

"Diary of Adam and Eve" is based on a Mark Twain story, "The Apple Tree!" It is a comedy-drama, despoiting the story of the first people on earth.

Directed by John Ignacio, "Diary of Adam and Eve" stars Ellis Adames and Amanda Hudson. Jimmy Leighty plays the snake who disrupts life in the Garden of Eden.

The plays are scheduled to begin tonight and run through March 31. Admission is $2.00. For more information, telephone 648-7379.

Clarksville theater history explored

A 1975 graduate of Austin Peay State University is researching Clarksville's theater history for a paper she hopes will become a book.

Susan Herrington, Clarksville, began the intense fact-finding project last March as a Bicentennial project, upon the suggestion of Dr. Joe Filipp, chairman of the speech, communication and theater department at Austin Peay.

Filipp urged her to combine her interest in theater costume with her English background and love for writing to compile facts and write a research paper covering the very earliest days of theater productions, in this area, up to present day productions.

When Miss Herrington began her research, she found no books or collection of facts about theater history in the Clarksville area. She relied heavily on letters, interviews and telephone calls she made from heads found in the APSU library.

In a Feb. 12 letter-to-the-editor in The Leaf-Chronicle, Miss Herrington appealed to the public for more specific historical fact and information.

"Response has been tremendous," she said. "The community has been very supportive as has Austin Peay's speech, communication and theater department."

A lead from a local woman led to dating the first paid theatrical performance in 1797 while Miss Herrington's previous information was limited to 1819. According to a diary entry, two men came down the Cumberland by boat on June 10, 1797 and performed "Punch in the Devil" in Clarksville for $6 a ticket.

Miss Herrington said this was probably a marionette performance.

Last fall Miss Herrington spoke with a representative from the Tennessee Arts Commission who suggested she apply for a grant enabling her to turn her paper into a book.

Miss Herrington feels like the time is right for such a book complimenting Clarksville's Bicentennial celebration and the state's "Tennessee '86 — An American Homecoming" community celebrations.

She said she would complete the project even if funds aren't made available, but added, "It might take a little longer."

Miss Herrington is an adult education teacher at Fort Campbell who likes to stay busy.

An expert seamstress, she has done costuming for Austin Peay plays, including the recent production of "Nude With Violin." She has sewn for Rexy and summer Kiwanis productions, also.

Telephone Miss Herrington, 648-4311, with theater history, information or trivia.

Professor awarded

An Austin Peay State University faculty member has been chosen for a Phi Delta Kappa professional educator's society international seminar scholarship.

Dr. Helen Heitgerd, assistant professor of education, has received the Gerald Howard Read International Seminar Scholarship to attend any PDK International seminar.

Seminars for which Ms. Heitgerd is eligible will be held in Guatemala, Australia, China, Russia and Alaska. The culture of each country and its educational system are the focus of the seminars.

Seminar scholarships are awarded to PDK members who have demonstrated leadership in education and service to the organization. Ms. Heitgerd was organizer of the PDK chapter at Austin Peay in 1980 and served as its first president.

She currently serves as area coordinator for western Tennessee and has aided in organizing a new PDK chapter at Tennessee State University. She presently is working to establish a chapter at Jackson.

In addition, Ms. Heitgerd helped organize the first Australian PDK chapter in Canberra, Australia, while she was a visiting lecturer in Armidale, New South Wales, Australia, in 1982.

The director of Austin Peay's PDK National Institute on Criteria and Evaluation of the Master Teacher this spring, Ms. Heitgerd joined the APSU faculty in 1978.

Physics teachers to meet

College and high school physics teachers from throughout the state will meet at Austin Peay State University April 14.

The one-day meeting for the Tennessee section of the American Association of Physics Teachers will be highlighted by presentation of the Award for Outstanding High School Teacher of Physics in Tennessee.

M.R. Mayfield, APSU physics professor, is chairman of the Tennessee section. He said the meeting will involve presentation of eight to 10 scholarly papers on physics, including one by APSU student Millie Horie of Clayton, Mo.

AAPT President Joe Myers of Chicago, Ill., will be guest speaker for the meeting.

Dr. Williams will have completed his sixteenth year at APSU this spring. Author of several articles of professional interest, he is currently promoting the Comprehensive Education Reform Act of 1984.

Williams elected again

Dr. Allan S. Williams, professor of education at Austin Peay State University, has been re-elected president to the Tennessee Professors of Educational Administration at their spring meeting in Nashville. Dr. Williams has been active in the work of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, as well in many community activities.

The Tennessee Professors of Educational Administration is an association of higher education professors. They have dedicated their efforts to the training and improvement of school administrators throughout the state. They maintain close relationships with governmental officials at all levels, state and local in cooperative efforts to improve the quality of local schools.

Track clears first hurdle

By Jerry Ingram
Sports Editor

Austin Peay men's and women's track teams competed in the Morehouse Budweiser Light Relays in Atlanta, Ga., March 17. A few members of the team managed to place.

"Overall the team performance was not as good as expected," said APSU coach Mike Howard. "The weather also played a part in the results."

A cool overcast day prevented some athletes from doing their best.

"The overall results could have been improved with just a little better mental preparation," Howard said. "There were some good signs at this meet, however, and I hope that we can use them to build on for the rest of the season."

Mark Burdall was the only first place finisher in the meet for Austin Peay as he won the shotput with a throw of 49-1.

Marvella Williams finished second in the 100 meter dash for the women with a time of 11.8.

Stacey Thomas placed third in the 100 meter hurdles for the men with 14.8.

The APSU teams also had several fourth place finishes including three relay events.

The 400-meter relay teams for both men and women finished in fourth place amid tough competition. The men's team, which dashed through the relay in 42 seconds, consists of Willie Armstrong, Michael Henderson, William McElroy and Randall Fayne. The women's 400-meter squad, with Patricia Avery, Marvella Williams, Sophia McClellan and Tonya Tragher leading the way, placed fourth with a time of 47.4 seconds.

The women's 1600-meter squad also placed fourth at 3:50. That team includes Williams, Avery, Cynthia Miller and Tammy Givens.

The only other fourth place winner was Mary Johnson in the women's 800-meter run. She ran the distance in 2:17.

The next meet for Austin Peay will be held March 31 at Municipal Stadium.

INTRAMURALS

Intramural Recreation would like to begin the 1984 spring quarter with extended hours for recreational swimming. The hours will be from Monday-Thursday, 2-4 p.m. and 7-9 p.m., also 12-4 p.m. Saturday and 2-4 p.m. on Sunday.

The rest of the IM schedule is as follows: Water basketball (rosters available now in IM office) captain's meeting April 4 at 7 p.m. in room 107 of the IM complex with play beginning on April 9.

Tennis coach has the key to success

The key to success. Every coach has a different formula for it, and Austin Peay State University women's tennis coach Cheryl Holt is no exception.

"We'll need to be a lot more aggressive in our play, know our own abilities and limitations and capitalize on them," Holt said.

Holt, who's team posted a 5-7 record in 1983 and tied for 5th place in the OVC, has every player returning from last year's team.

"We should be better than last year because we have everyone coming back and they have experience under their belt," said Holt. "I think we'll be a lot stronger because of this."

The team consists of Clarksville natives Miriam Brown and Diane Koch, both sophomores, and Sandy Cross and Cynthia McGuffee, both juniors. Senior Elana Callis and sophomore Theresa Kleynhans complete the team. Kleynhans was recruited from South Africa. "We expect a lot from her," Holt said.

Callis, the only senior, is from Springfield, Tennessee. "We are essentially a young team," said Holt. "We'll make mistakes but we just hope to improve our record," said Holt.

Holt believes that the team's strength rests in the fact that, "everyone gets along with and likes each other. Every girl may not be extremely talented but they are every supportive of one another. They care about each other and think that's important."

Another advantage is because money is lacking. Holt has attained players who really enjoy playing. They are not only here to play tennis but to pursue academic interests as well.

Holt signed no recruits this year primarily to the fact that everyone returns from last year's team.

"We'll definitely sign some players next year," said Holt. "The indoor tennis courts should not only help us with practicing but also help in recruiting."

"We've had one good week of practice outdoors before the weather turned bad so we haven't had a lot of practice time on the court."

The primary weakness exists mentally in some of the players, not physically as would be expected. Tennis, being an individual sport, relies on intimidation and self-confidence to differentiate between success and failure.

"We'll have to teach our bottom three to have patience and to mentally toughen themselves," said Holt. "It helps to go out and have a positive attitude. They have to get some confidence. It comes with mental toughness and a lot of practice. We have some players who don't have self-confidence but they'll get some. It comes with playing time."

Holt feels if the team will capitalize on key areas and concentrate on improving their game, the record will improve with it. "We have to believe in ourselves and have confidence in our ability," she said. "It is one thing to be beat. But it is another thing to beat yourself."

An unexpected pregnancy is a hard thing to face.

Especially while you're in school.

Finding out about an unwanted pregnancy is a confusing and frightening experience. You probably don't know who you can confide in or where to turn. You're afraid everyone will find out. You're afraid for your future. You need to know who has somewhere to turn to, someone you can trust.

That's why we're here.

At The Crisis Pregnancy Support Center, we listen, we understand, and we can help. We can provide the companionship, support, and assistance you need during such a difficult time. We can help you weigh your options so you won't be facing the tough decisions alone. And if you're not sure if you're pregnant, we offer a free pregnancy test which can tell you.

Everything is kept completely confidential. No hassles, no lectures. You don't even need an appointment.

We realize that an unexpected pregnancy is difficult enough already. And we just want to help.

Academic requirements questioned

Is it fair? I'm talking about proposal number 48 — an Eligibility rule from the NCAA Council that states that in order to receive a college athletic scholarship, a high school senior must have completed at least 11 academic courses including at least three in English, two in Mathematics, two in natural or physical science (including at least one laboratory class, if offered by the high school) as certified on the high school transcript or by official correspondence, as well as a 700 combined score on the SAT verbal and Math sections of a 15 composite score on the ACT.

The intention of this rule is to establish a specific core curriculum for which a student must present a minimum grade-point average of 2.0 in high school as well as a minimum SAT or ACT score for initial eligibility at a Division I member institution like Austin Peay.

Most of the black universities complain that this rule discriminates against black students, since the SAT and the ACT tests are geared toward the language of the white upper-class.

"We are selling the black students short, they have the ability to make 15 on the ACT and 700 on the SAT. They have overcome so much since the Martin Luther King Jr. days and I know they can overcome this and succeed," said Austin Peay assistant coach Greg Johnson who is conducting research on this controversial issue.

Time Out!

By Jerry Ingram
Sports Editor

What it comes down to is the possibility that a great athlete somewhere won't have the opportunity to play college ball because he didn't take his high school academic days seriously.

"The athletes are the ones that will be getting hurt," Johnson replied.

There are superior athletes around that think throwing a baseball, running a football or shooting a basketball is the only thing in the world.

"It's all going to end sometime; you'd better be ready when it does," said Johnson. It can be frustration that leads to that young person's problems, if he's not.

It seems like on most university campuses the coaches' only concern is with themselves, not with the young athlete. As long as he can help the coach win some games that can lead him to more prestige and money, he doesn't care one bit if the athlete receives an education or not. The coaches need to stop recruiting the young players that can only perform well in athletics but poorly in the class rooms.

"Their academic degree is the number one thing, we discuss when we are recruiting," said Johnson.

Some athletes make it to college and are willing to do the work. They just need some help. What this university needs is a tutoring program.

"The university needs to develop a tutoring program that any student on this campus can attend without paying. I will be happy to get it started. I know some ways that we can raise funds. I know that the athletic department asks from the administration all the time.

I looked up the overall grade-point averages of undergraduate male students to compare with our guys and found out that it is only 2.2. Tutoring can help raise that, and improve the university prestige. Tutors will enable Austin Peay to keep more students, and that is more money for the faculty and everybody. I'm thinking about our guys, it's a visual ideal, it really would be beneficial for everybody.

Indeed.

"Without ideals, without effort, without scholarships, without philosophical continuity, there is no such thing as education," said educator Abraham Flexner.

Coach Miller's golf team hoping to repeat 1983 title

At first glance, Austin Peay State University's Golf goals seem modest. Yet, at second glance, these goals also seem rather ambitious.

"Our first goal is to defend the Tennessee Intercollegiate Championship successfully," said athletic director and golf coach, Johnny Miller.

"Austin Peay has won the TIC three times but has never defended it successfully.

"Secondly, realistically I believe we can place in the top three in the OVC tournament. I feel like we have the potential to be the upset winner, especially with the fact the tournament is being held in Tennessee this year.

"I believe we have the type schedule which will provide ample preparation for the Ohio Valley Conference championships," said Miller.

Austin Peay also appears to have the talent. Brad Van Kirk returns for his fourth year as the Governor's No. 1 player.

In averaging 75.5 strokes per 18 holes last year, Van Kirk earned All-OVC honors by finishing second in the TIC tourney, losing in a playoff.

"I feel like Brad offers us a lot of consistency in the No. 1 spot," said Miller. "He's the type of player you can count on to do well in every tournament."

Last season's No. 2 player, Harry Tarsley Jr. has also returned. He averaged 71.7 strokes per 18 holes last spring and was all-state.

He also was involved in the TIC playoff, finishing third, despite missing two rounds because of illness.

"Had he been healthy last year during the OVC, I think we could have finished in the top four (the Govs finished sixth)," said Miller.

Miller is hopeful that the Governors have been bolstered by two newcomers.

Tom Poe transferred to Austin Peay last fall from Ball State and competed during the Junior College. He finished 23rd last year in the National Senior College Championships and should provide the Governors immediate strength.

Senior Paul Iig and sophomore Kevin Cariveau appear to be the front-runners for the No. 5 and No. 6 spots.
