Norris sets winter goals

BY ALLAN J. DANIELS

Calling fall 1984 a "stabilizing quarter" Keith Norris, SGA president, said that the SGA is "going to try to be more aggressive this quarter."

One goal Norris mentioned for the winter quarter is a revision of the SGA Constitution.

"Wayne Moesely rewrote the constitution two years ago and it was adopted by that senate," Norris said.

One problem not inherent in the constitution is that it is not clear whether the copies furnished to the senators are current. Another area that will be looked at is the length of senators' terms, Norris said.

"We're going to revamp the tribunal," Norris said listing another goal for the winter quarter. He also mentioned that "the associate justices will be brought up for debate Thursday night."

Norris said that he would like to see the Student Tribunal become more involved in the disciplining of students.

The third goal mentioned by Norris concerned a new group on campus. "We're going to get the BACCHUS organization going." BACCHUS is an acronym for Beast Alcohol Consciousness. Concerning the Health of University Students, and was recognized by the SGA at their last meeting.

Norris who will appoint the president, vice president and secretary for the organization, said "anyone who wants to be involved in that should contact me."

Commenting on last quarter Norris said "we didn't undertake any new projects, we just did a lot of little things." Putting together the student discount cards, which should be available in the near future, was one activity noted by Norris.

The student discount card is essentially a list of area businesses who agree to give students with valid IDs a discount on their particular product or service.

Norris also said that all of the standing university committees have been filled and that "the SGA was active on Homecoming activities." SGA members participated on the various committees and also held a cookout that week.

The SGA also allocated money from the Student Activity Fund during the fall quarter.

$97,000 raised for endowment

APSU officials report they are nearly one-third of the way to raising $312,500 to establish a Chair of Excellence here.

Wendell H. Gilbert, vice president for development, said the community, alumni and area residents have shown their pride in the 57-year-old university by making gifts and pledges of $97,000 since the campaign in October.

"All of us at Austin Peay are thrilled with the response we are getting about this campaign," Gilbert said, "and we're confident we will have a Chair of Excellence at Austin Peay."

The institution must raise $312,500 by March 1 to qualify for the state's Chairs of Excellence Endowment program. According to legislation passed last spring, gifts to the university will be matched, dollar-for-dollar, up to $625,000 by the state.

A boost to APSU's fund drive came in December when the State Board of Regents gave its nod of approval for a Center of Excellence in the Creative Arts.

The chair and the proposed Center of Excellence in the Creative Arts will work hand-in-hand to attract students.

"Both proposals focus on one of Austin Peay's major strengths, its strong core curriculum," Gilbert said. "Our proposal for a Center of Excellence in the Arts was ranked second among 14 proposals on the SBR's priority list to present to the Tennessee Higher Education Commission."

The Centers of Excellence and the Chairs of Excellence programs were developed for higher education as part of Governor Lamar Alexander's Better Schools Program. Four-year universities in the SBR and the University of Tennessee systems compete for funding of Centers of Excellence; Chairs of Excellence Endowments of $625,000 in state matching money, however, were established equally for each university.

36 APSU students named in Scholarship 1985 Who's Who endorsed Outstanding achievement in academics, leadership and community service has led 36 Austin Peay State University students to be named in the 1985 edition of Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges.

Those Austin Peay seniors, selected from more than 1,500 institutions of higher learning, include: Sara Britz, Dina Broome, Robert Brown, Lori Davidson, Isabella DeAas.

William Dickson, Dindi Draper, Janet Good, Mark Hamilton, Cynthia Harmon.

Verna Isaacs, Kirk Keathley, Thomas Kelly, Leigh Ann King-Davis, Thomas Lee.

Sandra Manners, Karen Margulies, Laurie Linda Tesar, Mark Tipton.

Charlene Vinson, McWhorter, Ellen Naab, Pamela Norfleet.

James O'Neil, Craig O'Shoney, Debra Potter, Rosemary Rogers, Milby Rorie.

Kevin Souza, Maria Speed, Maria Talbot,

Reagan Walker, Treva Walker, Dee Anne Warman, Susan Wilson and Michael Wright.

Those selected for inclusion in the annual directory were nominated by a campus committee and were chosen on the basis of academic achievement, community service, leadership and potential for continued success.

Clarksville's Hilldale Civitan Club recently endorsed support of the Billy Thompson Memorial Scholarship Fund at Austin Peay State University as an ongoing project.

The endowed scholarship fund was established by University officials in September to honor Thompson, a professor in the business/office administration department. His 15-year tenure at the University ended in August when he died of a heart attack.

Thompson, who participated in numerous University, community and civic activities, was an active member of the Hilldale Civitan organization, serving as president in 1982-83.

He also served as 1983-84 Valley District Lieutenant Governor for Civitan.

Students eligible for the scholarship must have attained junior status, be enrolled full-time in the bachelor of business administration program, maintain a 3.0 grade point average and should exemplify those qualities which characterized Billy Thompson.

Faculty members in APSU's College of Business and Professional Programs, in conjunction with Hilldale Civitan Club, will select the scholarship recipient each spring.

Selection also will be based on financial need with preference given to Clarksville and Montgomery County residents.

For more information about the scholarship, contact Dr. Harriett McQueen, chairwoman of APSU's business education and office administration department, 648-7788.

To contribute to the scholarship fund, telephone APSU's development office, 648-7127.

Miss APSU Pageant to be held:

17 contestants entered

Fifteen women will compete for the title of Miss APSU at Austin Peay State University Feb. 1.

Lynn Takacs, student director of the Miss APSU Scholarship Pageant, said entrants are preparing for the 7 p.m. pageant, which will be held in Clement Auditorium. Competition will be in talent, interview, evening gown and swimming suit. The winner will advance to the Miss Tennessee/Miss America pageant to be held later this year.

Entrants include Regina Athnos, Crystal Cooksey, Michelle Crowder, Leticia June Denney, Judith Colene Gannaway, Amand Kaye Hudaan, Jacqueline Elise Jenkins, Teressa Lynn Landers, Lisa Aileen Morgan.

Carol Jean Royle, Stephanie Rupp, Kristin Anne Shores, Stacy Annette Turner, Lucy Whittinghill, and Lou Willis.

The pageant is sponsored by Austin Peay's Student Government Association and this year is set to the theme, "Puttin' On The Ritz."

Placement provides student employment

Housed in the Emerald Hill Alumni Center, the Austin Peay State University Placement Services are available to provide free assistance to freshmen and seniors alike.

According to Jana Rollins, assistant director of placement, the primary objective of the placement office "to help seniors, recent graduates, and active alumni achieve full-time professional employment."

Help in obtaining part-time employment for current Austin Peay students is also provided.

Even though the 1982-83 job market continued to be tight and very competitive, Austin Peay graduates managed to find either full or part-time employment in significant numbers, Rollins said, adding that the outlook for the coming year is as good or better than in recent years.

Free professional help in finding employment is provided for a full year following graduation.

In order to take full advantage of the job placement services, prospective applicants should contact the Placement Office no later than six months before graduation.

Also provided are a student data sheet and a credential release authorization.

Applicants are advised to complete the data sheet and sign the credential release authorization. The applicant must request in writing that his transcript be sent from the Admissions and Records Office to the Placement Office.

The packet includes blank rating sheets which the student hands selected instructors for completion.

A professional resume is also required by the Placement Office. Reference material to aid in the preparation of a resume is provided.

Once the job seeker had returned all required materials to the Placement Office, placement personnel are then in a position to act in the student's behalf.

In addition to special help, tailored to the individual student, other services are provided by way of on-campus recruiting and the annual Career Fair.

The 1985 Career Fair is to be held Feb. 20 in the University Center. The Career Fair is attended by representatives of major corporations, governmental agencies, school districts and area businesses.

JESSE YAWEH:

Presley: a dead man and his music

Most of you probably didn't care to celebrate Elvis Presley's 50th birthday yesterday. And most of you know, but don't care, that Elvis Presley wasn't around to celebrate his half-century. He died in his Memphis mansion in August 1977, weighing 255 pounds, with a half-dozen drugs in his system.

It's not very easy to defend such a man, a man who had a certain talent but let it be deadened by leeches and yes-men, who began his career as a symbol of healthy rebellion but ended it playing Las Vegas. Elvis Presley's life and career represent for many people the ultimate American kitsch, but he didn't start out that way.

It's a familiar story: a truck driver from Mississippi became the first white rock star under the guidance of a

This past weekend, due to a lack of funds, I spent more time than normal watching television. During this unusual binge of video intake I was confronted with an abundance of coverage of Tommy Burnett.

Tommy Burnett, you may remember, is the state representative who was sentenced to 18 months in a federal prison for charges stemming from an investigation into his income tax returns.

Interestingly enough, he was re-elected while serving his sentence. Burnett was released Friday and promptly scheduled a press conference for Saturday.

Excerpts from this press conference made all the local Nashville news programs. He was also scheduled to be the guest on Teddy Bear's Nashville, Sunday night.

WTVM also had a news special featuring Burnett scheduled for sometime Sunday. While all the coverage of Burnett is somewhat understandable, what stirred me to write this column was Burnett's attitude.

Burnett stated that he did not think people convicted of white-collar crimes should be made to serve prison sentences. He felt that some type of public community service would be more appropriate.

He gave several examples of service that could substitute and stressed that it should be public enough to cause embarrassment.

However, it seemed to me that Burnett was reacting in this manner because of the embarrassment he suffered because of his prison term.

I dislike this attitude and what it represents. The fact that it comes from someone who plays a role in the writing of our laws makes it that much more disturbing.

If Burnett chose to do so, and if enough of his fellow legislators agreed with him, he could draft legislation that would penalize white-collar crime with community service rather than with prison terms.

In a judicial system that already seems to favor those with the financial resources to hire better lawyers, typically those who commit white-collar crimes, this would be the icing on the cake.

Of course we must realize that the cake consists of two layers and that the bottom layer does not get any of this icing.

Campus needs communication

Has anyone else noticed the complete lack of communication around campus this year? There have always been lapses, but there have been far too many incidents that weren't known until they had already happened.

I am speaking of tryouts for Governor Peay and for the baseball team and of all the recent elections: Homecoming, SGA and the mock elections.

This is my third year here, and for two of those three years, I wanted to try out for the baseball team. (The other year, I didn't attend when they had tryouts.) The first year I went to talk to the coach on the first day of classes after Christmas break, and I found out that the tryouts were held the previous fall.

Being from a modern school in the North, I had never heard of this. I later found out that they also have football tryouts in the spring. (Maybe that is why APSU sports haven't had any really competitive teams for quite a while.)

Awile back, there was a controversy about the selection of the Governor Peay mascot. The one selected is good, but the tryouts only had three people show up. In both of these situations, no prior notice was given. How can the school possibly hope to have the best they can if they can't choose from all of the students here?

I have no idea when the SGA elections were originally held, but I did see the signs up for the two runoff elections, and managed to vote in that one. For the Homecoming queen and the mock elections, I never heard anything about the elections except for the results. (For Homecoming, I'm not sure they even had elections!)

I think it's high time the school publicized some of these events before they happened, so that all the students are able to participate. We should always strive to improve our position, instead of settling for what we have, which is less than average for the most part compared to other places in the country.

record producer named Sam Phillips, who had started making a name for himself recording black musicians like B.B. King and Howlin' Wolf. Starting in 1954, Phillips and Presley cut a series of magical, pristine records—"That's All Right," "Blue Moon of Kentucky," "Mystery Train"—that proved that more links white and black music than separates them.

It would be simplistic to claim Presley was a "white man who sang like a black man." This is what you'll read in all the best family newspapers as they grope to make Presley comprehensible to that vast sprawling cancer known as "Middle America," and it is wrong. It ignores the basic aesthetic of rock music, and indeed of all pop art: sincerity is not always a virtue. That is why I think Bruce Springsteen, for example, a grossly overrated artist. He is obviously sincere, but there is no sense of freedom, of fun, of sly complicity.

These virtues Elvis Presley possessed, and these made him great. Presley was not trying to sing like a black man, he was singing like a white man trying to sing like a black man, and finding the whole thing faintly absurd. Black artists like Bobby Bland, Robert Johnson and Howlin' Wolf all derived their power from the apparent artlessness of their music. Elvis Presley could only approximate that artless ease, and so he sang from the heart, but what was in his heart was a load of racial envy because he could never be as free as the black

Harvey Pittel Saxophone Quartet

Ranges from Bach to Miller

The Harvey Pittel Saxophone Quartet will perform tonight at the Clement Auditorium at 8 p.m. The concert is the second in the Clarksville Community Concert season.

The Harvey Pittel Saxophone Quartet brings to the concert stage one of the world's most unique musical experiences.

Combining the subtlety and finesse of the finest string quartet, the coloristic variety of the woodwind quintet, and the power and brilliance of the brass quintet, these four young virtuosos present programs of virtually limitless variety, ranging from J.S. Bach to the swing style of Glenn Miller.

The saxophone quartet is a standard classical chamber music ensemble originated by the great French virtuoso, Marcel Mule, in the 1920's; it has since spread throughout the world. The Harvey Pittel Saxophone Quartet is the pre-eminent quartet of its kind in the United States today.

Attendance to the concert is open to Community Concert Association members and full-time APSU students at no charge.

TPAC to present Delightful Denmark

Photographer and film producer, John Roberts, will personally present and narrate his full-length, all color travel film, Delightful Denmark at the Tennessee Performing Arts Center on January 12 at 2:30 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Delightful Denmark is being presented in place of the show originally scheduled for this date, Bibbieland, narrated by Dr. Charles Forber Taylor. Dr. Taylor is not well and has canceled the tour.

A nation of slightly more than 5,000,000 people, the Danes pride themselves in everything—from art to design—from the beauty of their island retreats to the excellence of their educational

As John Roberts discovered, a visit to Denmark is sheer pleasure for tourists because of the warmth and hospitality of the Danes.

Among the highlights are picturesque islands including the birthplace of Hans Christian Andersen; a visit with a farm family; coastal cities and resorts; ancient ruins, the capital city of Copenhagen with its many attractions including famous Tivoli Gardens.

Moreover, there are many historic sights to enjoy from Hamlet's Elinore Castle to Frederiksborg Castle as well as many other magnificent castles and manor houses.

Also included are features on fishing; furniture making; a porcelain factory; a mink farm and a style show; a toy factory; and other aspects of the Danish economy. As filmed by John Roberts, Delightful Denmark is just that—a very pleasant nation.

John Roberts' career in motion picture photography has been full and varied. During World War II, he served as an instructor and filmmaker for the U. S. Army's Signal Corps after which he became associated with Lowell Thomas and accompanied him as a personal cameraman on expeditions to Alaska, the Middle East and Tibet.

Tickets for Delightful Denmark are on sale at all Ticketmaster locations for $4.05 (matinee) and $4.85 (evening). For more information, call 741-2787.

Book exhibit opens in January

The first of seven book exhibits describing world philosophies will open at Austin Peay State University in January.

The "Ideas about Ultimate Reality" book exhibit opened Jan. 2 at the Felix G. Woodward Library.

The display includes sacred writings such as the Jewish Maoreitic Text of the Hebrew Scriptures, Christian Greek Text of the New Testament, Hindu Bhagavad Gita, Buddhist Tripitica, and Muslim Qur'an.

Sponsored by Austin Peay's philosophy department, Woodward Library and the Clarksville-Montgomery County Library, the series includes several exhibits concentrating on "Ideas that Changed the World." Each exhibit will travel to the public library after three weeks at Austin Peay.

Other themes to be addressed in the exhibits include human nature, human dignity and honor, human freedom, divine-human encounters, government, and scientific revolutions.

The public is invited to view the exhibit at the Woodward Library during regular hours, Monday through Thursday, 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, 3 to 10 p.m. singers he loved. His very insincerity and inauthenticity because sincerity and authenticity, and this is true of almost every great rock singer.

The end of Presley's career was a sad affair. His manager, Tom Parker, gave him the worst possible advice, and so Elvis made a series of pathetic motion pictures and sang some of the most blatant tripe any singer has ever been saddled with. Much of his work is appreciated best as camp. Yet he was great, and we shouldn't make fun of him, because he was a victim of his times. How many of you out there, singing to the mirror, would dare to do what he did?

Lady Govs off to impressive start

Under first year head coach Marvin Williams, Austin Peay State University women's basketball team is off to their best start in the history with a 10-1 record. Williams replace former coach Pam Davidson, who resigned last spring to go into business in Atlanta, Ga.

Marvin Williams

Last years' team under the direction of Davidson saw a fast improvement, after a dismal 2-24 year. The University gave her another year on her contract to try to save the women's basketball team that won an small college State championship in 1978. She did an excellent job of recruiting most of the players on this season winning team, and after a year the Lady Govs had a winning season.

After Davidson's resignation the team was and he has continued her winning ways.

After a three week lay off the Lady Govs routed Belmont, 60-38 and UT-Martin 102-55 this past weekend. "We haven't had a game in three weeks," said Williams.

"The wins over Belmont and UT—Martin are good wins to have under our belt as we get ready for the OVC schedule."

The Lady Govs will play OVC foe Murray State at 5:30 tonight. The men's team will follow in a 7:30 contest. Both teams will also be in action again Saturday night against Akron.

The Lady Govs were picked to finish fifth in the conference, where Middle Tennessee and Tennessee Tech are supposed to battle for the conference title.

The Lady Govs have never beaten a Lady Raiders squad, but will try to end that drought when they square off in the Dunn Center Jan. 26.

The Raiders lost two starters, 6-4 center Holly Hoover and point guard Bobbie Kay Hamilton.

"Our basic problems will be finding the right combination as soon as possible and getting experience playing as a unit," said head coach Larry Inman.

Can '85 be a new era for the Gov's

In 1984 Austin Peay State University athletics went through yet another dry spell. Baseball was the only activity to have shown promise this past year.

Close only counts in horse shoes, but let's give the basketball team some credit. Although they had a losing record, the team did manage to win the Southern Division Championship, before losing the OVC tournament. That's all folks...no other team showed any promise of coming close to a championship.

APSU athletics under the helm of former Athletic Director Johnny Miller failed to capture an OVC Championship banner during his command. The last banner to hang atop of the spacious Dunn Center was earned by the 1979 golf team, coached by Sherwin Cliff, prior to the arrival of Miller.

The Athletic program has been lower during the '80's compared to the decade of the '70's. Those were the years of champions, where the baseball, basketball, football, golf and track teams all shared similar achievements, by winning at least one OVC crown. And the women's basketball team won a small college State Championship in 1978.

Now that I have mentioned the good and bad,

Time Out!

By Larry Ingram
Sports Editor

with an almost complete reconstruction of the Athletic department, including a new AD, SID, men's and women's basketball, track, and baseball coaches, what will the last half of the decade bring?

I can't predict how competitive the programs will be after the reconstruction, but I can tell you what I hope to see in the near future.

I hope the football team will beef up their schedule and stop playing those weak teams. Since the Governor's football team is a Division I-AA team they should play a Division I-AA schedule. The same point may be made about the men's basketball team. I recently talked to head Coach Howard Jackson, about the scheduling of NAIA schools.

"Next year we are going to play only Division I teams, except our home opener. If we are going to get beat, we're going to get beat by another Division I team," Jackson said.

This year the Governor's played the likes of Berry College, Tennessee Wesleyan, Georgia College, University of Montevallo. They were beaten by Tennessee Wesleyan and Montevallo. However, they did play Division I powerhouse such as, UT—Chattanooga, University of Alabama-Birmingham, Alabama and Missouri.

From the football point-of-view, I don't know. Therefore, I'm not going to mention—Oops (excuse me) I take that back. I think they will play a similarly weak schedule, like they did in 1984. I will bet my last bottle of ink. I don't care about them playing the powerhouse; I just don't like to see them playing the weak sisters.

What I think would make an interesting match-up would be a contest between the Govs and Tennessee State. Why not? The basketball team, which competes on the same level in basketball with TSU, played them three times this year. So, what's the problem with the football program? The ride is only 45 minutes down the street.

I say the year 1985 is going to have the same coaches slogan as when a program is trying to get back on the winning track — "A rebuilding year."

IM Sports

Intramural basketball, aerobics, Coors Light Racquetball, Miller High Free-Throw Contest and the Campus All-Niter will highlight the action going on in the intramural department this winter quarter.

Basketball will feature the main attraction this quarter, as the season is scheduled to start soon. Team captains can pick up a roster at the intramural complex.

There will be three leagues consisting of men, women, and men under six feet league.

A meeting has been scheduled by the IM director Drew Simmons for Jan. 10 at 6 p.m. in room 107 of the recreation complex.

All interested in sponsoring a team should have a captain represented at the meeting.

Also there will be a short meeting for all prospective IM referees and scorer-timers at 6:30 tonight (Wednesday) in room 107 at the IM complex.

Aerobic classes will again be offered this quarter. Monday through Thursday at 4:30 and 5:30, instructors are Stephanie Coates and Traci Pilkinton.

Aside from basketball and aerobics, the racquetball tournament and freethrow contest will be held later this quarter and the date of the All-Niter will be printed in a later issue of The All State.

Tigers claw Jackson's Gov's

Austin Peay dropped a hard fought home game, 76-75, against inter-state rival Tennessee State University last Wednesday night at the buzzer.

They were involved in another game last Saturday against Big Eight opposition Missouri and again the Govs failed, as they dropped the road game in Columbus, Mo. by nine points.

The Govs first two games after Christmas break have been against teams who are nicknamed the Tigers. Against the Tigers from the Music City, Nashville, led by first-year coach Ed Myers who won his first game against the Governor's head coach Howard Jackson.

Jackson's squad enjoyed at one point a 14 point lead, thanks to the help of Gerald Gray's remarkable performance as he contributed a season high of 32 points, breaking a Dunn Center record by connecting 18 of 21 free-throws from the charity strip.

The Tigers showed patience by running their offense and continued to play pressure defense that put them back into the game and eventually won the contest for them, when Jose Crisp tipped in a missed shot at the buzzer.

Tom Hyland Memorial Scholarship gets boost

A day of spirited competition, volleys and spikes recently was held on the Austin Peay State University campus as APSU's public safety department sponsored the first annual Tom Hyland Memorial Volleyball Tournament.

Hoping to raise money to establish the scholarship, APSU public safety officer Steve McMahon organized the tournament in cooperation with Coca-Cola Bottling Company on Clarksville.

Tournament proceeds have started the memorial scholarship for Hyland, who was an APSU public safety officer at the time of his death. Hyland was fatally injured while playing softball in June 1983.

division, the Miffies beat the Fort Campbell

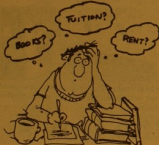

Ten men's teams and six women's teams participated in the tournament. In the women's Crusaders, while the Samoans defeated the Mixed Breeds in the men's division.

According to John Wagoner, APSU public safety director, his department is planning future fund-raising events for the scholarship, which will benefit a student studying communication arts at Austin Peay.

McMahon said the goal is to raise sufficient money to establish a perpetuating scholarship fund. "We want to be able to present the scholarship to a deserving student each year," he added.

If interested in contributing to the Tom Hyland Memorial Scholarship fund, telephone Wagoner or McMahon at 648-7786.
