Students parade AP spirit

Homecoming activities vary, Greeks win majority of competitions

By ANGIE HARVILLE
staff writer

Homecoming week culminated last weekend with Tara Mosley being crowned 1995 Homecoming Queen and Austin Peay losing to MTSU.

Many events took place last week that displayed school spirit. Sigma Phi Epsilon and Alpha Delta Pi helped organize the bonfire/pep rally Thursday night, with the Student Government Association handing out rooster poms to increase participation.

Angel Smith, SGA president, announced the winners of the "Paint the U.C." competition, with Kappa Sigma and Kappa Delta taking first place, Circle K bringing in second and Pi Kappa Alpha finishing third. The floats followed the theme of "America on Parade."

Smith also announced the 1995 Homecoming Court, which included Andrea Brown, Barbi McCulloch, Tara Mosley, Tarol Page and Melanie Wade.

"It's very different sitting over here than with the band. I don't feel that I have an active part, but it's nice not having to march in the parade. I have enjoyed the whole weekend, and I am very honored to be here," said Brown, a junior music education major.

McCulloch, a senior majoring in vocal performance, said, "I feel very honored to represent the students. Just the fact that they chose me as their representative means a great deal because I care about them as well."

"I feel honored being in the position that I'm in now, considering that my peers voted me in," said Mosley, a senior biology major. Mosley was crowned 1995 Homecoming Queen during halftime of the football game.

Page, a junior majoring in special education, said, "Being on the Homecoming Court here at Austin Peay has been one of the most endearing moments of my college career."

"I consider it an honor and a pleasure to represent my peers and the university. I will always strive to uphold the high standards our school represents. I will always cherish the confidence and trust that the students have shown in me," said Wade, a senior elementary education major.

Parade activities began Saturday morning with 51 entries, 18 of those being floats sponsored by the community and other campus groups. "I was very pleased. We had great weather for it. I think it was an overall success. We want to thank all the student groups for participating," said Joe Mills, parade coordinator.

The winner of the float competition was Alpha Delta Pi and Sigma Phi Epsilon. They received a monetary award of $300.

The Non-Traditional Student Organization took second place, and Sigma Chi was awarded third place.

After the parade, community and student organizations took part in the street fair, a new activity for Homecoming. "I thought it went pretty well; we had a pretty good crowd and participation. We had approximately 20 booths set up, two live bands, a solo act and a clogging group. There were several costume characters from area restaurants, including the Noid from Domino's, the subway sandwich and the pizza slice from Papa John's. The kids also seemed to have a lot of fun," said Ken Jackson, the coordinator for the street fair.

The Red Cross handed out sports towels, the Baptist Student Union sponsored a fish pond toilet toss, the Step Team provided a ring toss, and other groups participated by having a drinking booth, sponge throw, rat race, a child proof toy booth and craft booths. The Austin Peay Parent's Club set up a booth and answered questions that other parents, students and community members had.

"Considering this was the first year for the street fair, everything went okay. I liked the idea of having a live band also," said Jenna Feagans, a sophomore vocal/instrumental performance major.

The end of the street fair signaled the beginning of the Victims of violence express trauma through shirts

By ALICIA MOOREHEAD
news editor

"Teach me to cry and when I have learned to cry, teach me to dance so that I may dance in my tears." —Anonymous

This quote expresses Take Back the Night's goal for all women who have been victims of sexual abuse and violent crimes.

The last workshop to decorate T-shirts for the Clothesline Project, which is connected with Take Back the Night, will be held on Saturday, Oct. 14 from 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. at Harriett Cohn Center. This project is an outlet for those who have been victims of violence.

The Clothesline Project was designed to educate people about violence in America," said Maryana Fedyk, coordinator of Austin Peay's part in the Clothesline Project.

Survivors who decorate the T-shirts paint messages on, or decorate the T-shirts to some way to show the impact their experiences had on their lives. "The Clothesline Project is mainly about feelings, feelings and more feelings," Fedyk said.

The clothesline project has four basic purposes:

- To bear witness to the survivors and victims of violence and sexual assault.
- To help the victims of this type of violence and their loved ones heal their pain.
- To educate and raise society's awareness of the extent of the problem of violence against women.
- To provide a nationwide network of support, encouragement, and information for other communities starting their own Clothesline Project.

The T-shirts that are made at the workshop will be displayed at the Take Back the Night Rally on Saturday, Oct. 21 from 2-6 p.m. at the Two Rivers Mall. "The Take Back the Night Rally is to make the community aware of what women go through with the violence," Fedyk said.

Take Back the Night is an organization begun by a group of women who realized their fear of violence was limiting them.

The hanging T-shirts are a visual documentation of the violence experienced in our community every day. If students want to decorate a T-shirt, they can bring their own, and the color of the T-shirt signifies their experience.

White T-shirts are decorated in memory of those who have died of violence. Yellow or beige shirts are decorated for those who have been battered or assaulted. Red, pink, or orange shirts signify rape or sexual assault victims. Survivors of incest or child sexual abuse can decorate blue or green shirts, and purple or lavender is for people who have been attacked because of their sexual orientation.

Fedyk pointed out that survivors who have not been able to talk about their experiences may be able to express themselves for the first time through the T-shirts.

Harriett Cohn is also decorating masks for display at the Take Back the Night rally. Victims are painting masks with different expressions on the outside of the mask. The inside of the mask will reflect how the survivor feels on the inside.

APSU is co-sponsoring the event with Clarksville Memorial Hospital, Fort Campbell Rape Crisis Team, Harriett Cohn Center, Inc., Rape and Sexual Abuse Center and Safe House.

SORT (Survivors of Rape Trauma) is a campus organization that helps students who have been through "abuse all together, and not just sexual abuse," Fedyk said.

SORT meets every Monday from 1-2:30 p.m. and the location is confidential. Call Fedyk at the Counseling Center at 648-6162 or Cindy Long at Harriett Cohn at 648-8126.

football game. The Austin Peay band played the Star Spangled Banner as paratroopers from the 101st Airborne landed on the field, adding a new twist to the beginning of the game.

Students had a lot to say about the activities during the week. Clint Ellis, a senior biology major, said, "Overall, it's been better in the years past, except for the bonfire because it didn't get lit until everyone left. There's a lot more Greek unity among the fraternities and sororities this year. It seems like there's more cooperation this year."

"It's been more festive this year than years past. There's been a lot more activity. I really had a good time. However, there still could be more activities, especially after the bonfire. Maybe more notification would help involvement because students are very busy," said Bryan West, a senior accounting major.

On the other hand, sophomore Julie Warwick was not quite as pleased with the activities. "There weren't very many students on campus involved. It was hard to find people I knew, and there weren't that many activities. I do like the idea of getting a famous person like Gladys Knight though."

Gladys Knight performed Saturday night after the game in the Dunn Center.

A group known as Infinity served as the opening act for the concert. Three of the members were Austin Peay students, Billy Elliott, Alphonzo Prather and Darius Willis. Volenzo Blount is not a student.

More than 3,000 tickets were sold for the concert. "The turnout was good, but I was disappointed because she didn't do a lot of her own songs," said Dale Thomas, a junior computer science major.

"She appealed to the alumni. I don't think it was for the students but for the community," said Mike Withers, a junior majoring in business management.

Melanie Stewart, a sophomore graphic design major, agreed. "It wasn't diverse. It only brought one crowd," she said.

On the other hand, Randell Sherrill, a senior history major, was very pleased with the performance by Knight. "I thought her music appealed to all ages. I really enjoyed it," he said.

Nancy Richardson, a sophomore social work major, was able to get Knight's autograph on her shirt. "I grew up listening to her music. I just wanted to hug her. I never thought I'd get her autograph also. I am just thrilled to death," she said.

solutions in what the Republicans had to offer.

"It's not easy to keep track of all the bad ideas that have come out in the past few weeks," he said.

Riley said that Republicans are putting the interests of banks and loan agencies ahead of the interest of students. For example, he said the $1.6 billion that Republicans claim will be saved by charging fees to lenders is more than offset by a $1.8 billion financial loophole for the same agencies.

"Some members of Congress have been so busy looking out for the middleman for loans that they lost track of the middle class," Riley said. "The people are about to lose to the special interest."

Madeleine Kunin, deputy secretary for education, said Republicans are forcing students to bear the brunt of tax cuts for the wealthy. "When we ask students to sacrifice, we have a right to scrutinize where the money cut will be going," she said.

The elimination of the six-month grace period of interest subsidy on loans - part of the Senate's package

- could cost a student with a

$17,000 loan more than according to Kunin.

"If you're out of school money," she said. "Not paying a loan because of no money could ultimately lead to us in default rates."

While the Senate decided to end the direct lending program, percent, House Republicans want to abolish the program which allows students to pay for education directly.

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: Set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $172,109* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $219 each month to reach the same goal.

'Coming Out' best option for gays, lesbians

Guest
Editorial By Glenn
Carter

October 11 has quickly become one of the major days of celebration for gay men and lesbians. The holiday was designated by community leaders in 1988, one year after the March on Washington, one of the greatest successes of the gay rights movement. The goal of the day is to increase visibility of gay people.

When APSU has had active gay and lesbian groups on campus, we have had great visibility on campus by sponsoring a library display highlighting books and journals about and by gay and lesbians. Pink triangles, the symbol of the gay rights movement, have been spotted all over campus.

Some would ask why the necessity of such a blatant display of one's sexual orientation. There are many reasons.

If the AIDS epidemic has taught anything, it is that gays will receive equality under the law only if they are out and visible. Gays will achieve respect and dignity only if they expect it and demand it. This can't be done from the closet.

Research has shown that the vast majority of people who report that they know someone who is gay overwhelmingly support gay rights. Conversely, the vast majority of people who don't think they know anyone who is gay oppose gays on issues that are important to gays' rights.

It is apparent that gay-related issues will not be taken seriously until it is known who they are. Gay men and lesbians are not some stereotypical group of people. They are not out of the mainstream but are a part of the mainstream. They are our friends, our family, our co-workers and our neighbors.

At APSU, if they came out of the closet, many gay and lesbian faculty and staff could provide strong role models and help students who are dealing with issues of their sexual orientation. A very sad statistic is that gay and lesbian youths are three times more likely to commit suicide as the only way out. We owe it to our students and all the young people to create a positive and accepting environment for them to become comfortable and proud of their sexual orientation.

I have never met a gay man or lesbian who has regretted coming out of the closet. They all express a tremendous relief of putting the oppressive burden down and feeling good about themselves.

People come up with a wide variety of reasons to justify not discussing homosexuality. These reasons are often perpetuated by lesbians and gays as well as by heterosexuals. It is essential that we engage actively and constructively in this discussion and raise our national consciousness about this issue.

October 11, National Coming Out Day is an ideal time to do this. Come out, come out wherever you are.

Letter to the Editor

Death penalty no answer to crime issue

Dear Editor,

Lane Crawley, Joe Weyant, and other seemingly Fuhrman wannabees should be reminded that 1) injury never improves one's condition, 2) volunteers for the death penalty are neither imperative nor necessary in the name of justice so please refrain from attempting to recruit any more human sacrifices, and 3) anger, justice, and contempt are totally incompatible realities that have no place in the same sentence.

Conventional solutions to and current mentalities toward prevailing social problems focus too narrowly on individual victims and not on the overall system which creates them. This inhibits abilities to respond effectively and avoid past mistakes (assuming one wants to because there are forces which benefit from a confused, frustrated and dysfunctional society.) Merely alternate solutions are being conveniently denied and injustices accumulating like time bombs and geological stresses.

In case anyone has a misplaced perspective on things, almost all law enforcement agencies like the Los Angeles Police Department answer indirectly to our own beloved Attorney General, Janet Reno, who has personally accepted responsibility for at least 11 times more child deaths than Susan Smith ever thought of.

John Mansell

"General" Reno is not in jail experiencing unprotected abuses, but rather is still in power and aggressively seeking the death penalty-- not for herself, but for the Oklahoma City bombing suspects. That stands as an apparent indictment of the system itself. Welcome to the gap.

Incidents such as Waco, Ruby Ridge and the Kent State University massacres can be interpreted as tragedies, victories or revenges depending on individual perspectives.

The bottom line is that we are killing others in an attempt to eliminate undesirable traits within ourselves. If you want to be tough on yourself, fine. Give others room to breathe, live and enjoy.

Americans get a bad rap on charges of racism

All I've heard during the trial and since the O.J. verdict is how African-Americans believe one thing and Caucasians believe another. I'm glad that this flatulence of the mind has subsided for a while. I believe that, in reality, the race issue is, the majority of the time, blown out of proportion.

Sure -- Americans of different ethnic groups sometimes disagree just as certain groups of people tend to think in unison. However, this does not mean that because lighter and darker people may have varying opinions as to guilt or innocence of a guy named Orenthal James, that anyone has anything personal against anyone else. In fact, I would offer up that while nobody is perfect, our society is much more accepting of diversity than many others.

For example, after spending a month in Mexico this past summer, I observed that while Aztec blood flows through the veins of the entire population, the society seems to unconsciously look down upon the native people. For example, one rarely sees anyone on TV with traditionally native features.

Also, the word "indio" (translating to "Indian") has become synonymous with stupid. The proper word is "indigenous" and to say or to use anything else is to offer great insult.

In Germany, neo-nazis routinely stir up so much trouble that they make international news. We all know about racial cleansing in Bosnia, and let's not forget the Kurds in Iraq who are probably still being treated to gas attacks.

That is not to pat ourselves on the back for less civil rights abuse, but rather to point out that, no matter what one thinks of the current situation, things could be worse, and that we have moved up.

We tend to feel so bad about ourselves that we have created various programs to make up for what our ancestors have done.

There's Affirmative Action, an idea that by law, requires companies to employ individuals on the basis of pigmentation or genitalia. There are all sorts of minority and women's organizations that, if they had been formed by their caucasian or male counterparts, would be deemed racist or sexist and slated for disbandment. There are even racial quotas in criminal sentencing in some places, which completely misses the point of punishing criminal activity.

Those who deliver to us these ideas wrongly stereotype our entire country as being so racist and sexist that we need to be supervised before we will give our fellow countrymen a chance at anything. With this impeded thinking they encourage increased racial consciousness and cause tension and resentment.

I have always noticed how Austin Peay prints on every piece of paper within its domain, "APSU is...committed to a non-racially identifiable student body."

Yeah, I'm sure that's why when I go to Health Services, applied for admission, put in for a scholarship or filled out a survey, a race category always seems to find its way past the guys who put "non-racially identifiable" clause on everything. While I'm sure those in charge have the best intentions, this is just a little bit hypocritical.

Keeping in mind that the minority population is somewhere between 15 and 20 percent, let us look at TV Guide to see who's popular. How about Oprah Winfrey, who has become the most successful talk show in the nation; the highest paid too. She has outperformed and out-earned Phil Donahue, and older, more experienced veteran of the talk show business.

Michael Jordan is hailed as the undisputed greatest basketball player of all time. Johnnie Cochran dazzled everyone who watched CNN with his legal tactics. Whatever you think about the "not guilty" verdict, Cochran, with a great deal of evidence against him, won against great odds and gained much respect.

Bill Cosby is loved by everyone and carried the most popular television show in the country for some time. All of these people would need much more than 15 percent acceptance to achieve their unbridled success.

Sure there are the Mark Fuhrmans of the world, but how many do you see running to join him? This man has made himself the apex of what everybody hates.

Finally, let me reiterate that we are not a perfect society yet, and absolute perfection is probably not a realistic goal. But we have come a long way in the past three decades, and I don't think we should be so down on ourselves all the time.

I refuse to believe that we all hate each other like the powerful people say we do. The American thing about it is that when it all comes down to it, we're not so different, we're just a little unfamiliar.

Basketball practice to begin with 'Midnight Magic'

By BYRON SHIVE

sports editor

With winter just around the corner, the sound of basketballs bouncing will soon be a routine noise on the floor of Dave Aaron Arena in the Dunn Center as college basketball teams around the country are allowed to hold official practices under NCAA guidelines starting Saturday evening at midnight.

The Austin Peay State University men's and women's basketball teams will take advantage of the deadline by hosting the second-annual "Midnight Magic" at 11 p.m.

Saturday night:

The free event will feature numerous chances for fans to win prizes and get involved in the festivities.

"The Leaf Chronicle" and WIZM radio station, in conjunction with Cellular One and Dunn Insurance, will sponsor a $10,000 Shoot-out.

Ten fans will be selected randomly from the stands to participate in the contest. One lucky winner will receive the grand prize.

A free trip to the Bahamas, courtesy of Universal Travel, will also be given away during the hour leading up to midnight.

Ohio Valley Conference Tournament tickets for the 1996 tourney will be awarded, as well as many other smaller prizes donated by area sponsors.

At the stroke of midnight, the Governors and Lady Govs will take the floor for their first official scrimmage/practice of the upcoming season.

Many schools take advantage of the midnight hour on Oct. 15 every year by having their practices in the wee hours in front of adoring fans, alumni and television cameras.

ESPN has brought exposure to the event in the past few years, showing the first scrimmages of such basketball powerhouses as Kentucky, Massachusetts and

Cincinnati, among others.

Both Austin Peay basketball squads will host their annual media day tomorrow at 2 p.m. in Dave Aaron Arena.

The Lady Governors' players and coaches will be available for interviews and photographs at 2, with the Governors following at 3 p.m.

The Governors are coming off a season that saw them advance to the championship game of the OVC Tournament, where they lost regular season champion Mac State.

The Lady Governors look continue to improve after the record-breaking season of 1994-95.

Final Four to decide intramural champion; Ends, Rebels to clash for women's crown

By BYRON SHIVE

sports editor

After a tense contest Monday evening between the unbeaten and defending champion Raging Rebels and a gutsy Chi Omega squad ended with a 12-7 Rebel win, the stage was set for tonight's women's flag football championship between the Rebels and the 3-1 Tight Ends. Game time is set for 8:30 p.m.

The Tight Ends' only loss on the season was an 8-6 nailbiter to the Rebels last Wednesday that went down to the final gun.

The Tight Ends led the game 6-2 with under two minutes remaining, but the Rebels drove the length of the field, aided by a couple of long completions, to set up what would become a controversial finish.

Facing a fourth-and-goal, the Raging Rebels' quarterback was apparently sacked, but a roughing-the-passer penalty was called which gave the Rebels new life. They scored on the next play with only five seconds left to play to remain unbeaten.

Chi Omega was looking to force a three-way tie for first-place with a win over the Rebels Monday night, but a late Rebel interception thwarted any hope of a Chi-O upset.

In men's action, the tournament field has been narrowed to the Final Four after the first round of play Monday night.

The favorites prevailed in all four contests as the top seeds advanced to the second round.

In the tournament opener, the Good 'Ol Boys knocked off Kappa Sigma Gators with a strong offensive showing in a 24-8 win, the second-place independent squad advanced.

Sigma Chi Black, playing with a new quarterback, had its highly offensive production of the season in a 33-8 win over GSF.

The undefeated Sandlot Boys received a scare from 2-4 Alpha Gamma Rho Gang Green in the first half, as the 'Boys went to a break with a narrow 21-13 lead, but a strong second half netted Sandlot a 42-13 win, though.

In the nightcap, Pike Gang advanced with a convincing 26-13 blowout of the Men of Miller, as the Pike defense forced Miller to repeat mistakes.

Tonight, Garnet will face Good 'Ol Boys at 6:30 p.m., while the Sandlot Boys and Sigma Chi Black will hook up in a 7:30 p.m. showdown.

The winners will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m. to decide the championship.

Tara Mosley crowned as Austin Peay 1995 Homecoming Queen

RANDY OVERSTREET

Tara Mosley, a senior pre-medicine major, became Austin Peay's 1995 Homecoming Queen Saturday. The elections held last Wednesday narrowed the candidates to 5 students, and the results were announced at the bonfire Thursday night.

Wendy Clegg, a junior pre-med major, was runner-up queen. The queen was not announced until Friday.

Mosley said, "I was surprised because so many girls were very qualified, and many were sponsored by three organizations or more."

Greek Scene: Busiest week for groups comes to a close

By ERIC WILLIE
staff writer

The most enduring week for the fall of Greek life ended Saturday.

Homecoming preparations and festivities are over, along with all of the hard work that was put in.

Alpha Delta Pi would like to congratulate everyone on their hard work during Homecoming. They would also like to congratulate Tara Mosley for winning the Homecoming Queen title and Sigma Phi Epsilon for winning the first competition.

Kappa Delta plans to have a mixer Thursday with Sig Ep. They would like to thank Kappa Sigma for their participation during the week.

Alpha Gamma Rho plans to have a brotherhood event Friday. They would like to thank Chi Omega for their hard work.

Homecoming

They would like to congratulate Barth McCulloch for being part of the Homecoming Court.

Pi Mu Alpha would like to congratulate Andrea Brown on being a part of the court.

Sigma Alpha Iota would also like to congratulate Brown as well as their nine pledges this semester.

Sigma Chi will be hosting a pledge party Wednesday at The Brary. They are looking forward to Derby Days which begin Monday. They would also like to thank Jim Goude on becoming the Weenie King.

Alpha Gamma Rho plans to have a brotherhood event Friday. They would like to thank Chi Omega for their hard work.

Kappa Sigma plans to have a social gathering Saturday. The cost is $2. It is $1 for students who bring a canned good.

All canned goods go to the Big Brothers and Sisters of Clarksville. They would like to thank Kappa Delta for their involvement during Homecoming.

Sig Ep would like to thank ADPi on their involvement during Homecoming.

"They will be holding a wellness seminar Saturday for all sororities from 10 a.m.-12 p.m. in the University Center Ballroom.

They would like to send a special congratulations to Tara Mosley and to their brothers for their effort in creating the float that won first place.

Mosley was sponsored by Sigma Phi Epsilon and Alpha Delta Pi. "It was wonderful to be chosen by your peers. It really means a lot." While Mosley had prepared for the event prior to the election results being announced, she said that she was still surprised.

Brian Connor, Sig Ep member, escorted Mosley.

Mosley was shocked when she was awarded the crown. "I was shocked because the interview went well, but I didn't feel confident. Actually I would have been disappointed if I would not have made queen, but I was glad to be in the court," said Mosley.

Michelle Wasden, 1994 Homecoming Queen, said, "I would have been proud to give the crown to any of the candidates, but it was especially meaningful to give it to my sorority sister, Tara Mosley."

Homecoming Queens participate in awareness days for the university including AP Day and the 50 Year Reunion. Mosley was asked after the game to help recruit students from area high schools.

Mosley was given free tickets for her mother and her to attend the Gladys Knight concert.

"It was great to have my mom attend Homecoming because my dad couldn't be there. It was my mom's moment too, being a single mom," said Mosley.

Mosley said that she wants to get people excited about Austin Peay. She said, "Michelle Wasden is the classiest lady, and I could only hope to do as well as her in representing Austin Peay. I'm definitely not replacing her."

The title of Homecoming Queen makes Mosley feel honored, but she said that she has to walk taller and speak out for the university a little louder.

"Homecoming Queen doesn't change the goals that I have set; it will help me prepare for the goals that I am going to set," said Mosley.

Mosley is currently applying for medical school, and she hopes to enter one of the universities in the fall of 1996.

Mosley said that she is thankful to her boyfriend Troy McFarlin, a senior pre-med major.

"I love him very much. He is always there, and I don't give him enough credit," said Mosley.

After having two days to adapt to being the Homecoming Queen, Mosley said, "I am still in a daze."
