

The All State

Serving the Austin Peay Community since 1929

Volume LXVIII, Issue 18 February 11 1998 6 pages

Aspire 2000 benefits APSU, Clarksville

CHANTAL ESCOTO

I writer

Dr. Vicki Langston, director of APSU Economic Development Center is correct, Austin Peay may soon have higher enrollment with Clarksville's new home construction increase is the thermometer used to predict the major population growth, with the number coming sooner than the expected year 2000 forecast.

He announcement came Friday morning during the third investors and of Aspire 2000, Clarksville's four-year community marketing economic plan. It also was an opportunity to witness the unveiling of the Clarksville Community Services Internet Web site. The new

Web site, www.clarksville.tn.us, will be completely up and running on March 1, and will be a major clearing house of information about Clarksville, including a hyperlink set up to APSU's Internet server. Among the information that will be available on the Web site is Clarksville statistical data, updated community and local events and information about APSU.

The creation of the APSU/EDC Data Center database is a major goal for Aspire 2000 and will act as an information clearinghouse to any Internet user. The Data Center database is located within the Business and Community Solution Center. Dr. Sal Rinella, APSU president, said establishing a Clarksville Data Center through the EDC will be a key to the community's success. The Data Center fits right into the Business and Community Solution Center. The partnership can only strengthen the APSU community by attracting quality students and faculty," Dr. Rinella said.

The 1998 goals for the EDC is to push for construction of a conference and exhibition center that is scheduled to break ground at the end of this year. EDC members say the center will attract tourists, educational seminars, and regional sporting events which will eventually stimulate new business and open up more entertainment options for Clarksville.

Rinella said that APSU has the potential to be involved with all of Aspire 2000's goals including participation in the projected 2000 new jobs that will be created by the program. "The needs of the community will be met by teams of students," Rinella said. The university is already involved with the city's beautification program and have targeted Exit 11, off I-24, by making the area more presentable and putting up new road signs to make navigation easier for visitors to APSU, Rinella said.

Hank Ballew enjoys the snow last Thursday, when classes were delayed until 9:30 a.m.

Several students enjoyed the time off to sleep or catch up on assignments.

(Photo by Andy Segelke)

IYSP selected 'Most Improved'

ALICIA MOOREHEAD

asst-in-chief

Austin Peay State University's National Youth Program (IYSP) has been selected as one of the nation's "Most Improved" by the NCAA. Austin Peay's IYSP will receive a special award during the NCAA's national workshop this month.

The award was given based on evaluation material, federal reports, project leadership and the positive attitudes of Austin Peay's IYSP staff.

Drew Simmons, director of intramurals and supervisor of Austin Peay's IYSP. A partially privately funded program, IYSP is designed to children, between the ages of 10 and 16, of income families learn about sports and health and alcohol awareness education as a portion of the program. Last summer, Austin Peay's program enrolled 339 children.

Austin Peay's program also was recognized at the 1997 NYSP workshop, where it was named best new program of 1996, second only to Yale University.

"Our numbers were a little down that first year, but we had one year to reconstruct and reorganize, and I think that is the reason we were chosen 'most improved,'" Simmons said.

The children are involved with the Austin Peay community in arenas other than NYSP. This past year, some of the children attended G.H.O.S.T. (Great Halloween Options for Safe Trick-or-Treating), and they plan to attend Austin Peay basketball games.

"We are trying to get the children involved in activities throughout the entire year, not just during the summer," Simmons said.

The program relies on community involvement. The Montgomery County School System provides transportation, and local merchants donate both money and supplies.

Ryan speaks of White House scandal

FYONNE JOHNSON

I writer

United States Congressman Ed Bryant spoke on campus about current White House scandal

the crisis with Iraq. Dr. Ed Kanerov, professor of political science and sociology, had Bryant to speak before a class in mass media because there are some people involved in the same way," Bryant said. He speculated that many members of Congress would come clean if they were asked the same question under oath.

"That was a good question because there are some people involved in the same way," Bryant said. He speculated that many members of Congress would come clean if they were asked the same question under oath.

"We can't just sit back and do nothing—it's pretty well established he has what they say he has," Bryant said. "We all want to support the president, but I'm trusting he knows something I don't know."

Bryant said there were negatives, such as when a public figure's children become targets of the press because of their parents' position. Still, he conceded that both sides need each other to function.

"You can't shut the media out," Bryant said. "It's sort of a love-hate relationship; we use each other. Sometimes it's fair, sometimes it's not fair but you get used to it. We both need each other and it works together very well."

information continues to "drizzle out" like it has been, the Democratic party will start to feel like they will "get killed" in the next election.

One student asked Bryant how many members of Congress would come clean if they were asked the same question under oath.

"That was a good question because there are some people involved in the same way," Bryant said. He speculated that many members of Congress would come clean if they were asked the same question under oath.

"We can't just sit back and do nothing—it's pretty well established he has what they say he has," Bryant said. "We all want to support the president, but I'm trusting he knows something I don't know."

Bryant said there were negatives, such as when a public figure's children become targets of the press because of their parents' position. Still, he conceded that both sides need each other to function.

"You can't shut the media out," Bryant said. "It's sort of a love-hate relationship; we use each other. Sometimes it's fair, sometimes it's not fair but you get used to it. We both need each other and it works together very well."

Research scholarship deadline set March 23

By TANGEE REYES
assistant news editor

This year's deadline for submission of a research proposal for the Presidential Research Scholarship is March 23. Awards will be announced on April 6.

Austin Peay's Presidential Research Scholarship was founded last year to provide students in the sciences (biology, chemistry, geography/geology, math/computer science, physics and psychology) with the financial means to undertake undergraduate research in their field.

"There were faculty that wanted to see an organized undergraduate research program in place at the university," said Linda Freed, Office of Grants and Sponsored Programs. Fifty thousand dollars per year was set aside to be awarded on a competitive basis.

Students can apply for either a $1500 or $3000 scholarship and are allowed to use the money in any way necessary to facilitate their research. Jim Moore, a 1996-97 scholar used some of the funds to buy research equipment which he still uses for other projects.

Interested students should select a faculty mentor to help them develop a research proposal.

Proposed guidelines are available in the Office of Grants and Sponsored programs in the Brown Building, room 212, or call 648-7881.

State grant pursues vision

By KRISTI WYATT
features editor

Biology professors at Austin Peay State University are using a state grant to pursue their vision of cleaner water for the future. The grant is funding activities at West Sandy Creek Watershed for stream bank restoration work, water quality monitoring and education about the findings.

Dr. Mack Finley, associate professor of biology, Dr. Steven Hamilton, associate professor of biology, Dr. Joe Schiller, assistant professor of biology, and Laurina Lyle, research associate, are recipients of the grant. This is the third year for the project, and Lyle feels it has been a great success.

"After 10 years of research, we now have the opportunity to convert the facts and findings to real education, and to raise the consciousness of the people we live with about basic water quality," Lyle said.

Finley is mainly involved in the stream bank restoration work that has been going on for eight years at West Sandy Creek in Henry County. Lyle's part is to part what has been done.

The educational activities include four field trips per year for high school biology teachers and students. They accompany the Austin Peay researchers to two streams, one suburban and one pristine. Here they are able to see the differences in water quality and learn bio-monitoring and restoration work. They then are equipped to go the next year and adopt their own streams to monitor.

Two students who were part of this program in high school now attend Austin Peay and are involved in the project. "It has become a generational kind of project," Lyle said.

The Tennessee Department of Agriculture and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) awarded a $45,000 grant for Lyle's three-year educational project, now in its last year. A new grant has enabled the work to continue in Robertson County. They will begin in the summer and conduct the same education for at least five more years.

"Dr. Finley has put together a fabulous team of people. We all work very well together because everyone has a particular talent they bring to the project," Lyle said.

Finley, Hamilton and Schiller provide the expertise and scientific direction for the program, while Lyle serves as the coordinator.

The goal of the project is to raise awareness of everyday pollution. The EPA wants education not regulation. Lyle hopes that extending this education into the high schools and community will increase the awareness of the harm of everyday pollution to our water.

In the mood of winter someone chose to build a snowman outside the Browning building for everyone to enjoy.

(Photo by Andy Segelke)

Peay Briefs

Winter celebration revival

On Sunday, Feb. 22, and Monday, Feb. 23, all students are invited to a worship service and revival at Clement Auditorium. In addition to music, testimonials, and dramatic presentations, there will be a special speaker each night. On Sunday night, ex-Pittsburgh Steeler William Ewing will lead the service. Jeff Bergholz, the 1997 Mr. Tennessee Body Builder, will speak on Monday night. Services will begin at 7 p.m. A reception preceding worship will be held from 5:30 to 6:60 p.m. in the Clement lobby; refreshments will be provided. Sponsored by the Baptist Student Union and the Wesley Foundation (United Methodist Student Center).

SLRP committee meets

The Strategic Long Range Planning Committee will meet Feb. 25 from 3:30-5 p.m. in the Cumberland Room of the UC. Meeting times, dates and locations are subject to change. All meetings are open to the entire university community. Minutes will be published on the Austin Peay web page and will be available in the library approximately one week following the meeting.

Family Fun offered at Clarksville Museum

Families can enjoy some "fancy footwork" at the Clarksville-Montgomery County Museum from 4-5:30 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 28. This dance program will be in the auditorium. The program will feature dancers from the Red River Ramblers Square Dance Club and the Tennessee Clog Jammers.

Audience members will get a chance to try some of this fancy footwork during the last thirty minutes of the program. Program fees are $2 for museum members, $2 for ages 18 and younger, and $3 for adults.

Clarksville Museum offers brown bag lunch

Students can take their lunch to the Brown Bag Lunch program on Feb. 18. They can eat at the museum between noon and 1 p.m.

The guest speaker will be Martha Elliott, owner of Martha Elliott Interiors. She will present a program about antique furniture. Her special interest is antique European furniture. Program fees are $1 for museum members and $2 for non-members.

Care and restoration of antique dolls program

The Clarksville Museum will host a program on the Care and Restoration of Antique Dolls from 2-3 p.m. Feb. 24. The guest speaker is Calie Peck, a doll maker and doll doctor. Find out how to take care of your cherished antique dolls. Program fees are $2 for museum members and $4 for non-members.

T-Shirt design contest for WalkAmerica

Design a winning T-shirt for APSU and WalkAmerica and receive a free T-shirt.

The T-shirt must contain the words "APSU and WalkAmerica." WalkAmerica raises money for healthier babies. A sample of last year's winning design can be seen in the case outside Trabern 204. The deadline for submissions is March 2 and judging will take place on March 4. Turn in your artwork to Sherrie, Trabern Room 204. Contact Rose Austin, college of arts and sciences at 648-7333. Sherrie Wallace, art department at 648-7333.

Financial Aid applications for summer available

Summer applications for Federal Financial Aid are available. Student Financial Aid Office. Students must have completed Application for Federal Student Aid for 1997-98 if attending I or Full Summer term. If attending Summer II only, students must have completed the 1998-99 Free Application for Federal Student Aid. Priority deadline for Summer terms is April 15.

Students who currently receive federal financial aid should receive a renewal application from the Department of Education if you did not receive one, or have never applied for financial aid. Applications are available in the Financial Aid Office. The priority date for 1998-99 information to be received and completed is April 15.

Financial aid staff will be available at the following locations to assist students with completion of 1998-99 federal applications for Financial Aid. Please bring renewal applications if they have been received.

These are the times Financial Aid staff will be available: Feb. 3 p.m., March 16 at 2 p.m.; March 26 at 3 p.m.; and April 23.

Each of these will take place in the University Center Room 323.

The Financial Aid office is located in Ellington Room 232.

Distance learning changes students accessibility

Thanks to the Internet, college students can access library holdings, communicate with professors, research papers, and participate in group discussions, all without leaving their room. In fact, many now earn degrees without ever setting foot on a college campus.

Earning a degree from home has particular appeal for non-traditional students who do not want to leave jobs or uproot families in order to attend a particular school. It is also valuable for those who want to stay current in their field, but do not live near a university.

With advancements in technology, distance learning has leapt way beyond the old correspondence school days that strictly focused on snail mail methods to certify trades like plumbing and carpentry. Now there are video conferencing, television courses, and, of course, the "virtual classroom" where classes are held on the Web chatroom style.

But riding on the tails of this distance learning boom are the "diploma mills." Diploma mills are schools that sound legit, even prestigious, but they lack proper accreditation. Although most claim accreditation from some official-sounding agency, they neglect to mention that the agency is not recognized by the U.S. Department of Education. Often it is not until a student tries to enroll at another institution, or apply to graduate school, that he finds out his degree is non-transferable.

"The mistake most people make is they ask an online university 'Are you accredited?'" they say. "We are accredited by the World Association of Universities and Colleges." Well there's no such accreditation," says Vicki Phillips, director of Lifelong Learning, an online counseling center for distance learners and co-author of the soon-to-be-released book, "Best Distance Learning Graduate Schools." [Although WAUC is an accrediting agency based in Las Vegas, it is not sanctioned by the U.S. Department of Education.]

"There are scores of unrecognized accreditation agencies. Often they (the diploma mills) create a fake accrediting agency, so when asked, they can say, 'Yes, we are accredited.' They can't be prosecuted because they are telling them the truth, they are accredited. Consumers get burned because they don't realize these accreditations mean nothing."

After his experience, Mohammed decided to help other unsuspecting students. "From that point on saw the birth of my 'watchdog' status. I decided to create the 'Distance Ed. for Dummies' homepage (www.angelfire.com/mvo/EmirMohammed/index.html)."

The site, which has logged nearly 17,000 hits, helps students connect with legitimate distance learning institutions.

Phillips says it is important for students to know how to protect themselves. "If they want a degree, there are only two kinds of recognized accreditation and they are not equal. They need to ask if it [the school] is accredited and who it's accredited by; and they need to understand what that kind of accreditation means for them."

Phillips says the first type is regional accreditation. There are six regional associations: Middle States, New England, North Central, Northwest, Southern, and Western Association of Colleges and Schools.

"Regional accreditation is key," agrees Dr. Timothy Mott, Dean of the Undergraduate Center for Distance Learning at Union Institute in Cincinnati. "Diploma mills baffle you with names that imply accreditation and acceptability. They actually send state licensing certificates along in the mail; but being state licensed and being regionally accredited are two different things. Call that association, or call the state higher education board if you aren't sure. If you are interested in graduate school, call potential graduate institutions and make sure they will accept the degree."

The second nationally recognized accreditation is DETC (Distance Education and Training Council), but Phillips says DETC accreditation is still not recognized by regionally accredited institutions—which is important should you want to continue your studies elsewhere. "The agency started out to accredit correspondence programs and has historically been more vocational in nature," says Phillips. "In the last decade they've gotten more involved in the degree business."

Phillips says part of the problem of the problem is that people don't know how to judge the information they see on the Internet. "They do a search ... and see a college listed there and they assume that they must be safe since they were listed by Yahoo, but because information is not filtered, it sets people

In addition, Phillips says, diploma mills tend to be more about advertising to students. "Some of the virtual campuses look better than the real ones. Their catalogues look better ... they put seal on the cover, a photo of an ivy-covered building that doesn't exist. They think about the image that they are selling, where the university doesn't give it that much thought."

But none of this will stop the growth of legitimate distance learning.

"Using technology we can produce a better educational product for our adult learners. We can link them to a wider variety of more rapidly and we can make use of faculty around the country."

Advertise with
The All State
Classifieds
648-7376

WORK FOR THE ALL STATE

WE NEED A KARTOONIST!!!

WE ALSO NEED
ALL SORTS OF
STAFF RITERS
DESPRITELY
(THAT CAN SPELL)

PREFERABLY PEOPLE
THAT WON'T BE GRADUATING
IN MAY

Sigma Alpha Iota
 Are Hosting the Second Annual All Sing
 on Feb. 26th at 7:30 p.m.
 in the MMC Auditorium.
 Tickets will be sold at the door.
 Come and support your Organization.

For more info, call Jill Petrey, 572-1124

Opinion

February 11, 1998

Gender equity not fair

JONATHAN
SCOTT
CARTER
Opinion Editor

Sex discrimination. The very word "discrimination" evokes strong feelings in all of us. Who wants to be labeled a bigot or a chauvinist? But there are those who say that if girls and women are kept out of any organization or denied any opportunity, then their civil rights are being violated.

Take the Boy Scouts for example. Last year, a 12-year-old girl challenged the Boy Scouts' boys-only rule. Apparently it didn't matter that the organization was called the Boy Scouts, and that there was a more than equivalent organization called the Girl Scouts that she could have joined. No siree, the male fact that there was a group that had the audacity to tell her that she couldn't join was all she needed (or more probably all her mother needed) to file a lawsuit in federal court, claiming that she had been discriminated against.

In filing the lawsuit, the child's attorney claimed that the Boy Scouts of America stands alone among scouting organizations in English-speaking countries in attempting to defend gender apartheid and gender segregation.

Oh brother. Gender apartheid? I know that weys have an affinity for exaggeration and hyperbole, but that seems a little much. Is an organization whose purpose is to help young boys grow and develop into young men discriminatory just because they do it in an environment that is free from sexual distraction?

This should not really come as a big surprise to anyone. The movement towards political correctness and cultural "sensitivity" in our country has come a national obsession. We have become a nation where any single individual can wreak havoc on entire governments and multinational corporations simply by claiming that their sacred God-given rights are being trampled on. Finding a way to assist them in twisting and mangling the intent of the law is as easy as picking up their local allow pages.

While it is important to ensure that equal opportunities exist, equal opportunity does not mean that both sides have to be treated in exactly the same fashion. Parents treat their children fairly, but this does not mean that they treat each one the same. They know that each child has individual needs that should be addressed separately.

Boys and girls are not the same. Men and women are not the same. There are social and developmental differences that need to be respected. Single-sex classrooms and single-sex organizations serve a purpose. They provide an environment free of sexual pressures that are inherent in mixed-gender arrangements.

Opponents of (ex) single-sex state-funded schools like the Citadel and the Virginia Military Institute argue that men were getting an unfair advantage in life by getting to go to these prestigious institutions. While I would agree that the old-boy network is alive and well, I don't believe that women were losing out on any opportunities by being denied the "privilege" of going to the Citadel. Any job discrimination or bias that had existed before women went there is still there.

The only difference, of course, is that someone got mad because they were told that they couldn't do something and so a valued tradition came to an end. This same insanity has made its way into other organizations. Many schools and organizations walk on eggshells, not wanting to be the target of gender-equity lawsuits. Ultra left-wing "libbers" claim that Title IX, the law mandating federally-funded schools educate boys and girls "equally," means that any segregated activity is wrong and discriminatory.

What really gets me is that the same people who argue that girls have a right to be involved in boy's activities and organizations are the same ones who defend girls' rights to "girls-only" activities so that they may reach their potential. You don't think for an instant that they would dream of giving up their "Take Our Daughters to Work Day" do you?

Now, not every person needs or wants to be involved in activities that are segregated by gender, but there are many who do. By denying a child the chance to explore his or her limits and capabilities, you are creating artificial barriers that may prevent them from reaching their full potential.

The message sent to our youth should not be that one gender is any more "special" than the other, and therefore worthy of special treatment. The message we should be sending is that our gender is just one ingredient that makes us special unique creatures, and we should celebrate the differences between the sexes, not fear it.

Seeking a color-blind society

By
CHARLIE
PATTEN
opinion writer

My views on affirmative action are rooted in the belief that in spite of our shortcomings, we are all equal. It shouldn't matter what someone's race or gender is; we should be judged on who we are, not what we are.

Yet there are still some of (namely the federal government) who want to do judgement based on race and gender. They believe that the only way to accommodate women minorities is through affirmative action. The theory defines it as "an active effort to improve employment or educational opportunities of minorities and women." That sounds nice, an effort improve opportunities for some people. SOME people, that is, not everybody.

The problem is that there is still discriminating on. If the government's goal is to be truly blind then how can they justify this? Whether they want to admit it or not, this is racism (sexism), even if it is against the majority.

Affirmative action usually is justified as a way of making up for past wrongdoings. Granted, there is widespread discrimination in the old days. I don't justify it. However, if I get passed over for a job because of race-based preferences, I'm punished something that I had nothing to do with. Also, beneficiary of the preference is getting the job necessarily based on his merits. This is discriminatory because race was a factor.

Last year California voters passed Proposition Q, which eliminated affirmative action in state college acceptance and the awarding of government grants. Of course there was a huge backlash from leftists. They said it wasn't fair, and that there would be a return of the old Jim Crow laws. Oh my Rhonda!

I'm sorry to admit it, but life isn't fair, and it's not the government's place to try to make it so. You just can't please everybody, and you certainly can't make up for things that happened many years ago. We can't change history. We're here. We should worry about now, not then.

Another point is that this is unnecessary. Affirmative action should be insulting to all women and minorities because the government is basically telling them that they can't make it on their own, that they're not good enough, and they need all the help they can get. Why bother having any incentive? The government will be there to hold your hand. I don't know about you but I feel better when I accomplish something on my own. There's more of a sense of personal satisfaction.

In a town hall meeting on race relations a few months ago, President Clinton asked if the affirmative action program in the military should be abolished. One woman said yes, and Clinton angrily stated that Colin Powell was helped by it. If the program was not in place, I'm pretty sure that Powell still would have become the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Someone like Colin Powell, with his credentials, doesn't need affirmative action. Neither did Clarence Thomas. He's an associate justice of the Supreme Court because he worked hard to get where he is. He didn't need a hand-out.

People can achieve on their own. Affirmative action only fosters government dependence. If it is abolished it won't mark the return of Jim Crow laws. That's ridiculous. Getting rid of affirmative action will be a way of encouraging women and minorities to do their best, to work hard toward their goals.

Since there will not be a helping hand, when they reach their goals it will be all the more rewarding. The government cannot continue to support this program of discrimination and unnecessary help. Judge people on character and ability, not on gender and skin color.

The All State

Austin Peay State University's official weekly student newspaper

Editor-in-Chief
Alicia Moorehead

Business Manager
James Jarmon

News Editor
Carinda Basso

Opinion Editor
Jonathan Carter

Features Editor
Kristi Wyatt

Sports Editor
Scott Hoskins

The All State is published every Wednesday of the academic year, except during final exams and holidays.

All editorials are the official opinion of The All State with the exception of letters to the editor and personal columns.

Letters to the editor should be less than 300 words and have the full name, address and phone number of the author. Letters must be received no later than 5 p.m. the Friday before the Wednesday printing to be considered for publication.

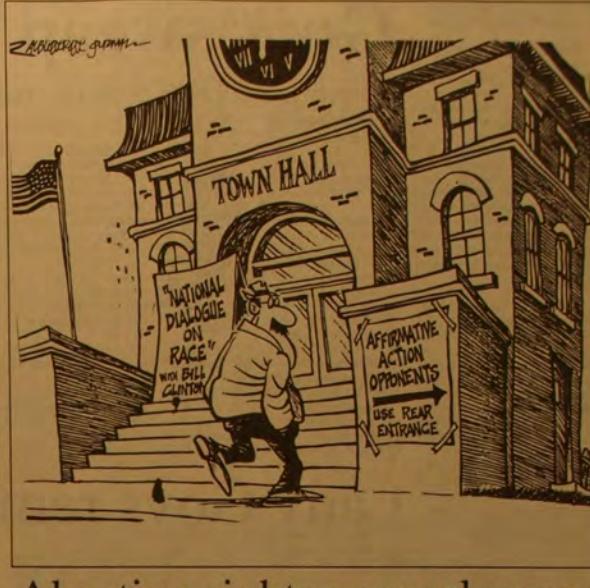

The All State is printed by The Leaf Chronicle, Clarksville, Tenn.

Photographer
Andy Segelke

Advertising Manager
Lisa Cronin
Andy Segelke,
assistant

Circulation Manager
Tom Bellamy

Web Master
Elias Ek

Abortion rights a moral wrong

By
LANE
CRAWLEY
opinion writer

I would like to discuss one additional aspect of abortion in this space using logic and as little propaganda as possible. The issue on stage here is our scientific knowledge and how we use it.

If there is one problem with abortion that everyone should be able to agree on, it is the concept of absolute power that comes with the license to have an abortion. What do I mean by absolute power? This refers to the fact that nearly any pregnant woman can have an abortion for any reason.

There is a saying that goes "Power corrupts, but absolute power corrupts absolutely." Since there is little or no criteria or prerequisites for abortion, most women seem to be able to have one almost anywhere for any reason. Allow me to illustrate.

Children are aborted for a number of outrageous reasons in America. According to the Centers for Disease Control, birth of children with Down's Syndrome, a genetic disorder in which "victims" are usually fully capable of independent living, has been reduced by 70% in the Atlanta metropolitan area because of abortion. Columnist George Will has frequently written, in observation of his son Jonathan, that children with Down Syndrome appear to be some of the happiest people on the planet.

Planned Parenthood conducted a study that broke down the reasons given by women who have abortions: 21% were not ready for an abortion; another 21% said they couldn't afford the kid; 16% were concerned about how a child would affect their lives; 12% had a relationship problem; 8% had all the children they wanted. That's three quarters of all abortions.

A recent study stated in National Review determined that more than one in ten mothers would abort a child susceptible to obesity. But it's not limited to America either.

Many of you are aware that children in India and China are aborted for the defect of being female. Particularly in India upwards of 95% of all aborted individuals are female because boys have a certain potential spiritual significance. Since females lack such importance then their birth is merely an extra cost to the family that—if avoidable—need not be incurred.

Do you see how fickle this becomes? For years many of us have been convincing ourselves that anything unborn is simply part of its mother—and that she has the legal LICENSE to have it terminated. Rejecting the notion of life in the womb is merely an attempt to exonerate the parents from guilt. However, this "right" still stands.

Parents, specifically women, are legally able to end their pregnancies upon presentation of $300 to the right doctor.

From this develops a natural tendency in most of us to view the fetus as mental and insignificant, an embryo that may only survive if we so allow it. Today we are not only able to terminate the existence of the embryo, but we can even alter it at the genetic level. How does this reflect our outlook on nature, and our ability and competence in manipulating it?

The answer: there are approximately 1.5 million abortions yearly. Perhaps we can agree that some of the grounds for most abortions are petty and disappointing. If certain individuals don't want children, then there are vast and plentiful resources available to help those who wish to prevent pregnancy.

Abortions are carried out with great casualness and apathy in the United States today. This is unhealthy, it discourages responsibility to self and others. It erodes away at our world by normalizing the termination of fetal life, like casting a broken bone.

Perhaps we should take a look at our values and ponder why we believe what we do. The nonchalance at which we brush aside things that are inconvenient to us is startling. We can't do anything about other nations, but we can influence our own.

Variety is the spice of life

By TOM CARNEVALE
guest writer

It is time for the seasons to change once again and the winds of change bring new faces to Clarksville. I felt that cold stiff wind hit me square in the jaw when I arrived here a little over two years ago.

Graduation from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point had seemed like an eternity ago. All of my buddies had been scattered to the four corners of the Earth, and once again, I would have to meet new people and learn new places. Luckily, I had been able to move to Campbell, just an hour and a half from my hometown of Murfreesboro. Even so, I knew only one soul in Clarksville - and she was an APSU student. A friend of a friend, she wasn't exactly someone whom I knew very well. But she helped make the transition and showed me the different shades of this cowtown.

Clarksville is a very unique city with an extremely varied society. There are mostly military personnel or people who have some type of military affiliation (dad is retired, etc.). We also have a "college town," which extends out from around APSU's campus. Lastly, there is your typical civilian mix of blue-collar Americans. Now don't get me wrong! I can't say that I live living here only that it is unique. I haven't lived in too many places — my parents were never "well-to-do" — but they traveled whenever they could. Luckily, I have been able to visit twenty-five states and two countries. Not a lot, but enough to know that this place is strange.

Thanks to my mom and dad for giving me life. Thanks to God and to the ghosts of the long gray line, for they have allowed me to experience all the trials, tribulations, and joys which come from proudly serving the greatest nation on earth (short of war). And thanks to my friends for showing me that there is a hint of life in this miserable morass, which we call home!

Enough is enough! I know, you're sick of hearing all of this crap about me in my verbose and flowery speaking style. Now that you're all up to speed, I can tell you what I really think. Of course, I can only expand on my own perspective, which is based upon good experiences. Unfortunately, there aren't many.

GO GOVS! Man, do I love Austin Peay basketball. Even when they play like dribbling toddlers, it's still a great time! I attend home games whenever I can. The crowd is always excited and gets into supporting their team. I've been to home games at MTSU, UT, and Vanderbilt, but they just don't compare. The only home basketball game that I have been to with a more supportive crowd was an Atlanta Hawks game at the Coliseum! I'm a Knicks fan, by the way.

I've been to a few parties in my day — any day will do — but the kickers that y'all have thrown have been a lot of fun. I can't write a book in this arena, partly because I don't remember much. Party on!

I think that APSU is a great school with good people. There was only one time that I ever ran into someone who didn't extend me the friendliness that I was used to — it was some crazy drunken R.A. who was yelling at me for parking in a reserved spot. So I have a little George Costanza in me — I was only going to be parked for second! Anyway, I usually go to very polite folks.

I'm not an expert by any stretch of the imagination, but I've been through college and I've been around a little bit. During your life, you've probably heard someone tell you "it's what you make it, like make it, and live it. This place around you — there was this campus, this college — it can be a good thing. Fuggetaboutit.

Sports

Sports Briefs

The Lady Govs' basketball home games now can be heard on Austin Peay's Magic 91.7 FM, with play-by-play man Chad Setters and color commentary by Matt Cressman.

Tesco Xpress is sponsoring a $1,000 cash giveaway at the Feb. 14 Austin Peay-Tennessee Tech basketball game. There will be a table in the Dunn Center for students to enter their names. This contest is open only to Austin Peay students, and they must be present to win.

Govs Spirit Nights will be held Feb. 14 during the APSU-Tennessee Tech basketball games. The winning group must attend both men's and women's games. First-prize winners receive $100 cash and second-prize winners receive $50 cash. Every group must be registered prior to the start of the game and the contest is open only to students. Groups also must sit together in order to be easily distinguished. Contact Jeanette for more information and additional contest details at 648-7127.

Austin Peay "buddy tickets" are available throughout the basketball season. Any APSU student with a valid ID may purchase up to four extra tickets in the general admission seating section of the Dunn Center for $3 each. These tickets may not be purchased in advance, but only at the door on game day. Students who purchase these tickets will be able to sit in the general admission area with their guests.

Austin Peay sports this week

Men's basketball
Tomorrow—Middle Tennessee State, 7 p.m. (broadcast on TV-43)
Saturday—Tennessee Tech, 7:45 p.m. (broadcast on WNAB)

Women's basketball
Saturday—Tennessee Tech, 5:45 p.m. (broadcast on WNAB)
2/16—Midhead Tennessee State, 7 p.m.

Baseball
Saturday—at Jacksonville State, Jacksonville, Ala., 12 p.m.
Sunday—David Lipscomb, 2 p.m.
2/17—at Ole Miss, Oxford, Miss., 3 p.m.

Rifle
NCAA Sectionals—
Murray, Ky.

Govs sweep 'Death Valley' tri-

Sibbitt gains OVC 3-point mark

By SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

The Governors' 70-66 triumph over Morehead State Saturday was especially momentous for senior guard Joe Sibbitt.

Peay's 5-10 guard broke the Ohio Valley Conference's career 3-point mark in sweeping the annual Death Valley road trip. The "Long Ranger" now has 303 career treys, breaking the mark of former Tennessee-Martin star Dewayne Powell.

Sibbitt finished the game with 10 points, a game where the Govs (13-9, 6-6 OVC) had to come from 10 points down at the half for the win. Morehead State built a 37-27 lead at intermission, using an 18-0 run midway through the half to widen the gap.

Sibbitt

At the same time, APSU managed to hit only 31 percent in the first half, including just 12-of-14 3-point attempts.

It was Sibbitt's 3's to open the second half that may have turned the game around for the Govs. Sibbitt made consecutive 3-pointers to quickly close the gap to six points. His bomb with 12:30 left gave him the OVC record.

James Stewart's layup with 12 minutes to play in the game knocked the score at 51, and Jake Powers' dunk with 10 seconds left gave the Govs an insurmountable 63 lead.

Reggie Crenshaw and Stewart led the Govs in scoring with 17 points each. Crenshaw also went 8-for-8 from the charity stripe, a marked improvement from previous games. Jerome Jackson scored in double figures also, with 12 points and nine rebounds.

The first leg of Death Valley saw Peay defeating Eastern Kentucky 88-79 in a game not as close as the final score indicates.

Although the score was knotted at 35 at half-time, APSU went on an 18-0 run to open the second half and jump ahead 53-35. The Govs shot a blistering 75 percent in the second half and 57.1 percent for the game.

"I really felt like we played together as a team tonight," APSU head coach Dave Loo said.

Sibbitt and Jackson led the squad in scoring with 19 points each. Sibbitt knocked down four 3-pointers and Jackson went 8-of-9 from the floor.

The Govs return home to face Middle Tennessee State and Tennessee Tech for their final homes games of the 1997-98 season.

If APSU secures one of the top four spots in the OVC, then the Govs will host a first-round game in the OVC tournament on Feb. 24.

Men's OVC Basketball Standings (through Monday's games)

Murray State
E. Illinois
Middle Tennessee
AUSTIN PEAY
SE Missouri
Tenn. State
Tenn. Martin
Eastern Ky.
Tennessee Tech
Morehead State

Lady Govs remain in hunt for tourney

By SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

The Lady Govs' basketball squad won its fourth straight game Saturday with a 66-61 win over Morehead State.

The win gives the Lady Govs a season sweep over the Lady Eagles. APSU won 86-59 earlier this season in Clarksville.

With the win, APSU opened up a half game lead over Southeast Missouri State for the seventh spot in the Ohio Valley Conference tournament.

APSU won despite shooting 32.4 percent from the field. Morehead wasn't much better, though, shooting just 37.5 percent.

Austin Peay jumped on the Lady Eagles 9-0 to open the game, but the hosts managed to stay in the game, mainly on the strength of Morehead's Hilary Swisher. She went 3-of-4 from the free throw line.

Amanda Behrenbrinker led the Lady Govs in scoring with 24 points. She also tacked on 10 rebounds in the winning effort.

Kai Jones chipped in 14 points, while Angelica Suffren had 10 points. Rhonda Neely added seven rebounds.

Morehead State outscored the Lady Govs 12-3 down the stretch to cut the lead to 57-56 with 1:55 left.

The Lady Govs were able to hit their free throws to preserve the victory. The squad converted 17-of-20 from the free throw line.

Amanda Behrenbrinker led the Lady Govs in scoring with 24 points. She also tacked on 10 rebounds in the winning effort.

Kai Jones chipped in 14 points, while Angelica Suffren had 10 points. Rhonda Neely added seven rebounds.

The Lady Govs return to action Saturday night, facing Tennessee Tech at 5:45 p.m. in the Dunn Center.

They wrap up the home portion of the 1997-98 season next Monday when they host Middle Tennessee State.

In all likelihood the Lady Govs will be on the road for the first round of the OVC tournament Feb. 24.

Note: The Lady Govs' game at Eastern Kentucky was still in process at press time.

OVC Women's Standings (through Saturday games)

E. Kentucky	11-2
UT-Martin	10-3
Tenn. Tech	10-3
Middle Tenn.	8-5
E. Illinois	7-7
Tenn. State	6-7
APSU	5-8
SE Missouri	5-9
Murray St.	3-11
Morehead St.	2-12

Lady Vol coach Summitt to help induct honorees

University of Tennessee Lady Vols' basketball coach Pat Head Summitt will go on hand Saturday to participate in APSU's Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony.

Her brother, sports representative Tommy Head, will be among three former Governor standouts to be inducted into the APSU Hall of Fame.

Also being inducted are the Lady Govs' all-time leading scorer, Shanda Maxwell, and three-time All-OVU Valley Conference selection Kevin Sipe.

The three will be inducted during a 9:30 a.m. brunch in the University Center ballroom, bringing to 63 the number of athletes in Austin Peay's Hall of Fame.

Maxwell will be inducted by former Lady Govs' coach Jim Phillips, and Sipe will be introduced by former Govs' baseball teammate Mike Hendricks.

The inductees will be introduced at halftime of the Austin Peay-Tennessee Tech basketball game on Feb. 14.

The cost of the brunch is $10. Tickets are available in the APSU athletic ticket office and are on sale through today.

Sports Jam

By MATT CRESSMAN
staff writer

Marijuana, role models, noise and brain damage are among the topics I deem worthy enough to discuss this week.

First of all—what is going on in the NBA? Why are you setting a double standard? You have all your teams active in the community to maintain a good public image. However, you say "a fool, drugs are cool."

Players like Chris Webber and Mookie Blaylock, who have been caught in possession of marijuana, don't have to worry about repercussions coming from the NBA.

Marijuana is not on the banned substance list in the NBA! What kind of example is this? Word is that the players association may boycott next season if it is banned by the NBA.

Hello, basketball stars of America! You have a responsibility to the youth of this nation as role models.

Though players such as Charles Barkley claim they are not role models, the fact of the matter is that they are. The second they put on that jersey, they give up their right to privacy. They became a public figures.

Therefore, they must be aware about what they do. There are some fans who imitate their heroes and pattern their lives after sports stars.

Not on the list is something else that is wrong with sports—decibel levels.

Why is it okay to have 20,000 fans screaming while one tries to hit a ball hurled at nearly 100 miles per hour, or okay to have 60,000 fans screaming while 300 pound men are charged to ensure a pass is not completed and not okay to cheer someone swings a club large head at a stationary wall just curious.

Finally, Stan Humphries have been hit in the head many times. He has been posing as a caddy for Sonny Simpson on the PGA Tour. Simpson won the caddied.

Oh, yeah, here's some thought. Name the only ones Michael Jordan named the NBA regular All Star game and Finals same season?

Answer next week.

Governor tennis, rifle teams perform well

Tennis

Austin Peay's men's tennis team defeated Western Kentucky 6-1 Saturday to gain its first victory of 1998.

The Governors won all three doubles matches over the Hilltoppers and five out of six singles matches.

Compete results:

Singles

Damian Bromfield (AP) def. Beau Sparks 6-2, 6-4; Michael Lindskog (WK) def. Pavel Levitanis 6-3, 6-4; Robert Powell (AP) def. Christian Kaumanns 6-1, 6-3; Jason Rodich (AP) def. Tim Sallengs 6-4, 6-3.

Nathan Rodich (AP) def. Dan McElheney 6-4, 6-2;

Dominic Hall (AP) def. Heath Majors 6-4, 6-2; Doubles

Bromfield/Powell (AP) def. Sparks/Lindskog 6-3, 6-1; Rodich/Rodich (AP) def. Salengs/McElheney 6-1, 6-1; Hall/Levitanis (AP) def. Kaumanns/Majors 6-3, 6-2.

Scores (out of 400 possible points):

Brandy Butler 369, Jenny Beals 343, Tammy Moore 318, Kate Blaise 315.

Rifle

Austin Peay's rifle squad finished second in a regional match at Memphis Saturday.

Host Memphis won the even with a 1453. APSU shot a season-high 1345 for second place.

Alabama Birmingham placed third with 1171.

Scores (out of 400 possible points):

Brandy Butler 369, Jenny Beals 343, Tammy Moore 318, Kate Blaise 315.

Nails, Tanning & Stuff

A Full-Service Nail, Tanning Salon & Skin Care Salon

105 N. First Street

645-0207

TRACY — OWNER

NICOLE — SKIN SPECIALIST

TANNING

$25 month

Unlimited

with Student ID

Expires 02-18-97

$2 off any NAIL SERVICE

with Student ID

Expires 02-18-97

Keep recycling work

Buy recycled.

Keep recycling work

Buy recycled.

Celebrate America Recycles

on November 1st.

For a free brochure, please call 1-800-242-5250 or visit our web site at www.epa.gov.

AD EPA

PIZZA
PAPA JOHNS
Better Ingredients.
Better Pizza.

South Clarksville & APSU Campus 551-3000

LARGE PIZZA
1 TOPPING $5.99
Sunday - Thursday 7 p.m. - Close

EXTRA LARGE PIZZA
2 TOPPING $9.99 + Tax
Sunday - Thursday 7 p.m. - Close

BREAD STICKS & CHEESESTICKS
$4.99
EXPIRES May 31, 1998

TANNING
$25 month
Unlimited
with Student ID
Expires 02-18-97

$2 off any NAIL SERVICE
with Student ID
Expires 02-18-97

$2 off any Waxing Service
with Student ID
Expires 02-18-97

Features

February 11, 1998

APSU's Neal finds success despite the odds

By ALICIA MOOREHEAD
Editor-in-Chief

Austin Peay State University senior Angela Neal is a success story, overcoming a disadvantaged background to accomplish more things in her three years at the University than many people do in a lifetime.

Neal, originally from Clarksville, graduated from Northeast High School in 1993 with help from Austin Peay's High School Upward Bound program. High School Upward Bound is a TRIO grant program that helps low-income students perform better in high school and prepares them for college.

While in high school and in the Upward Bound program, Neal was placed in foster care and moved to different homes. "Growing up I didn't think I was going to be anything, but when I went into foster care I really blossomed," she says. "I thought, this is sink or swim. If I am ever going to do anything with my life, now is the time."

Neal credits Upward Bound for giving her the stability and the courage to do more. "Upward Bound was always there," she says. "It gives you confidence to do something and be a part of something you thought you couldn't."

Upon graduating high school, Neal went to the University of Hawaii for her freshman year of college. She missed Clarksville and decided to come home to Austin Peay. "I love my school (Austin Peay) and feel like I am a part of it," Neal says.

Returning to Clarksville, Neal decided to give something back to Upward Bound by becoming a tutor/substitute teacher as well as editor of the alumni newsletter. As a result of her work with Upward Bound, Neal was selected to serve an internship in Washington, D.C., in the spring of 1995. She worked as the TRIO desk director for the United States Student Association (USSA), where she lobbied for funding for all TRIO and other financial aid programs. When her internship ended in May, the National Council of Educational Opportunities Association (NCOA), the national lobbying group for TRIO programs, asked her to work for them through the summer. "I was the first TRIO desk director in 20 years that NCOA asked to stay, so that was pretty exciting," Neal says.

Neal, who is a biology/premedicine major, stayed active in lobbying for financial aid when she returned to Austin Peay. She organized the "Stop the Raid on Financial Aid" phonathon, where cellular phones were provided for students to call and express concern about financial aid cutbacks.

Because of her involvement with financial aid, Neal was invited to join 10 other students from all over the United States and meet with President Bill Clinton in Washington. She shared her concerns about financial aid with Clinton, and she talked with him about High School Upward Bound.

Outside of the financial aid realm, Neal has worked with Music Television's Rock the Vote campaign, helping students register to vote. She also was a finalist for the Harry S. Truman Scholarship Award in the spring of 1997. The Truman Foundation offers scholarships to 75 and 85 students a year from around the country. Community service is a main factor in awarding Truman Scholarships. Neal was nominated by Dr. David Kanervio, professor of political science.

Additionally, Neal was selected as the Tennessee Board of Regents student representative to the Tennessee Higher Education Commission. For this 1996-97 position, she was nominated by Austin Peay and chosen by Tenn. Gov. Don Sundquist over two other finalists.

This past fall, Neal attended a celebration of the 25th anniversary of the Pell Grant hosted by the NCOA and the College Board. Secretary of Education Richard Riley, Clinton and other political leaders attended the celebration where Neal was featured as a TRIO/Pell grant "success story."

At Austin Peay, Neal is the Student Government Association president, and it is in this role that she takes the most pride. "This is my biggest accomplishment," she says. "When I met with President Clinton, I was only selected by a small group of White House staff, but as SGA president I was selected by 488 students. It's the thing I am most proud of."

Neal served under the previous two SGA presidents as their executive assistant. In that capacity, she launched a G.H.O.S.T. (Great Halloween Opportunities for Safe Trick-or-treating) project that has become an annual event. The program gives children in the community a safe environment in which to participate in Halloween activities. "We get so much from the community, it almost seems like we don't give that much back," Neal said.

Neal constantly is looking to the future. She will graduate in May and is applying to East Tennessee State University's medical school. She wants to be a general practitioner and, eventually, a hospital administrator. "I am not interested in the money; I am more interested in providing a service for those who can't afford medical care," Neal says.

One of the things Neal is most proud of is her representation of the TRIO programs. Austin Peay, the TBR, the state of Tennessee and many other constituents. "It's all kind of tied together and I am doing the best I can to represent their needs and do positively," she says.

Although she enjoys her success, Neal is looking forward to graduating and to medical school. However she will never forget where it all began. "I've done a lot, but it all started with Upward Bound. It is their success and not really mine."

Wooing in the '90's, Chuck Woolery style

By CHRISTINE TATUM
College Press Service

Chuck Woolery was only 12 when he made his red love connection.

He got away with asking out an older woman — she was all of 15 — because he was already six feet and shaving.

They took a bus to the movies and kissed in the arched theater.

You kissed on the first date, Chuck?

"That was a much more innocent time — 1955 I believe," said the long-time game show host, known as his stints on "Wheel of Fortune," "Love Connection," and now "The Dating Game." "It's just fine to kiss on the first date. In fact, I think it's neat. What are you waiting for? It's just a kiss."

When it comes to dating, Woolery insists he hasn't seen it all — but, he concedes, maybe more than most. (Like that date between a 92-year-old man and 88-year-old woman who decided to spend their first day together, hot-air ballooning.) He's made plenty of mental notes through the years on what "dos" and "don'ts" of dating but has pretty much kept them to himself.

Until now.

He's no expert on relationships and doesn't propose to be, yet people pour out their hearts to him. As he strolls down the street to describe their dream and perfect matches, they lament in graphic detail about the last date they took to dinner that ended in tears.

Even he's not sure what he did to deserve such luck. Maybe it's his quick smile and contagious laugh. Or the way he patted that comfy couch with overstuffed cushions to make room for his next "Love Connection" guest. It might even have been his gentle but firm way he referred contestants dismissed after their disastrous outings.

"I've seen better lookin' legs in a bucket of chicken, Chuck!" a man once crowed on the air to a woman he sensed was about to jilt him.

"She cried, oh, man, did she cry. I mean sobbing," Woolery said. "And there I was trying to keep everything running smoothly with a smile on my face."

"I think people should be very careful about matters concerning the heart," he continued. "Dating could be fun, but it does come with certain responsibilities."

Woolery, a Kentucky native and U.S. Air Force veteran, is more conservative than the foosey-boosy atmosphere in which he works. ("Bachelor

No. 1, which ingredient in a banana split is your favorite and why?") He detests foul language and prefers that men ask women out, not the other way around.

"I guess I'm old fashioned that way," he said. "By the same token, it's not the end of the world if a woman wants to call someone up because she's going to be alone on a Saturday night."

He's been married for 13 years and has four children — two stepdaughters in college and two sons, one in elementary school and one who is only 20 months old.

His daughters couldn't date until they turned 17, he said.

"It wasn't a hard and fast rule," he said. "We just encouraged them to go out in groups. I'm very big on group dating. I think it's a great thing because people can go out and get to know each other as friends. Friendship is, after all, the foundation on which all successful relationships are built."

"And group dating also opens up options," he continued. "It's very important to keep your options open."

Woolery's observations:

* The biggest mistake people make on a date is not being themselves.

* Forget worrying about all those good manners and protocol," he added. "If you are trying to be somebody other than yourself, you're going to be awkward and found out right away."

* Clothes say a lot about you — even things you may not have intended.

* Woolery's observations:

* If you have a hemline up around your rear end, you're going to get a lot of attention," he said. "It's up to you to decide if that's really the attention you were hoping to attract."

* Flashing wads of cash doesn't necessarily win hearts.

Not even for the guy who took his "Love Connection" date to a lavish dinner, then whisked her away in a helicopter to his private yacht — an evening that cost him more than $3,000!

"Yep," Woolery said. "The suavest dating approach is the most honest one. That guy may have had money, but he acted like a big jerk. She hated every minute of the time they spent together, and she then got on national television and told everyone all about it."

* Honesty is the best policy.

* Don't say you're going to call, if you really aren't," he said. "Everyone appreciates the truth. Maybe not right away, but eventually. Lying is easy, but it isn't smart."

Art Exhibit, Truhern Gallery

Mixed media collage works by guest artist Dawn Chandler will be on exhibit from Jan. 26 to Feb. 15, in Truhern Gallery. Hours are 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday-Friday, 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Saturday and 1-4 p.m. Sunday. The exhibit is free and open to the public. Telephone 648-7333 for more information.

American Chamber Players

A concert of the American Chamber Players will be held at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Feb. 12, in the concert theatre of the Music/Mass Communication Building. The concert is part of the APSU/Clarksville Community Concert Artist Series and admission is by series membership only. APSU students are admitted free with a ticket which can be picked up in advance at the Music Ticket Office. Telephone 648-7818 for more information.

Art Scene

Upcoming events for Feb. 11-18

Junior Recital — Kendra Harrison will be featured in a Junior voice recital at 5:30 p.m., Friday, Feb. 13, in the concert theatre of the Music/Mass Communication Building. Telephone 648-7818 for more information.

Guest Artist Recital — The Godwin-Thompson Guitar Duo will perform at 7:30 p.m., Friday, Feb. 13, in the concert theatre of the Music/Mass Communication Building. Telephone 648-7818 for more information.

Faculty Recital — Sally Ahner, soprano, will be featured in a faculty recital at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Feb. 16, in the concert theatre of the Music/Mass Communication Building. Telephone 648-7818 for more information.

The Crossword

BODY PIERCING

TATTOO TECHNIQUE

Cleanest Working Area Anywhere
Professional Atmosphere
100's of Designs to Choose From
(or bring your own)
Custom Designs At Your Request
New Needle for Each Client

Autoclave Sterilization Used on All Equipment
Reasonable Rates
Brightest Colors Available
Area's Finest Black and Gray Work
Walk-ins Welcome

Inspected and licensed
by Tennessee Department of Health

Tattoo Technique Studio
129 Franklin St.
(931) 906-3563

Advertise in The All State,
it pays!

Las Margaritas Grill

870 Kraft Street
Clarksville, TN 37040
(615) 645-5796

Buy 2 Combination Dinners for (NUMBERS 1-12) $8.25
OR
$2 Off each $10 purchase
Get your money back when you use this COUPON

LAS MARGARITAS' GRILL
870 Kraft Street • (615) 645-5796

Wednesday
$1.95 16 oz.
MARGARITAS DAY
TRY OUR BUCKETS
$4.25 FOR 36 oz.

Classifieds

The All State

EARN $750-$1500/ WEEK

Raise all the money your group needs by sponsoring a VISA Fundraiser on your campus. No investment & very little time needed. There's no obligation, so why not call for information today. Call 1-800-323-8454 ext. 95.

SEIZED CARS from $175.
Porches, Cadillacs, Chevy's, BMW's, Corvette's. Also Jeeps, 4WD's. Your Area. Toll Free 1-800-218-9000 Ext. A-9432 for current listings.

1 BEDROOM basement apartment, with separate entrance, for rent. $350 a month, includes all utilities (gas, water, electric, and some cable); good neighborhood, safe environment. No alcohol/drugs allowed on the premises; five minutes from campus. If interested call Donna 547-9228.

Free Cash Grants!
College Scholarships, Business,
Medical bills. Never Repay. Toll
Free 1-800-218-900 Ext. G 9432

TUTORS NEEDED

for all subjects

$5.50 to $8.50 per hour based on education and experience.

To apply contact:

Student Support
Services

Ellington Room 318
(931) 572-1231

NATIONAL PARK/OUT-DOOR SUMMER JOBS-Work
in the Great Outdoors. Forestry, Wildlife Preserves, Concession-aires, Firefighters & more. Competitive wages + benefits. Ask us how! 517-524-3112

HELP WANTED
Men/Women earn $375 weekly processing/assembling medical
I.D. cards at home. Immediate openings, your local area. Experience unnecessary, will train. Call Medicard 1-541-386-5290 Ext
118M

STUDENT WORKER needed for the economics department to work six hours a week. Student must have completed QM 3110 with at least a "B." Duties are grading homework, photocopying class material and other duties as assigned. If interested contact Student Financial Aid.

TREAT DEPRESSION
#1 Cause of Suicide
<http://www.save.org>

Student Government Association

Spring 1998 Survey

BRIDGING THE GAP

What you think...
What you want...

The purpose of this evaluation is to give next year's Senators and Executive Officers an idea of what you think and what you want.
Any comments, ideas and suggestions you have are greatly appreciated.

How do you feel about...

Faculty/Staff Student Directory _____

Homecoming _____

Food Service _____

Security _____

Housing _____

Library _____

SGA's Communication with YOU _____

Election Process (SGA and Homecoming Queen) _____

Ice Cream Socials/Forums _____

What do you want us to work on... _____

Other Comments, Suggestions, Ideas... _____

Please return this survey to the Student Government Association
at P.O. Box 4506 or in the SGA Governors Box outside the office in the University Center.

The All State down-investigate the legitclassified advertisers strongly suggests potential consumers do so before investing any money.

AD REPS NEEDED

FOR
THE ALL
STATE
FOR THE SPRING
SEMESTER

IF INTERESTED
PICK UP AN APPLICATION
STUDENT AFFAIRS
ELLINGTON
ROOM 202

Say Happy Valentine's
Day with an RHA
Candy Gram!

Residence Hall
Association

You can send one to someone special, a friend, or someone you work with.

The lowest priced ones are 50 cents
To order one, contact an RHA representative or call the RHA office at 648-7765.