Thirteen members of the Austin Peay State University faculty have been recommended for promotions effective Sept. 1.

Dr. Robert O. Riggs, president of APSU, said he will recommend to the State Board of Regents the faculty members as proposed to him through the university process.

The process involves recommendations from departmental committee, departmental chair, a committee of the academic college and dean of the college to Dr. J. M.

Sawrey, vice president for academic affairs.

Riggs named the faculty members as recommended to him by Sawrey, in addition to those who will be recommended for tenure. The same process is used in tenure recommendation to the board.

Promotions include: Associate professor to professor—Dr. James D. Lester, English and Dr. Robert Sears, physics.

Assistant professor to associate professor—Dr. Patricia Gray, music; Dr. James R. Groseclose, education; Dr. Ronald Gupton, mathematics and computer science; Dr. Sharon Mahey, music; Dr. Lindsay Rudolph, psychology; and Dr. Ellen Weed, sociology.

Matthews was also recommended for tenure in addition to Dr. Stephen Davis, psychology; Dr. Joe Ellenburg, health and physical education; Dr. Phillip Kemmerly, geology; Dr. Leon McQueen, mathematics and computer science; Dr. Albert Randall, philosophy; Dr. Jimmie Ridenhour, mathematics and computer science; and Mildred Wallace, education.

Chairman Appointed

Dr. Carlton H. Stedman has been appointed chairman of the department of education at Austin Peay State University, according to Dr. James Sawrey, vice president for academic affairs.

A professor of science education at APSU since 1975, Stedman came to APSU in 1970 as assistant professor of education and was promoted to associate professor of science education in 1972. Stedman will begin his four-year term appointment effective Sept. 1. He replaces Dr. Fred A. Bunger, professor of education, who will return to full-time classroom teaching to coincide with Stedman's appointment.

The new chairman received the recommendation from the department of education, endorsement by the dean of the College of Education and Human Services and the recommendation of Dr. Sawrey before being appointed by Dr. Robert O. Riggs, president.

Stedman, 46, has a long list of credentials within the educational profession.

He holds a B.S. degree from Concordia (Ill.), a M.S. from Washington University (St. Louis), a M.S.T. from the University of Missouri and an Ed.D. from Indiana University.

The native of St. Louis, Mo., has also studied at the University of Illinois, Knox (Ill.) College, Northern Illinois University, Valparaiso University and Michigan State University.

Stedman has taught at the elementary, secondary and university levels in five states.

Author of 18 papers and letters published in numerous journals, he has held several offices within the Science Association of Tennessee, the Tennessee Academy of Science and the National Science Teachers Association.

A member of several educational organizations and APSU committees, Stedman has served locally and for the school system at Fort Campbell, Ky., as a consultant and an interview participant.

More Than Bridge

Army Wives In ROTC At APSU

Four military science cadets in the advanced ROTC program at APSU expressed marriage-related reasons for enrolling in the program.

Coming from a military family, Dolores Crowell said that she believes having both herself and her husband in the U.S. Army will have a stabilizing effect on their marriage.

Polly Marcieski, a business administration major, related that by becoming an Army officer her job will be compatible with her husband's and at the same time, her opportunities for achievement will not be hindered.

Deborah Brunger wanted more out of being an Army wife than an occasional luncheon or bridge party, so she weighed the pros and cons of civilian and Army employment and decided to enter ROTC at Austin Peay.

She wants to prove that women can be leaders in a predominantly male field.

For Vicki Carter, the diversity offered by the Army was a major factor in deciding to become involved in ROTC. She also said that being married to someone in the Army would make her career more enjoyable.

DSP Not For Dummies

Only two Developmental Studies Programs such as the one at Austin Peay State University exist in the Tennessee schools governed by the State Board of Regents. Tennessee State University in Nashville is the only other school which has such a program.

The program is designed for students coming into the university who are underprepared in certain areas. "Developmental Studies is not a remedial program," said Dr. Albert J. Bekus, coordinator of the program at Austin Peay.

Also involved in the program are assistant professors of English, psychology, mathematics and education, seven paraprofessionals and six student tutors.

Courses in developmental studies are designed so that more personal attention is given to the individual needs of the student. Students in the program determine their own rate of progress and are therefore "perhaps more responsible for their own learning," according to Dr. Douglas K. Gordon, assistant professor of English for the Developmental Studies Program.

If at the end of the quarter, the student has not completed sufficient work for the course, he may arrange with the instructor to be given a progress (pr) grade. The pr grade may stand for up to three quarters in which the student is enrolled in the course and is working to complete the requirements for that course. The grade, according to Gordon, "is an attempt to differentiate that people learn at different speeds."

The paraprofessionals and student tutors involved in the Developmental Studies Program are responsible for giving much of the personal attention that would be impossible if there was only one course instructor. "Someone is always available in the morning hours to help students," commented Evelyn Simpson, assistant professor of psychology for the program.

Paraprofessionals, as well as the instructors and student tutors carefully examine the written work of the students and comment on it extensively, according to Simpson.

Students in developmental studies have recognized that they lack sufficient background in certain areas and are trying to do something about it. "They are ready to accept the fact that they need help in specific areas," Gordon commented.

Plans for the future of the Developmental Studies Program are being made by Bekus and other persons involved in the program. Plans include setting up an annual conference at Austin Peay for faculty, principals and guidance counselors from high schools in the APSU service area. Such conferences would involve the exchange of ideas regarding students coming into Austin Peay from area high schools.

Little exchange between high schools and the university has taken place in the past, and this approach would facilitate implementation of new programs to meet the needs of students entering the university, as well as programs which could be implemented in high schools, Bekus said.

Six hundred forty-two students were involved in the Developmental Studies Program in the 1978 winter quarter. "The program is here to stay," Gordon said, "The word's getting out."

Students in the program are enthusiastic. Donna Cooper, student in the developmental program in English, expressed a typical view when she said, "You know where you're right and wrong." She expressed the

Bad Timing

Coalition Protests Visit From Phyllis Schlafly

In lieu of the recent appearance of Bella Abzug, speaking in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment, the Visiting Artists and Speakers Committee has invited Phyllis Schlafly, a leading spokeswoman for the Stop ERA campaign, to Austin Peay.

The Women's Action Coalition, which organized and sponsored Women's Week and Abzug's appearance at Austin Peay, is opposed to Schlafly's appearance.

Speaking for the coalition, Terry Ware said, "We feel that it (Schlafly's invitation) is a direct result of public pressure and intimidation." She continued, saying the coalition believes the action is for the purpose of counteracting Abzug.

Abzug was invited to Austin Peay because of expressed interest from a group of students and faculty members. To our knowledge, and to the knowledge of the coalition, no group of students has requested or is sponsoring Schlafly's appearance, which was instigated by APSU President Robert O. Riggs.

Riggs reasoned that Schlafly's visit is appropriate, because it keeps Austin Peay neutral, instead of committing the university to one side of the issue. Both sides of the argument over the Equal Rights Amendment will be shown as a result of Schlafly's appearance, according to Riggs, who wants APSU to remain an open forum.

The coalition disagrees with Riggs' reasoning. Ware said, "When Carl Rowan appeared to talk about civil rights, the university did not see fit to invite the grand wizard of the Ku Klux Klan to talk about how absurd civil rights are. Why is it necessary to have Schlafly come to condemn those fighting for their rights?"

Ware explained that the group is fighting for human rights, not just women's rights because, "it's impossible to help improve women without improving men as well."

Another reason the coalition objects to Schlafly's appearance is that persons who have spoken previously at Austin Peay "have been able to present themselves in a factual, rational intelligent manner. In the past, Schlafly has not been known to do so."

We can understand how the coalition must feel after working all year to assure Abzug's appearance, only to have Schlafly's invitation follow soon after, and with the invitation coming at the request of the president.

Perhaps the timing of the Schlafly appearance could have been better, and could have at least been made not to appear a deliberate attempt to counteract Abzug's visit, but we feel that the university Visiting Speaker's Committee was right in asking Phyllis Schlafly to speak at Austin Peay.

At a time when the Equal Rights Amendment is such an important and controversial topic, it seems only fair that both sides of the argument be presented.

We urge wide attendance at the May 9 event and hope people will participate by asking Schlafly questions about her stance on the amendment.

Diversity Of Apoplexy

Answer Near?

EDITOR'S NOTE: Last week Diversity of Apoplexy concluded with Mark Murphy requesting a second vote.

By ALLEN SCHUBERT

"Yes, I do believe so. I am, in fact, a professor of psychology at this institution, which I would gladly have divulged had I not been interrupted. And who, may I ask, is that divulging the whipped cream?"

Zakia broke into a giggle. "Dew-Ron," she squealed.

Jones nodded.

"Hey, it'll be down in three hours," said Mark. "We better get a good seat for the singing Mountain concert."

"If they could bring the mountain to the diversity, why must we go to the mountain?" said The.

"Well," said Mark. "If they could bring the mountain to us, then we can go to the mountain."

The nodded. "I see." The entire group left with Mark and The leading and a ball of whipped cream rolling in the rear.

The concert of the Singing Mountain was over, the song blowing away with the breeze as the sun slowly rose. Soon the sun was directly overhead and only a handful of members of the audience remained, seated on a hill opposite the mountain, sitting perfectly still lest the slightest stir upset their tranquility.

Mark Murphy looked skyward. "It's noon so soon."

"Better a noon soon than a monsoon," said Dew-Ron. He hopped to his feet and stretched. "The only song I heard was the gurgling of my stomach."

Zakia scrambled to her feet. "What? You eat as motionless as the rest of us."

Dew-Ron paused then drew a shield with his purple crayon. "Medusa!" he cried and held the shield to Zakia's face. She turned pale and spun away from the shield.

"What is that?" said The Whole Monkey

Catalog

"Whomsoever greets upon this shield sees their high school transcripts," said Dew-Ron. He erased the shield.

"You chose a terrific way to end a fine concert," growled Fat Wizard. "You had best put away your crayon, or else I'll use it to stuff a Turkey Delight."

Fat Wizard grimaced as he rose from the ground. His legs were sore.

Dew-Ron turned red and slowly put his crayon under his cloak.

Fat Wizard sighed.

"Where's Serenity Jones?"

They looked about and spotted him sitting in the shade of a tree. He was fat and bearded again, dressed in robes.

"Amazing," said The. "Simply amazing and astounding."

They gathered around Serenity Jones. "Ahh," said Fat Wizard. "You are once again the Serenity we knew."

"Not quite, unenlightened one," said Jones. His voice was more high-pitched and nasal than usual. Jones looked about, then settled into a more comfortable position and closed his eyes.

"Perhaps we should leave him," said Zakia. The others nodded and they moved off.

After they arrived at the student center, the five split up. Dew-Ron went one way, Zakia and Fat Wizard went another way, and Mark Murphy and The Whole Monkey Catalog went a third way.

"Indefinitely enjoyed the concert," panted The. "Being a monkey, The had difficulty keeping pace with Mark's walk."

"Yeah, good concert," mumbled Mark. They walked a few more steps, then stopped.

The peered up at Mark. "What is it?"

Mark crouched and whispered. "During the concert, I had a vision. It might be important."

The nodded. "What was it?"

"The entire Diversity of Apoplexy campus is riddled with tunnels, underground tunnels. And certain buildings have secret passage ways."

"A clue, do you think, Mark?"

"Yes. What do you think?"

"I think you should stop crouching. People are beginning to get us confused." The sat on a nearby bench and rested his chin in his hand. "Your vision is undeniably significant. I think I now know where the answer lies."

importance of feedback as opposed to papers being collected and handed back with no explanation of the mistakes.

Educators are advocating a diagnostic-prescriptive type of education as the key to quality instruction. This is based on the belief that learning should be conducted according to the individual's capacity to comprehend and retain new information.

Learning packets, learning centers, team teaching, individually guided education and individually programmed instruction are innovations designed to make this goal of individualization a reality.

We feel that adventures such as the Developmental Studies Program represent a giant stride for educational attitudes, and we hope that the program's coordinates reap the benefits of cooperation and funding necessary to the continuation of this worthwhile endeavor.

Writer Questions Biblical Ties With No Booze Rule

Dear Editor:

I recommend rephrasing the question "should adults be allowed to drink alcohol on a college campus?" to:

"Is this a Bible-belt university or just a university located in the Bible-belt?"

Thank you, Richard W. Lewis

Dear Editor:

I want to take this opportunity to commend Danita Morris, her Austin Peay State University Week Committee and the Student Government Association for the outstanding work they did in putting on "APSU Week."

"APSU Week" consisted of six and one-half days of varied activities—morning, noon and night—designed to inform and entertain students, faculty and staff of the university and members of the non-University community.

The goal was to develop greater school spirit in the members of the university community and improve relations between the university and the non-university community. I think the goal was achieved.

The idea for having "APSU Week" developed in the Student Government Association earlier in the school year. Through efforts of the SGA appointed committee for "APSU Week," the week's activities were planned, and through efforts of this committee and other students who volunteered to assist, the planned activities were organized and implemented.

"APSU Week" is an example of a student conceived, planned, and implemented activity, and I commend the SGA for undertaking this considerably large activity and carrying it to a successful completion. I hope the "APSU Week" celebration will become an annual affair with each year being greater than years preceding.

Sincerely yours, Charles N. Boehms Vice President for Student Affairs

Sewell Wins Office

By JAN AYLSWORTH

MURFREESBORO—Cindy Sewell, a junior majoring in elementary education at APSU, was elected president of the Student Teachers Education Association on Friday.

She is also president-elect of Austin Peay's Student National Educators Association, and served as vice president this academic year.

Two of her campaign promises to the STEA delegates were to circulate a monthly newsletter and to hold frequent officer's meetings to foster communications between the executive committee and the participating chapters of the organization.

The conference, held at Middle Tennessee State University, featured George Kersey, president of the Tennessee Education Association.

Representing some 44,000 TEA members, Kersey told the college students that his organization was focusing on three main issues. First, he urged active involvement in legislation concerning education. He said that through this medium, a higher quality of education can develop.

Secondly, Kersey focused on the rights of TEA members and non-tenured teachers. He said that he no longer believed that doing a job well was protection from the viciousness of capricious school boards.

In stating the importance of teacher's negotiating with school boards, Kersey said, "You as beginning teachers next year will be affected. Professionalism is active; it is not sitting down and taking orders."

"You must be willing to ask why not," he stated. Vernon Johnson, director of the division of special education with the Department of Education, spoke about mainstreaming, saying that it was "one of those gowns that covers everything and touches nothing."

Johnson said that he was in favor of utilizing the word "mainstreaming" with the phrase "least restrictive environment."

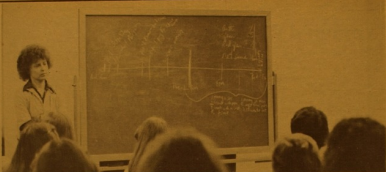

According to Johnson, the state of Tennessee was supposed to serve all of the handicapped children by 1974. As of February of 1978, he said that there were only 72 children in the state not involved in education.

He said that although these children did not attend school for legal reasons, the Department of Education was still in contempt because every single handicapped child was not being served.

Johnson also said that since the funding of education is not consistent with the quality of education, the burden of bridging the gap falls on the teacher.

Johnson said that legislative action could allot $60 million for implementing the "least restrictive environment."

In a group discussion on the rights of student teachers, Aubrey Witherington, of the TEA staff, told students that under direct supervision in the classroom, they have the same rights and responsibilities as teachers who are employed by the school board.

College Republicans

GOP's Plan Convention

By BOBBY JONES

The College Republicans are hard at work preparing for the Tennessee College Republican Federations' annual state convention to be held tentatively the second weekend in April of 1979.

Drafting a new constitution and electing the state council officers for the 1979-80 school year are on the agenda for the convention.

Not only are the republicans thinking about conventions, but they are taking a part in this year's governor's race in Tennessee.

Being uncommitted in their specific preference for governor, the College Republicans are trying to spawn an interest in the "advantages of the Republican Party."

According to Jill Brinkley, vice president, the College Republicans are on a major campaign of trying to get the word around about their existence.

They invite everyone that is interested to come to the next meeting in the University Center conference room today at 4:30 p.m.

One of the main concerns of their membership drive deals with appealing to the black student on campus. Andy Matthews, president, said, "We want to show them what the Republican Party can offer."

Officers for the College

Republicans are: president, Andy Matthews; vice president, Jill Brinkley; secretary/treasurer, Peggy Wilson; parliamentarian, Pat Phillips; and coordinator, Tim Miller.

District director is Glenn Edgin. Brinkley was appointed to the position of parliamentarian for the state council.

Women's Week Reviewed

By DINAH ENGLAND

Austin Peay's first Women's Week was considered a success by the Women's Action Coalition, according to member Terry Ware.

The week began with an appearance by former congresswoman Bella Abzug at the Dunn Center. Ware felt that the Middle Tennessee press seriously underestimated the attendance.

Some estimates are as high as 1,200 including other colleges and universities. She also said that all workshops were well attended.

The two most popular events were the Wednesday workshop on radical feminism and the symposium on women in religion.

Ware also said that the Tuesday night concert featuring Dr. Sharon Mahry (voice), Pat Grays (piano) and Yvonne Kendall (flute) was the most relaxing part of the week.

The coalition gives a great amount of credit for Women's Week taking place to SGA Vice President Dave Mason.

Just prior to Women's Week, the coalition was not recognized as an organization because of flaws in its constitution, and therefore the group could not sponsor such an event.

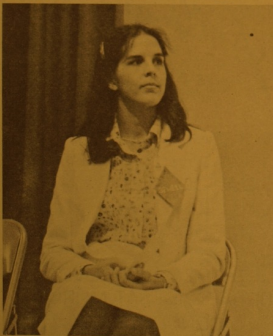

Although Mason didn't agree with all of the group's ideas, he "put himself out on a limb to protect our rights as students," said Ware.

Ware said that the coalition was not created just for Women's Week. They have increased in size to about 40 members, including several men.

They hope to have future speakers and activities. One of their main aims is to begin a family planning clinic at the university.

EQUALITY?—Bob and Nancy Raiha participate in "Toward a New Version of Men and Women," one of the events of Women's Week.

Woman Army Colonel Rights Military Myths

By PAIGE CHARGOIS

Many myths concerning women pervade our society and are inclusive in the Army as well. Col. Lorraine A. Rossi, director of equal opportunity programs for the Department of the Army.

"Yes, I think we find that more often when women are upset about something, they are pushed to the point of being frustrated and maybe cry—but that doesn't necessarily mean that it is bad," stated Rossi. She continued that "maybe it is not a problem...it is something we should deal with and that maybe we should encourage men to react that way more often so that men don't bottle up their feelings."

Rossi seemed to imply that it's more natural to cry when one gets angry rather than haul off and "pop" someone in the nose.

By comparison, Rossi explained, men are thought to be aggressive, but that same trait in women is considered "pushy" (men are good on details (so goes the myth) but women are "picky").

Men are thought to drink in the Army because of excessive pressures but if a female drinks excessively, she is a lush. Further comparing general attitudes towards men and women, Rossi stated that if a male is a stern taskmaster, a female with that characteristic is thought to be "hard to work for."

Rossi, in summarizing some of her personal viewpoints, stated that she is not sure she wants to change our society, myths and all, and the way we live but rather that she feels "balance" is important.

"We do have to realize all those things that have gone into making up that man when she is working over him, beside him or under him."

In November 1977, there were 56,000 women in the Army, and approximately 6,000 of those are officers. The Army plans on doubling its female force by 1983 stated Rossi.

Queried with "Did you have to prove yourself as a woman officer?" Rossi replied that she never felt that she did. She reported into a job, picked up and did what was expected of her to do. "I don't think I ever thought too much about the fact that I was going to have to prove myself."

Capt John L. Hager, professor of military science, stated he was very pleased with the conference and that "the quality of the program was much better this year." Even though the total audience was about even both years, more universities in the second ROTC region were represented last year. "Both male and female cadets benefited from this conference," he continued.

Rossi entered the army in 1962 by direct commission and has commanded troops both overseas and in the continental U.S. She has been awarded both the Bronze Star and the Vietnamese Cross of Galantry medals. She served as the WAC advisor to the Vietnamese women's armed forces.

"The Army will probably soon determine what requirements are needed for a job and then devise a test to determine who best fits that job." In Rossi's opinion, differences between men and women are little importance when compared to differences between individuals when decisions are being made concerning job placement.

Parker Wins Pageant

By PAIGE CHARGOIS

Beauty? Talent? Poise? Personality? Those were the questions that were answered Saturday night in the Miss APSU Pageant presented in the Clement auditorium to a near capacity crowd.

KalaSue Parker answered those questions beautifully according to the judges who selected her as the winner of the Miss APSU pageant.

Parker, a Clarksville majoring in music and elementary education at APSU, sang a medley of Broadway show tunes.

Four other coeds competed for the crown: Leathelia Kelley, a freshman from Nashville majoring in secretarial science, presented a modern dance for her talent selection.

Cathy Diann Payne performed a dance and twirling routine as her talent presentation. A freshman, she is majoring in business education.

Kathy Lynne Moore, a sophomore, is also a native of Clarksville, majoring in music education. She favored the audience with the "Italian Street Song" from the opera Naughty Marietta.

Lynda Anne Wyatt, a Clarksville junior majoring in psychology, tap danced and presented a disco jazz dance for the talent portion of the program.

In between segments of the pageant, Corine

Horner and Miss Tennessee, Linda Moore, entertained the audience with songs including selections from "A Star is Born."

Some members of the audience stated that even though there were fewer contestants this year, the quality of the pageant remained as high as in years past.

Directed by Mildred Deason, dean of student development, judges selected were not affiliated with APSU in any way. Josephine Cowan, a pageant judge from Dixon, is the organizer and director of Two Rivers Mall, Clarksville, and Anita Jolly from Dixon were also judges in the pageant.

Red And White Game

Last Show For Champs

By BILLY FIELDS

The defending Ohio Valley Conference championships will go on display for the final time until fall Friday night at 7 p.m. when the Governors will be engaged in the annual Red White game.

According to coach Boots Donnelly, the Gavs will be divided into two teams through the drawing of names from a hat. Offensive coordinator John Jennings will take the helm of a squad while defensive coordinator Ed Buno will be in charge of the other team.

In retrospect, Donnelly can see many surprises and several disappointments, but he appeared to be happy with the progress in many areas.

The mental attitude worried Donnelly the most as he felt that this is where games are won and lost.

The offensive unit is not making the consistent performances which helped pace the Governors to their first OVC championships last fall, but Donnelly feels that is probably due to the playing of many different athletes in order to fill positions which need to be filled.

The surprises which Donnelly referred to are in the shape of players who have come from nowhere to be in the starting line up. Russell "Two" Brown has had an exceptional spring, while Richard Wozneck has done the same. Nicky Norcia and Barry Monda have both proven to be capable of playing for Austin Peay in the fall.

Donnelly termed Lynn Hailstock and Joe Grimeley, both defensive backs, as having "super" spring practices with improvement and hard work leading the way to the "super" seasons. Mike Meador has been kicking the ball well thus far in all work out.

As a whole the Governors are still lacking in two positions on the defense—linebackers and a strong side end. Donnelly knows that these positions have to be filled and is still looking. Offensively the Gavs need a center as well as improved play on the offensive line. Donnelly went on to say that progress has been reasonable.

In the offensive backfield the Gavs are not running the ball as well as Donnelly expected. He feels that the runners must run the ball with more authority before the Peay will succeed. The quarterbacks, Donnelly commented, are throwing the ball well.

Injuries have not hit APSU as hard as in past springs, but at least five will miss the game Friday. Tim Hickey, Brent Williams, Mike Ross, Rick Coleman and J.W. Hunt will miss the final work out of the spring. Several more are questionable for the game.

The scrimmage is set for 7 p.m. in the Clarksville Municipal Stadium. Admission is free to the public. This will be the final work out for the Governors until the middle of August when they report for two-day workouts in preparation for a Sept. 9 game at UTMartin.

New Director Sought

Everything is topsy-turvy in the Winfield Dunn Center at this time as Austin Peay is taking applications for the position of athletic director. Dr. Joe Brown has served interim director since Dr. George Fisher resigned last December. Brown is the chairman of the health and physical education department as well.

The problem that now faces the people in the Dunn Center is—who is the next athletic director going to be. A percentage of the coaches are wondering whether the money will be tightened or whether it will be distributed more freely. Athletic directors sometimes favor one sport over another, and some of the people in the Dunn Center are worried.

The most private aspect of the situation is the fact that Brown took over the athletic department when there were many rifts. These rifts were very difficult to overcome, and to a degree are still not in the past. However, a new attitude may be taking shape among the athletic people at the Peay. It will be a while before everything falls back into place.

Brown has done a reputable job as athletic director and has been able to make smooth transition into the department. A reason for this may have been the firm foundation which was left by his

fields

predecessor.

Dr. Fred Williams who made the announcement for application, stated, "Dr. Brown's expertise and leadership in that department continues to be outstanding; however, it was deemed unwise and unfair to ask one person to attempt to occupy both positions for an extended period of time."

The logical choice would be to leave Brown in health and physical education because of his education background which is the best in the entire university.

The search now begins for a new director. The field is wide-open to the persons who meet the qualifications. The task of choosing a director will be difficult with a vast amount of time required.

An athletic director who will stand up for Austin Peay sports is a must. A person who can go to the public for its support is also called for. The person selected will be unique because the job requires such a person.

Thinclads Place Second In Austin Peay Quadrangular

The Gavs turned in strong performances over the weekend with a close second place finish in the Austin Peay Quadrangular as well as good finishes from several thinclads in the Illinois Classic.

Zafar Ahmed finished fourth in the university division of the 1,600 meters with a 3:49.7 time, while Keith Shank grabbed second spot in the open division with a 3:52 ahead of several nationally-known runners.

Doug Findley ran his best race of the year in the Illinois Classic with a 53.2 mark in the intermediate hurdles. OVC champion Glen Colivas sprained an ankle in a pole vaulting attempt when his foot went through a thin mat and turned to the side. Colivas will be out about a week.

NEVER TOO YOUNG—Phillip Morrison, age 7, is engrossed in the baseball game at Governor Park after winning a baseball given away between innings.

"I was a little disappointed that the weather caused several of the kids to hold back," Coach Wayne Williams stated. "The meet (APSU Quad) was close because all the teams were throwing everyone in the competition."

Williams was referring to the inclement weather which fell on the Austin Peay campus and turned the track meet into a frigid event. The temperatures dipped into the low 50's with blustery winds forcing the trackmen as well as the scoring crews to look for warmer clothing.

The Gavs will host the Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Championships this weekend which will feature for the first time a team from the University of Tennessee, which is nationally known for its track program.

In addition to Tennessee, Tennessee Tech, Memphis State and Austin Peay will be competing in the university division. Seven colleges are slated to compete in the college division.

Williams feels that the Gavs have a chance to win the meet if the injuries situation can be resolved. Williams put his hopes in the hands of the trainer at Austin Peay, Jeff Daniel and his staff.

"We need a lot of help from the trainers in order to win," Williams said. "How well we do depends on Jeff Daniel and his crew."

Intramural Plans Announced

Innovation is the middle name for the Austin Peay Intramural Recreation Department as tonight marks another first for the Peay.

"We are going to open the pool starting tonight every Wednesday from midnight until 1 a.m.," Buddy Bungarner intramural director, explained. "We just wanted to see how many people want to swim."

The midnight swim is not a new idea and has been a big event at other universities. Bungarner stated that anyone with a valid student I.D. will be able to swim. The outside entrance must be used to get into the pool.

The Intramural Recreation Department is looking for teams to participate in a co-rec softball league. Highlight of this game include a 6-inch ball, four men and four women per team.

Men and women must alternate in the batting order but may play anywhere in the field. Wooden bats will be used and supplied by the Intramural Recreation Department.

Games will be played on Sunday. For further information contact the Intramural Recreation office.

The deadline for entries in the women's singles tennis tournament has been extended to April 28. Play will begin on May 1; check the bulletin board next to the Intramural Recreation office by noon Monday for tournament pairings.

First Tourney Won

The Governors won their first golf tourney of the year with three members firing 71's in the first and only round of the Indiana University Southeastern Invitational last Friday.

Sy Mandie, Bill Holzman and Randy Jacobson each carded a 71 to pace the APSU team to the title. Mandie finished second, Holzman third and Jacobson fourth in the invitational.

Austin Peay won the event with a seven-stroke edge over Bellemine with a 296 total.

Richard Smith shot a 72, Jim Mandie hit a 77, while Jim Linklater jumped to a 79 for the Governors.

The victory in the tourney was the first of the year for the Gobs who are coming off a third place finish in the Tennessee Intercollegiate Tourney which witnessed Jim Mandie take third place as well. The TIC was won by Middle Tennessee with 720. East Tennessee was second, while APSU finished with a 735 in the 36 hole tourney.

The Gobs will play in the Tennessee Tech Invitational Friday and Saturday in preparation for the Ohio Valley Conference championships on May 15-16.

Austin Peay downed the University of Tennessee Monday afternoon 6-4 only to fall in the second game 6-1 to the Vols in Knoxville.

Nick Maneri paced the Govs championship with two hits including a double. Eric Brewer was two for three with a pair of singles to lift the Peay over the Vols. David Wright was credited with the win in the first game but had to have some help from relief specialist Doug Downey in the seventh inning. Downey was given the save for his efforts.

The Vols took the second game giving the Govs a single run on a towering home run drive by veteran Gary Baker. The homer came in the fifth inning with no one on base.

The split leaves the Govs at 14-17-1 on the season which does not include the scheduled game with Tennessee Tech for which the results were not known as of presstime. Austin Peay has rallied down second place in the Ohio Valley Conference behind Western Kentucky who took the Western division title by three games.

The Govs will have to sit back to see the outcome of the championship series which pits Western Kentucky against East Tennessee who coped the eastern title. The Hill-toppers will host the series which begins on May 5 and runs thru the following day.

Mountaineering #1.

FUNDAMENTALS OF MOUNTAINEERING

What is mountaineering all about? Funny you should ask. Because we just happen to have an answer. (Ah-h, life's little coincidences.) Mountaineering is a skill, a science and an art. Yet anyone with a thirst for excellence and normally developed motor skills can master it. Simply study these fundamentals and follow them faithfully.

1. Step one, appropriately enough, starts by selecting the correct site. To do so, pick up a bottle of Busch. This is commonly called heading for the mountains.

2. Okay, here's where the fun begins. Hold the mountain firmly in your left hand, grasp the mountain top with your right hand and twist the little fella off. There you go.

3. Now for the tricky part. Neophytes, listen up: the proper pour is straight down the center of the glass. Only in this way will the cold, invigorating taste of the mountain come to a head.

4. Once poured, pacing becomes paramount. As any seasoned mountaineer will tell you, the only way to down a mountain is slowly, smoothly and steadily - savoring every swallow of the brew that is Busch. If you're a bit awkward at first, don't be discouraged. Perfection takes practice. Soon enough, having emptied your glass and filled your soul, you too will be a mountaineer.
