Housing security aide program axed

By ALICIA MOOREHEAD
editor-in-chief

Beginning next semester, the security aide program will no longer be in effect for the students who live in Sever, Miller, Blount and Harville Residence halls.

The program, which employs about 35 students as security aides and requires that all guests of the opposite sex be signed in and out of the halls, will be discontinued at the end of this semester.

Joe Mills, director of Housing and Residence life, said one of the big reasons they wanted to make the change was that they wanted "to treat everyone the same."

Mills pointed out that students who live in outside apartment halls are not required to sign guests in and out, and are given more responsibility than those who live in enclosed style halls.

In an effort to keep the enclosed halls safe, Housing officials plan to install combination locks on the inside doors of the halls which will be locked 24 hours a day.

Only those who know the combination can gain access to the hall. The outside door will be unlocked all of the time, and the lobbies will be open 24 hours.

Mills pointed out that currently, the security aide program does not begin until 12 p.m., but the lobby is open at 7 a.m. Mills said that it is easy to gain access to the halls early in the morning before the security aide program begins. Because of this, Mills thinks they are improving the safety in the halls.

"The new system is better than the one we have now and will actually be safer," Mills said. "If anything, I think some people have interpreted our security aide program as a hindrance."

Mills said members of the housing staff did talk with some students, and that they "overall were pretty happy we were getting rid of the program," he said.

"We are turning the responsibility over to the student."

Economically, the office of Housing and Residence

Life will be saving approximately $19,000 a semester by not hiring security aides.

Combination locks will cost about $1,000 each, and according to Mills, the rest of the money saved will be used for improvements to the halls. The money they save next semester will go to buy Cross Hall new furniture. "It is definitely going back to the students," he said.

Angel Feagans, a senior and 4-year resident of Blount Hall, is not sure whether she is going to like the changes. "One, because two of my friends are security aides and that puts them out of a job, and two because they are not going to know who is in the building like they do now," she said.

Senior Cheral Miles has lived in an enclosed hall the entire time she has been at Austin Peay. She is opposed to the idea of not having security aides. "Anyone can get in here now, they can sneak them in anytime they want," Miles said.

Residence Hall Association representative Jennifer

Feagans says that they might as well "take all of the doors off of the halls if they are going to do this."

"More people are going to be in the lobby and it is going to be louder than it is now," she said. "I won't feel comfortable going to do my laundry or walking down the hall late at night by myself."

She also says that there are more places for people to hide in enclosed halls than in outside entrance halls.

Shawn Mayes, currently a security aide, says that he thinks there will be more work for the resident assistants. "People are all ready disobeying the rules. It's going to be a lot more noisy," he said.

Some students like Jeana Medford, a freshman, are happy with the change, however. "I love it. It's such a hassle now," she said. "If someone wants to get in, they are going to get in anyway."

Lantern Club remembers Schoepke with memorial

By KELLY WILKERSON
news editor

A memorial display has been set up in the APSU Woodward Library in remembrance of an Austin Peay student who died earlier this year.

Kaci Lyn Schoepke was only 22 years old when she was killed by a drunk driver who crossed the center line and struck her car on Jan. 26, 1996.

Schoepke was a senior English major in her last semester at APSU, anxiously awaiting graduation in May. She had planned to eventually teach English.

On May 10, Schoepke was posthumously awarded a bachelor of arts degree from the College of Arts and Sciences at APSU.

In honor of Schoepke, the Lantern Club, an organization of English majors and minors, has designed a display consisting of 23 books that are being donated to the library.

According to Dr. James Lester, faculty adviser to the Lantern Club, members of the club approached him about doing something in Schoepke's memory. He suggested that they raise money to buy books to donate to the library in her name.

The club raised over $450 to purchase the books, securing a collection of leather bound and adolescent books that will be put into regular circulation after the library display is taken down.

A biography of Schoepke is included in the display.

The biography states, "These books, purchased by her fellow students in the Lantern Club, honor the memory of Kaci, honor her love of English literature, and honor her dream of teaching English."

Education director fired amid controversy

By KELLY WILKERSON
news editor

The Tennessee Higher Education Commission voted to remove its executive director during last Friday's Commission meeting.

Incumbent by Gov. Don Sundquist, the Commission cut Bryant Millsaps by a vote of 6-4.

THEC is the governing body for higher education in Tennessee and meets four times throughout the year to discuss issues concerning the Tennessee Board of Regents System of Schools and the University of Tennessee System of Schools.

Austin Peay falls under the TBR system. The organization primarily serves as a bridge between these two systems to ensure equality between the two systems.

THEC is responsible for budget appropriations for the two systems.

Millsaps's release comes after two weeks of gubernatorial appointments, budget appropriations recommendations and the approval of a program that many legislative officials did not want to see approved.

At a Commission meeting in July, THEC commissioners voted 10-2 to approve an engineering program at the University of Tennessee at Martin.

According to a report in The Tennesseean, Millsaps had been told by Deputy Gov. Preaches Simpkins to pull the UT-Martin proposal for the program and Millsaps refused.

Millsaps said that Sundquist did not want the program approved because he did not want State Rep. Ray Herrold, who at the time was running for the state Senate seat and won that seat in the election, to get credit for the proposal.

In a letter to Dr. James Powers, former chair of the Commission, written by Linda Blevins, one of the newest members of the Commission who was resigning her position, she said that "Ms. Preaches Simpkins, Deputy Governor, called me on Friday morning, September 27. I was surprised to be given an ultimatum concerning the continued service of Dr. Millsaps."

"She asked me if I would agree to fire him in a future vote. She went on to make it clear that if I would not consent to this action, my service would no longer be needed on the Commission," Blevins' letter said.

Student representative to THEC for the TBR school system Angela Neal, who is also an Austin Peay student and was at the meeting said, "I felt that the UT-Martin program had merit and that it was the industry in the area wanted."

"They have already invested millions of dollars into equipment and library sources, among other things. It will be a general engineering program, one of the few in the nation and the only one in Tennessee. This program replaces three engineering technology programs at Martin."

According to Neal, Powers, who also led the movement to fire Millsaps, tried to take away the voting power of Jennifer Childress, the student representative from the UT System, based on the fact that she was a student at UT-Martin and that her voting would be a conflict of interest.

Will Burns, Associate Executive Director for Legal and Regulatory Affairs ruled it was not a conflict, and Childress was allowed to vote on the program.

Powers, who lost his seat in recent redistricting, called the meeting to evaluate Millsaps' performance, resulting in Millsaps' removal.

Millsaps, who has been the executive director for THEC for almost two years, was given a formal performance review in March and was given an excellent rating.

According to Neal, the commissioners voted to fire Millsaps based on informal reviews that the Commission has no documentation for, saying that Millsaps had difficulty working with women and minorities.

"I talked with the director of academic affairs for THEC, Dr. Linda Bradley-Long, who is an African-American woman, and she was appalled by these allegations," Neal said. Bradley-Long also suggested that Millsaps was personally offended because his character had been attacked unnecessarily.

Sundquist has made four appointments to vacated positions on the Commission recently. These four positions comprised part of the seven-person vote that cut Millsaps from his position at Friday's meeting.

"This was their first meeting and they had no experience working with Dr. Millsaps, yet felt it necessary to fire him," Neal said.

"Dr. Millsaps received a great deal of pressure from the state legislature, the governor, and many other influential bodies regarding the UT-Martin program. However, he did his job; he did what the Commission wanted, which is what he works for and then the Commission fired him for it," Neal said.

"After looking at the circumstances and hearing Millsaps admit that communication between him and the state legislature along with the governor had dwindled in the past year," said Neal, "It was in the best interest of higher education in Tennessee to replace him. It would have been very difficult for him to rebuild those bridges," Neal said.

SGA cautious in allocating funds for student organizations

By KELLY WILKERSON
news editor

The Student Government Association (SGA) in its efforts to support and represent the student body of Austin Peay State University, has recently raised concern in response to the passage of certain bills and resolutions through the General Assembly.

Many students do not know what the Student Government Association (SGA) actually does. According to President Jeremy Faulk, the purpose of SGA is to serve as a "place where students can come to express his or her concerns and from there those concerns can be carried forward by policy changes."

Vice President Lane Crawley said that the prime responsibilities of SGA are to financially assist organizations, write resolutions, help and represent the student body, and to serve on university committees.

SGA began the semester with a total budget of $20,941.75. This money comes from the $4 SGA fee charged to every student enrolled at APSU each semester.

The funds are to be allocated to student organizations as they are needed based on the judgment of the SGA Senate.

Most recently, a new student organization known as the Governorettes appealed to SGA for funds "to assist in its development as a new organization."

The Governorettes, consisting of 17 members, were recognized as an official APSU organization on June 4. They have a sponsor and a coordinator/instructor and have been working on their own to raise money to support their organization. They are a dance team who will perform at APSU sport events and pep rallies.

Sen. Amy Spiceland presented the bill to the Assembly requesting $754.56 from the SGA funds to assist the Governorettes in their development.

On the bill Spiceland presented, the total cost incurred for the organization to buy uniforms and to attend out-of-town training sessions was reported as $3,465.60. It was also noted on this bill that the members of the organization were contributing $6.5 of their own money to the cost.

Heated debate of this bill continued for almost two hours, which, according to senators present at the meeting is quite uncommon.

Suggestions by SGA senators which were raised including the organization being raised cheaper uniforms, requesting money from the band, and attending training camps locally.

Some SGA members felt that derogatory comments had been made against the organization.

"I feel that there is segregation in this room at this moment which is an embarrassment to SGA," Sen. Christi Wright said. "They are an organization like the soccer team and the Christian organization, and they have worked hard."

Sen. Hank Ballew commented that, "This is about money for a dance team and not about PC and making everyone happy."

During the discussion, Spiceland noted that the organization had been asked to perform on Nov. 21, but could not do so because they didn't have uniforms.

In her final remarks, Spiceland urged favorable passage of the bill, saying the organization was asking for a minimal amount of money and that the Governorettes were not an organization that would disappear.

The bill passed, granting $653.77 to the Governorettes to assist in their development.

At this same meeting, President Jeremy Faulk vetoed a bill that had passed in the Senate the previous

Thirty years of faith

By CARINDA BASSO
assistant news editor

"He is exalted" echoed throughout the campus, while students, alumni and staff took a look into the past. Recently the Baptist Student Union (BSU) celebrated its 30th anniversary, with a night of memories and songs of praise.

Nearly forty years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Brown were asked to be faculty advisors for the BSU. At this time there was no building, and students met at the cafeteria, the band room, Clement auditorium or sometimes in the "bowling."

During this period there came an interest among students to have a building of their own for meetings and fellowships. The local congregations gave donations while students and faculty worked diligently on the building.

Students spent several weekends and after school time digging field stones from the Brown's farm. These field stones were used to build the walls that surround the building. By doing this the students lowered the cost of the building from $10,000 and the money left over was given to mission work.

The Baptist Student Union means different things to different people, but to senior Richard Tyson it has helped him to stay in school.

"It's given me some identity. It's given me a place to find people with common interests and beliefs," said Tyson.

Jim Alexander, director of the Baptist Student Union, began his search for the history of the Baptist Student Union by looking through the original dedication, program records and keeping in contact with former directors and advisors. The organization itself is 50 years old, but it took the first 20 years to establish a network to where there was local and state support.

"It's an investment, not only in a building but in people," said Alexander.

The students who began the organization believed in the ministry and what it represented as a light and a witness to Christ on campus. The BSU building is a place where students can go to work, study and return to campus as beacons of light.

Alexander felt it was important for students to learn about their past. To see the path that was established for current and future students to follow in the ministry. These individuals that sacrificed their time and efforts for the BSU, are the "historical parents" of the organization. They help members see the beginnings and involvement of people and their faith to make the Baptist Student Union what it is today.

"The students have a legacy, a responsibility to pass on and keep the faith of what has been established before them," Alexander said.

SGA cautious with funds

week giving $80 to a group of graduate students in attending a production of "The Tempest" in Nashville, paying for a third of the cost of the trip which included a $12 ticket price, mileage and childcare.

"I vetoed the bill because the bill was passed after the trip had already happened. The request for funds process is a four-week process, and we have to stay within that process. The veto had nothing to do with the validity of the bill," Faulk said.

According to Faulk, there is a four week process for bills coming before SGA. In the first week, the bill is written and sent through the finance committee, in the second week the bill is presented before the General Assembly and provided that it passes, there are two more weeks required for Student Affairs and the Business Office to process the bill.

Faulk suggests that organizations desiring to request money from the SGA contact their SGA representative at least 6-8 weeks in advance of the time the money is needed.

At previous meetings throughout the semester, SGA passed a bill giving $1,000 to assist a group of students, primarily consisting of SGA members, in attending the Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature. Total cost for this trip was reported as $1,530.

They have also passed bills giving art students $475.47 to attend an art exhibition at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock, and the Crusaders for Christ organization $388 to attend a "Promise Keepers" meeting in Memphis.

Gammie Beta Phi was given $304.80 to attend the state convention in Knoxville, a group of graduate physiology students were given $210.95 to conduct physiology experiments at the University of Indiana at Bloomington, the Financial Management Association was given $360 to assist in attending the Chicago Board of Trade and Mercantile Exchange, and the Health and Human Performance Club was given $497 to attend the state convention of the Tennessee Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance.

In other matters, SGA has made attempts to come through on promises made during last spring's campaign.

A resolution was written by Sen. Chris McArthur to reorganize the Tennessee parking policy on campus. The resolution attempted to abolish ten blue faculty parking spaces in the lot behind Trahern and change these to green commuter parking spots.

The resolution also proposed changing the parking lot beside Archwood and behind the King building for use by senior and/or graduate students, limiting commuting freshman to the parking lot opposite the football stadium and directly behind the ROTC armory. The resolution failed before the Senate.

The Student Government Organization meets regularly on Thursday nights at 7 p.m. in the Governor's Room, Room 313 of the University Center. All students are welcome and are encouraged to attend.

Peay Briefs

The Veterans Student Organization is having their monthly meeting on Nov. 23 at 3:30 p.m. in room 107 of the Red Barn. All veterans, family members, and ROTC cadets are invited to attend.

The Wesley Foundation will be hosting a Hot Potato Discussion on Monday, Nov. 24. The topic will be "The Reconciling Church." Reconciling congregations accept homosexuals as members and will ordain homosexual clergy. Come learn about this rising movement and the controversy surrounding it. Discussion will follow a presentation by Terry Hall, a MTSU student and founding member/officer of MOSAIC (the national student movement for the Reconciling Church). Free, hot baked potatoes with the works will be served at 6:30 p.m. and discussion will begin at 7 p.m. The Wesley Foundation is the United Methodist Student Center, just across its door to all. It is located across from the McCord Building and next door to Johnny's Big Burgers. For more information, telephone 647-6412.

The Baptist Student Union is sponsoring campus caroling on Dec. 3 at 7 p.m. They will meet in the University Center and go around to the residence halls on campus. All students are welcome to participate and a candlelight service will follow. Hot chocolate will be served.

Video Christmas Cards are now available through the National Broadcasting Society/Alpha Rho chapter. The cost is $10 per tape. Tapes can be made Nov. 20-21 from 2-6 p.m. For more information, or for an appointment contact the Mass Communication Office at 648-7378.

The Office of Disability Issues, along with the Tennessee Developmental Disabilities Council and Tennessee Vocational Rehabilitation, is sponsoring a workshop entitled "Breaking Down the Barriers for the Blind and Visually Impaired" to be given by Ellis Parsham, Rehabilitation Counselor for the Blind. There will be two workshops on Monday, Nov. 25. For students, the workshop begins at 2 p.m. in the Clement building, Room 139. For faculty, staff, and administration, the workshop begins at 3:15 p.m. in the Clement building, Room 139.

Students attend TISL

By KELLY WILKERSON
news editor

Several members of the APSU Student Government Association (SGA) along with various other APSU students will be spending this weekend at the state capital building in Nashville participating in the events of the Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature (TISL).

TISL is an event that gives college students the opportunity to prepare and present legislation dealing with any subject they would like to see come before the state legislature.

According to Rebecca McGraw, SGA Senator and TISL coordinator, TISL is organized exactly like the state legislature is, with the participants electing a governor and staff and debating bills as they would be debated on the House floor.

After all the participants present and debate their piece of legislation, the TISL governor and staff will choose ten pieces of legislation to be presented and debated on the Tennessee State Legislature floor. SGA Vice President, Lane Crawley, said "TISL is a great opportunity for us to bring up bills that may actually become law."

Ten students from APSU are attending TISL. Amy Spicerland, Ellen Smith, Jill Perry, Jeremy Paul, Lane Crawley, Rebecca McGraw, Heather Knutson, Dobbin, Jennifer Eberle, and Hank Ballou will be attending the conference, presenting legislation on various topics such as legalizing marijuana, regulating the transport of children in truck beds, recognizing farm days within the state, and restricting the sale of fireworks to children under 12 among various other bills.

"I'm looking forward to TISL because I'll have a chance to be aggressive in Parliamentary procedure," Ballou said.

If any full-time APSU student is interested in attending TISL this year or possibly interested in attending the conference next year, go by the office, located in the University Center today.

Multiethnic Services recognizes Native American history month

By KELLY WILKERSON
news editor

November is recognized as Native American History Month throughout the United States, and Austin Peay is taking part in the celebration.

A collection of Native American artifacts, namely tools used by the Native Americans, is on display in the APSU Woodland Library throughout the month.

According to Dr. Donald P. Joyce, Director of Library and Media Services, the display consists of 460 pieces from the Archaic, Woodland and Pre-Mississippian cultures.

Knives, points, dills, fossils, scrapers, flint geodes, axes and pottery are all found in the caves, representing the historic Native American Culture.

The display is on loan to the library from the "Painted Bear" Johnson and Deborah "Morning Star" Bridges, members of the American Indian Intertribal Foundation.

The library, along with Multiethnic Services, recently hosted a Native American Entertainment Workshop named "Wolf," who performed before a crowd of nearly 100 people in the library. Native American food was served at this event.

Multiethnic Services has scheduled the visit of Native American storyteller, Terry "Standing Bear" Weatherly for Nov. 26 in Clement Auditorium from 11:30 a.m. - 1 p.m.

Planning for the future

By CARINDA BASSO
assistant news editor

A place where you can create your resume, interview with employers, and locate a job before you graduate. Sounds like a fantasy world, but it's right here on Austin Peay's campus.

Career Services is located in Ellington 216 to provide you with the materials you need for your job search.

Career Services provides several services that students can utilize in their job search. Sample resumes are available for students to use as well as Resume Expert, a computer program that allows the student to answer questions while forming a resume.

Students can also make an appointment for resume counseling and will very soon be able to put their resume on the worldwide web.

A placement file is one way of ensuring a place in the job market. This file includes the student's resume, personal data sheet, transcripts, authorization form and recommendation sheets. Companies call Career Services for students with different skills and abilities, and if the students meet the criteria, their file will be sent to the company.

Video tapes are also on hand to provide interviewing techniques and tips for creating a professional resume. Books are available on various careers and graduate schools.

The office also provides workshops on resumes, interviewing and several other topics.

Currently Career Services is working on their web page, where they will feature listings of jobs, web pages from other companies and information on graduate schools.

The job listings come along with newsletters and classified ads from 64 cities in the United States and are available on the board in front of Career Services and the board located near the P.O. boxes in the University Center.

Billy Boyd, director of Career Services, recommended that students begin getting their placement file together along with researching companies.

The junior year is the prime time to begin doing the work for the job hunt, because it is estimated that it will take 3 to 9 months to find a job. By preparing early, the student can be more prepared for their senior year. They will have eliminated certain companies and will be zeroed in on the company they are interested in.

Boyd has found Career Services to be an effective method for students. The students can look at the job market as well as attend career fairs and on-campus interviewing. It takes a great deal of work but in the end it pays off with a job the student is happy with.

"Some students really don't want to work. They want us to give them a job, which we can't do, we can only give them the resources," Boyd said.

Boyd compared Career Services to a boot camp. You don't go to war without going through boot camp. It gets you prepared for any and every thing that could happen in war time.

Career Services prepares students for the job market and every obstacle they may face, so they can adjust and move on. In the end, Boyd narrowed the job search to a single statement, "to find a job is a job."

Career Services provides several opportunities during the semester for students to be hired or gain information on particular companies or businesses.

The first Monday in October is reserved for the annual Career Fair, where employers come to interview and possibly hire students for jobs. This is followed by the Nursing/Allied Health Day, which is also held in October.

Boyd said the two events may be combined next year due to the recent changes in the health care field.

On-Campus Recruiting is also held in the fall semester, where companies come to campus and interview students for possible employment.

Teacher Recruitment Week is held in the spring semester during the last week of February. School systems from around the country, primarily the southeast, come to the UC Ballroom and interview student teachers for jobs.

The conclusion is the Nashville Job Fair, held the last Thursday in March, where approximately 150 companies come to Opryland Hotel to interview and hire students.

Due to the Thanksgiving holidays, the Allstate will not print an edition next week but will return on Dec. 4 for our final issue.

Security aides needed

by
JOHN ALLEY

A couple of weeks ago a friend of mine who currently works as a security aide told me that his job and every other security aide's job would not exist next semester. The office of Housing and Residence Life informed the security aides at their last meeting that this was partially due to the fact that students are complaining about not getting equal treatment.

I can understand wanting to be treated equally and I remember when I lived on campus how I thought it was really stupid that we had to check in our guests if they were of the opposite sex. However, it is just me or is this going to cause more problems?

I know that we are all adults and should be treated as such, but what about the students' safety? If I am not mistaken, what is going to happen is the doors of Miller, Harvill, Bloom and Sever will be locked 24 hours a day and only those individuals who live in the dorm will have the combination.

Right! Maybe it won't be as bad as I think but, I remember how easy it was for people to get the combination of other dorms, and I would hate to see campus rape increase.

Having the security aides there to check in those individuals allows for some kind of protection. How on earth can a combination lock be more safe than 35 or more security aides?

I don't get it.

How on earth can a combination lock be safer than 35 or more security aides?

And what about the 35 or so security aides? I mean these are students for Christ's sake! For some, this job was their only source of income. What are they expected to do now? I doubt very seriously that they have been any provisions made in order to ensure them another campus job. I guess they're just S.O.L. now, right?

What I really don't understand is why were the security aides informed this late in the semester? This obviously was planned so why weren't they told early enough in advance so they could have enough time to find another job if needed? Obviously the administration doesn't see the security aide program as an asset and isn't concerned with students' safety. On the behalf of all security aides I must say that this decision isn't fair. Deciding to eliminate a program which will result in 35 or more students being left without a job doesn't sound like a decision that was well thought out.

How can the administration allow something like this to happen? To me, one's safety doesn't come with a price. What is it going to take to realize this? A few more campus rapes?

Maybe I am just helping this all out of proportion but, I just can't help think of those individuals who chose to live on campus because they thought it was safer than living anywhere else.

There will be a lot of changes here at Austin Peay next semester that will take some adjustment. This is just another one to add to the list.

A prayer for Turkey Day giving. We thank you, O Father, for this greatest of all of the countries in the known universe.

Although the Americas were inhabited by savages, your loving, guiding spirit led us in glorious triumph as we exterminated those barbarians in the name of Jesus Christ.

We sing magnificent praises to your name after you allowed us to spread the glorified Gospel of peace to the godless heathens, well, the ones that we didn't have to kill that day.

You continued to shower blessings upon your most favored nation by giving us the Negro. We are truly grateful, Lord, for letting us build the most powerful economy in the world using the blood, sweat, and tears of millions of African slaves.

And when we freed the slaves, you rewarded our supreme act of Christian beneficence by providing this great nation with a permanent underclass comprised of African-Americans, as well as many other deprived and disadvantaged elements of society.

How wise you are to let these obviously inferior people supply us with a source of cheap labor so that every middle-class family can have VCRs, Due-O-Matic Vegetable by Rusco, and many other such necessities of life.

Thank you, O gracious God, for the bounty of good things that you have given us. We know we are blessed because every day we have to put up with all of the infernal third-world beggars (not to mention the beggars from our own country) that march at every corner that falls from your overflowing (but well-deserved) table.

We know how important it is to be good stewards, Lord, and so we valiantly try to keep the material goods of this world where they belong—in our pockets. We think that we are not as other countries are—greedy, unjust, corrupt, gluttonous, n'er-do-wells. We only pray that one day you will bless these other countries if they become as virtuous as we surely are.

Above all, we give thanks for our God-given Anglo-Saxon heritage. Truly, we are your chosen people. In the past, it was America's "manifest destiny" to overstep the continent.

We certainly succeeded in that undertaking. Now, most just and omnipotent God, we humbly petition you to share your loving clemency upon our continued exposure to fulfilling our manifest destiny of providing the world with American capitalism, American-style democracy, and of course, the good news of Jesus Christ.

We thank you again, heavenly Father, for all of the many blessings that you have afforded this most extraordinary country. I only pray that you give the United States that which it so richly deserves.

said "To the thinking man life is a comedy, to the feeling man life is a tragedy." Could anything better nail down the difference between a liberal and conservative.

For example, what does every-one think about Jesse Jackson and Kwesi Mfume's efforts to make Texas born to NAACP demands to hire and promote more blacks in the company. Although I question their motives, I can still laugh at a man who speaks of doing right that is faster to 3 illegitimate kids from three women in his former congressional district.

I laugh even harder at that sniveling Texaco CEO Peter Bijur. This guy comes on TV thanking the NAACP for "helping him" and expects us to actually believe he really welcomes what has happened to him.

I'm not a bad guy, I simply like to look at the ironies of life, especially when they favor my ideas and ways of thinking, and laugh at them. I don't, however, try to force my ways and means on others, and I believe that is the difference between me and them.

My first SGA meeting

Senators need to grow up

by
HEATHER
guest columnist

The scene: Thursday night's regular Student Government Association meeting. The agenda: to decide whether or not to give the Austin Peay Government money to start their organization and to decide if some graduate students should be reimbursed for seeing a play, or was that really the agenda?

I had never attended an SGA meeting until I had to for my news reporting class.

Yes, I did know a bit about the student political scene since I was very active in the Student Council during my high school career. I never knew it was this difficult, though, to try to get funding from a student organization for a student organization, considering that's one of SGA's primary purposes.

Last week, Senate Act 012 was vetoed by President Jeremy Faulk after a technicality with the timing of the bill.

There was a big mix-up, according to Sen. Heather White, and the graduate students were the ones to suffer.

But Faulk said that if they allowed this one to go through, then all the others had to do the same.

I totally agree, although I thought they should have reconsidered the bill if the communication gap was that big. But that wasn't the biggest problem to occur that evening, as I soon found out.

The biggest problem was the two hours it took to pass a bill involving the newly formed Austin Peay Government, a different kind of dance team from the pom-pom squad.

Sen. Amy Spiceland brought the bill before the Finance Committee last week, and this week she was trying to get it passed by the senate.

But from the beginning, there were problems. Spiceland had typed the wrong information on everyone's brief they had received prior to the meeting, so she spent the first 15 minutes trying to correct it.

Well, that didn't last too long because all kinds of questions came up on the floor, and one senator even went so far as to recommend that the bill be thrown out because of the mistakes.

What got to me were the "concerns" that the questioning senators had. These questions never seemed to end, and because of that, motions to prolong the debate kept occurring while the senators continued to ask the same questions that others had already asked or been answered.

Some senators got so bored that they fell asleep. The scene was ridiculous. If the senators would have paid attention then maybe they would have gotten out of there sooner.

Senators were finding something they could to debate and got nothing accomplished on all issues that didn't even tie to the topic were brought up. I thought they were there to debate on the Government's bill, not whether blacks danced differently than whites. Yet, that actually got thrown into the mix.

The issues were controversial, money and skills, not that. Come on! Grow up just a bit and get out of that cave you're in. I think people were talking politics. What a waste of time!

What upsets me the most is that it was this difficult to get funds for a recognized campus organization.

Everyone who pays tuition is eligible to receive help from SGA because everyone pays for it through their SGA fee. (Check your fee statement.)

I strongly encourage anyone to attend an SGA meeting. It's open to the public, and although I guarantee that it will be as entertaining as the one I attended, most then you will see just what I am talking about.

And by the way, after all that nonsense, the bill got passed anyway. Go figure.

Letters to the editor

Opinion page is for opinions

In response to Crystal Knight's letter on Lydia Melton's "Democrat Does Dole" piece of two weeks ago, I would like to ask Ms. Knight if she actually read the column. Ms. Knight stated that Ms. Melton was giving her opinion more than the facts. On that point, Ms. Knight is correct for it was an opinion column on the opinion page. Had this been a news story, Ms. Melton's shortcomings in not seeing both sides of the issue. Also, Ms. Knight stated that Ms. Melton was being very biased in her account of the Dole visit. This statement was redundant because Ms. Melton herself admitted to that in her piece.

Next time I hope Ms. Knight will read the All State more thoroughly so she can get a better grasp of what is really being said on the pages. I realize that Ms. Knight has as much right to her opinion as I do to mine and Lydia Melton has to her but I find it hard to respect the opinion of someone who blatantly doesn't seem to know what they are talking about. This is college, learn to read please.

Common hour not fair

The common hour is not fair! I'm a foreign language major and the common hour has resulted in my language classes at the 1020 level to be scheduled at the same time. Help the many! and screw the few! I do. Knit, so. This university isn't big enough to have a common hour. With some students being limited to classes that are taught once a year and only in the spring semester, by one professor is ridiculously unfair. Hire more professors now. Until then, Austin Peay should concentrate on a common minute on the weekend that organizations can meet.

Pope should exercise powers

This writer is a Roman Catholic and a former seminarian. Let it be known that those Christians who voted for pro-abortion politicians such as William Clinton became direct accomplices in the bestial abortion holocaust. As accomplices to murder, these pseudo-Christian voters committed mortal sin and defaced excommunicated themselves. Long ago Catholic priests and especially bishops such as Pope John Paul should have provided these specific instructions of moral therapy—long ago!

In 1948 saintly Pope Pius XII declared the excommunication of all Catholics in Italy who voted for Communist political candidates. Pope John Paul who was a student at Rome in 1948 has the similar obligation to employ the remedy of excommunication in the matter of Catholic pro-abortion voters and legislators.

Millions of unborn children would not have been aborted if the Polish Pontiff had acted decisively by utilizing the Christ empowered prerogative of excommunication. Pope John Paul failed to fulfill his responsibility as defender of faith and morals. The Pope bears guilt in the slaughter of the unborn innocents.

The American politically correct bishops and cardinals have also acted like mute dogs because of cowardice. The crimson prelates will be strictly judged by the Savior whose own life was savagely abused by unfaithful priests.

Governettes owed apology

As a senator on the Student Government Association, fellow student, and friend, I wish to extend a deep apology to The Governettes and especially Chanika Nance. The Governettes are a new duly recognized organization at APSU this year. Their purpose is to provide entertainment in the form of major events at APSU athletic and other community events.

Thus far, The Governettes have performed at the African American Student Association's Homecoming Pep Rally and in the Homecoming Parade.

Unfortunately, they have not been able to entertain the APSU community more. Why? Because the Governettes currently lack the funds to purchase essential items necessary to perform.

After sponsoring fundraisers and personally contributing $65 per individual necessary funds were not raised.

Therefore, The Governettes approached the Student Government Association for assistance in funding. The Governettes requested $754.46 although they will incur costs of approximately $3,500 so they can become properly organized.

The bill eventually passed after one failed amendment and approximately two hours of debate. My concern is to the belligerent, arrogant, hostile, and out rule manner in which some members of Senate addressed Chanika Nance, the representative of the Governettes at the meeting.

The attacks directed to her were unnecessary and misplaced. As a fellow student and a human being, Ms. Nance deserved the respect that any person should be granted.

I personally find it disturbing that this episode will negatively reflect on the integrity of the student body. It is unfortunate that such incidents continue to occur but perhaps this particular one will cause some students to consider the impact of their actions and words.

Lady Govies go for repeat

By SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

New coach Susie Gardner inherits a team that posted the best record in school history a year ago. The Lady Govies are coming off a season where they defeated 21-8, 13-3 in OVC action, and advanced to the NCAA Tournament, falling to the Clemson Lady Tigers.

In addition to capturing their first OVC championship, the team set records for consecutive wins, consecutive conference wins, rebounds in a game, free throws made and attempted in a game, and free throws made and attempted in a season.

The squad lost three starters from the record-setting campaign, including the entire backcourt of Susan White and Carrie Thompson, and forward Sonja Cox.

That fact will not deter the Lady Govies in their quest for a second OVC crown.

Senior forward Simone Caldwell returns after averaging 12.8 points per game and 6.9 rebounds per game. The former All-State girls player from Oak Ridge, Tenn., was last year's leading scorer and the OVC Tournament Most Valuable Player.

"She always seems to find a way to score, is an outstanding rebounder and also can be a great defensive player," said coach Gardner of Caldwell.

"Perhaps the greatest contribution she brings to the squad is her confidence to play in and win the big games."

Also returning for the squad is junior Amanda Behrenbrinker. The 6-foot-1 center/forward averaged 9.7 points and 7.9 rebounds per game. Hailing from Lapeer, Michigan, she led the team in rebounds for the second straight season.

"Amanda is in incredible physical condition and has a tremendous work ethic," Gardner said.

Another key returnee is senior Colleen Polzin, a 6-foot-1 center/forward from Bloomington, Minnesota. She is a three-year starter who will probably play more at the center spot this season.

"Colleen is incredibly strong in the low block," Gardner said. "She is a smart player—a proven rebounder who uses her strength inside to draw fouls."

Looking for added playing time will be returnees Tracey Drechsel (11.1 ppg, 2.3 rpg), Heaven Hayden (1.7 ppg, 1.5 rpg), and Julie Virta (2.4 ppg, 1.4 rpg).

Sophomores Angelica Suffren and Rhonda Neely, as well as junior Natalie Bukovick, also look to contribute to the Lady Govies' chances for a repeat.

Austin Peay's two freshmen are sisters, from triplets, no less. Stephanie and Melissa Coker are from Russellville, Ky.

An added bonus for the Lady Govies is the return of Austin Miller, a guard who played two seasons for the team, from 1992-94. The fifth-year senior is from Villa Park, Ill.

"Andrea has a good three-point outside shot," Gardner said, "and can be a consistent scorer for us."

Coach Gardner played collegiately at Georgia from 1982-86 after an All-State career at Mt. Juliet H.S. Last year she was an assistant head coach at San Diego State University, after a head coaching stint at Anderson (S.C.) College.

Her assistants are Mark Narraue and Pam Bettis.

"One of our goals is to build a winning tradition—Austin Peay doesn't have a winning tradition," Gardner said. "A conference championship doesn't make a successful tradition. I am not taking anything away from what was accomplished last year but we want to make that success a habit."

Lady Govies fall to Lady Vols in opener

By SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

A season opener should provide enough nervous moments for any coach to deal with. To be invited to the Preseason National Invitational Tournament against the No. 4-ranked and defending national champion Tennessee Lady Vols should make a coach sweat bullets.

Last weekend the OVC Champion Lady Govies traveled to Knoxville to face the perennial powerhouse in the Preseason NIT.

A crowd of 3,995 at Thompson-Boling Arena watched as Austin Peay fell behind 10-0 and was never able to get any closer than 12-9 the rest of the way as the Lady Vols prevailed 80-59.

The Lady Govies (0-1) were dominated by 29 turnovers in the game, but played with determination and never counted themselves out.

Also contributing to the Lady Govies' woes was a poor shooting night, converting on 22 of 61 shots, a 36 percent rate.

They were led by Preseason All-American Chamique Holdcastle's 20 points and Laurie Milligan's game-high 22 points.

"I am proud of this team," Gardner said. "They played hard for 40 minutes. They know how to prepare and I know they have got talent."

Simone Caldwell led the way with 21 points and five rebounds. Amanda Behrenbrinker chipped in with 16 points and 10 rebounds.

No other Lady Gov. finished in double figures, but Colleen Polzin grabbed six rebounds.

The Lady Govies will host an exhibition against the Central Texas All-Stars on Nov. 21 before a trip to the New Orleans Tournament to face Northeast Louisiana on Nov. 29.

Govies fall in close game

By SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

With a history against Eastern Kentucky that was not exactly stellar (3-14), the Austin Peay Governors attempted to do the unthinkable on Sunday — defeat the Ohio Valley Conference power.

For a time, it appeared as if APSU might actually pull the stunning upset.

After going into halftime tied at 10, the Govies found themselves down by only seven at the end of the third quarter, 17-10.

In failure to move the ball well in the second half, the Governors to their thirteenth point loss, 24-10.

After driving the ball extremely well in the first half, the APSU offense managed 69 total yards in the second, making only five first downs in well.

Eastern got on the board first when running back William Murrell pulled in from 18 yards out. This after a Governor gave the visitors good field position at the Gov 36.

The PAT made it 7-0 EKV.

The lead was cut to four when David Young made a career-long 42 yard field goal.

After a Colonel field goal stretched the lead back to seven, Peay's Jacob Dickson went in from the 1 to tie the game at 10.

The game was decided when Murrell scored his second and third touchdowns of the contest, a 3-yard run and a 48-yard run to close out the scoring.

Austin Peay finished the game with a respectable 258 total yards of offense, 218 coming on the ground.

Dickson continued to be the workhorse for the offense, contributing 113 yards on 14 carries, his third straight 100-yard game.

The Colonels of Eastern Kentucky (6-4, 6-1 Ohio Valley Conference) finished with 413 yards total offense, including 271 yards in the second half.

Peay's Daniel Williams attempted only 10 passes on the day, completing six. Two interceptions plagued the Governor offense.

Williams finished with 93 yards rushing on 19 carries.

Receiver Gary Williams caught three passes for 21 yards.

For the Governor defense, linebacker Thomas Williams finished with 16 tackles and safety Ralph Hill added 10 tackles.

On Saturday the Govies close out the season at home against Tennessee Martin (1-9, 1-6 OVC). The Skyhawks are coming off a 31-12 loss to Sanford, a team the Governors tied 12-10 to on Sept. 14. Kick-off is set for 1:30 p.m. at Governors Stadium.

OVC Tourney

Lady Govies to face Morehead State

By SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

The Austin Peay Lady Govies volleyball team is looking forward to the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament at Murray State University in Murray, Ky.

The tournament will be Nov. 22-24 with the OVC Champion advancing to the NCAA Tournament.

The Lady Govies have shown marked improvement as of late, winning seven out of their last eight conference matches, including three in a row at home.

The squad defeated visiting Tennessee Martin handily in its last contest, in three sets, 15-5, 15-5, 15-4.

Hitting .346 on the offensive end, the Lady Govies will be led by Tandi Page's 10 kills and 18 digs.

Kim Smith added 12 kills, seven digs and three block assists.

Noemi Chabera finished with 10 kills, six assists, nine digs, and three block assists.

Jennifer Anderson continued to lead the Lady Govies in assists, finishing with 34 assists, six digs, and two kills.

The Lady Govies finished out the season last night against the Lady Tigers of Tennessee State University. Previously the squad had defeated the Lady Tigers in Nashville in four sets, 15-5, 14-16, 15-0, and 15-4.

Regardless of the outcome, the Lady Govies will be the Lady Eagles from Morehead State University in the first round.

The best the team can be seeded is fourth and the worst is fifth. SEMO will be seeded first.

During last year's Ohio Valley Conference Tournament, the Lady Govies bowed out in the first round against the Middle Tennessee State University Lady Raiders, who went on to capture the Tournament crown.

Hsu enjoys Southern hospitality

By JODI PATRICK
guest writer

Southerners may be more honest, religious, conservative and hospitable than other Americans. So says the first exchange professor between Austin Peay State University and National Changhua University of Education (NCUE) in Taiwan.

The United States has been home to Dr. Li-Shing Hsu, assistant professor of physics, for almost 12 years. "If you were to say I was one-quarter American, that would be true."

Hsu says he really enjoys Tennessee's Southern hospitality. "I like you guys (Southerners)," Hsu says with a grin. He says that he especially appreciates the hospitality of Dr. Sam Fung, associate professor of psychology, Dr. Joe Filippis, professor of theatre and assistant vice president for academic affairs. They made Hsu and his son feel right at home in Clarksville.

He arrived in America in 1983 and graduated from the University of California, Los Angeles in 1989. He then started work with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration until

He worked in Southern California from 1990-1992 before returning to his home in Taiwan to teach physics at NCUE.

Hsu, whose concentration is condensed matter physics, returned to the United States in July with his 6-year-old son to teach at Austin Peay. Hsu says one attribute of Austin Peay is the diversity of the student body. "The cultural diversity is very good here." According to the Office of Institutional Planning and Analysis at Austin Peay, more than 37 percent of the students are non-traditional.

Hsu says about 20 percent of the students at NCUE are non-traditional, but he expects the number to increase over the next 20 years. He sees student diversity as positive because traditional students have the opportunity to take advantage of the experiences and knowledge of non-traditional students.

Hsu says he likes the friendly, family unity of Clarksville and the environment at Austin Peay. The peer pressure at APSU is minimal, and he gets to spend half of his time at the University teaching and half conducting research.

While Hsu likes the United States, he says he is ready to return home to his family. But since he has until May to teach at Austin Peay, home is coming to him.

Hsu's wife and his 2-year-old son are coming to Tennessee in January, during Taiwan's celebration of the Chinese New Year.

They will be here for about one month, and Hsu hopes to do a lot of sightseeing. He plans to take his family to Mammoth Cave, Ky., Memphis and the Smoky Mountains.

After his teaching career at Austin Peay has reached its end, Hsu hopes to visit other cities in America. "I like to travel and enjoy this cultural exchange."

To Hsu, one major American perk is the school bus system. "We don't have school buses in Taiwan," he says. He likes the way he does not have to worry about how his son gets to school every day. "It's a big convenience."

Hsu says of his time at Austin Peay, "It's a very special experience for me." Hsu says the exchange of professors helps build a stronger relationship between the two sister schools, and he feels privileged to have been the first.

Woodwind Quintet performs

Austin Peay State University's Woodwind Quintet will perform tonight at 8 p.m. in the Concert Theatre of the Music/Mass Communication Building.

Presented by the APSU department of music and Center for the Creative Arts, the event is free and open to the public.

The program will feature the Quintet performing Mozart's Overture to Le Nozze di Figaro, Travis Pines by Quintet by Adolphe Deslandes, Pastorale, Op. 14, No. 1 by Gabriel Pierné and Quintet for Four Instruments a vent by Paul Taffanel. Bach's Suite for Violoncello No. 3 will be played by Andrea Brown on French horn, with Kate Yates, flute, and Ten Carr, clarinet, performing the Allemande, Air and Gigue movements of Bach's Suite. Other members of the APSU Woodwind Quintet include Ashley Farler, oboe, and Jennifer Belcher, bassoon. The ensemble is directed by Dr. Lisa Vanarsdel, APSU associate professor of music (flute).

For more information, call 648-7818.

Jay Richardson, Paul Kerrigan and Bill Lewis rehearse a scene from "Noises Off" opening this week at the AP Playhouse.

'Dear God' star rises to the top

By College Press Service

As a talk show host, Greg Kinnear spent a lot of time making small talk with celebrities who were playing their latest films.

Now it's Kinnear's turn to do the chat-and-ting circuit. Kinnear emerged from last year's underdog remake of "Sabrina" with great reviews and much ado about his promise as a film actor. Hollywood had taken notice, and Kinnear was offered so much work that he finally had to relinquish his post as host of the late-night chat-fest, "Later with Greg Kinnear."

So, now, Kinnear the thespian is making the rounds to support his first post-"Sabrina" film, the Garry Marshall-directed holiday comedy, "Dear God."

The film casts Kinnear as Tom Turner, a good-natured petty con artist who is sentenced to an impromptu judge to get a real job or do real time. Tom finds himself toiling in the Dead Letter Office (DLO) at a Los Angeles post office. Once there, he slowly befriends the office's collection of misfits — Tim Conway as a former mail carrier who once bit a dog, Laurie Metcalf as a burned-out lawyer, as well as actress Lee Brown and Anna Marie Horford — and eventually winds up teaming with them to deliver little miracles to people whose letters to God landed in the DLO.

"I think Sydney Pollack's parting words to me on the final day of 'Sabrina' were 'Keep your eye on the director, kid,' or something like that," recalls Kinnear, who, during an interview at a Manhattan hotel, displays the same kind of boyish charm and dry wit seen in "Sabrina" and during his cameo in "Later" and, before that, on E!'s "Talk Soup" program.

"I just wanted to be with somebody I felt knew the craft of directing, who'd done this before and had a good track record. Gerry and I had met a couple of times. In fact, he'd been a guest on my show, and we got along pretty well. I liked him personally, and I like the idea of him directing me."

"At the same time, I liked the script and the idea of an ensemble, which 'Sabrina' had, too, with Harrison Ford, Julia (Ormond) and several other people. Paramount wasn't stupid enough to build a whole movie around me, so they managed to put together enough people to really make it an ensemble. It was great to have people like Tim and Laurie around. I could just show up to work and know I'd be laughing repeatedly throughout the day."

In "Dear God," Tom is something of a cynic who comes to reassess his life and care about someone other than himself. That was just one major difference between Tom and the womanizing, ne'er-do-well he portrayed in "Sabrina."

"One guy's a millionaire, the other doesn't have a dollar to his name," Kinnear says. "One guy is given everything, and the other takes everything. One guy has a strong family, and the other guy has no family."

"There were enough distinctions between the two characters that I felt it was at least a little bit of a stretch. I don't know that it was a giant leap for mankind in terms of the acting, but I did feel it was diverse enough for the second time out."

Since completing "Dear God," Kinnear has moved onto the films "A Smile Like Yours" and "Old Friends." In "Smile," Kinnear and Lauren Holly are a seemingly perfect married couple whose inability to conceive a child threatens to break them up. Directed by James L. Brooks, the still-shooting "Old Friends" costars Jack Nicholson and Helen Hunt.

Eventually, Kinnear, whose character is gay, Nicholson, and Hunt, who plays a waitress, embark on a road trip they'll never soon forget.

While Kinnear isn't sure what will be next on his agenda, he's certain it won't be another talk show hosting stint. Looking back on his "Talk Soup" days, in which he showed clips from the likes of "Geraldo" and "Sally Jesse Raphael" and offered pithy commentary, Kinnear laughs when recalling his favorite segment.

"Oh, I guess it had to be the one with Lulu and Topsy Curvy, who proclaimed themselves to be the seventh and eighth wonders of the world," he says, smiling. "They each claimed to have the largest breasts in the universe and started to scream at each other and have a real cat fight. Pretty soon, Lulu was pulling down her top and Topsy was pulling down her top, and Geraldo was running around in the background, hysterical."

"And it dawned on me, at that very moment, that this was the end of civilization as we knew it."
