Japanese I, JPN 1010, and Japanese II, JPN 1020, will both be taught noon in the fall semester by native Japanese speakers. Lots of practice speaking as well as writing and reading are offered. Japanese language skills are a good tool for participation in the Japanese exchange program sponsored by APSU at Kansai Gaidai University in Osaka. For more information call Dr. Aleeta Christian, Japanese program director, at 648-6277.

The Woodward Library will celebrate National Library Week April 14-20. The theme of the week is "Libraries Change Lives." A contest will be held for students to write a 100-200 word essay describing how Austin Peay's Library or any other library has changed their lives. Essays should be submitted to the information desk on level 2 of the library by 9 p.m. on Sunday, April 14. Winners will be announced on Friday, April 19. Prizes will be awarded for the top three essays.

The Fort Campbell Center will hold registration for summer classes on April 1-3 for classes beginning April 8 and continuing through June 3. For information on exact times, telephone (615) 572-1400 or (615) 708-7415.

Pro football player Howard Ballard will speak Wednesday, April 13, at the community discussion series "Having Our Say," 7 p.m. at the Wilbur N. Daniel African American Cultural Center. Students make changes with vote today

By KAY WALLEN LUTTRULL
staff writer

In preparation for the Student Government Association elections and the referendum on the $1 increase of SGA fees, confusion reigned supreme Monday as the candidates debated fire up in the UC lounge.

Students were milling about like grazing cattle when they brought their feed bags to the forums and settled in as President Angie Smith quickly and efficiently brought order and got the introductions underway promptly at the dinner hour.

In preparation for Monday's debate, students were asked what issues would you like to see the candidates address at Monday's debate?

"I doubt I even make it over there to vote," one student said.

"The food," said another young freshman. "I can't go home to eat, and it (the price) just kills me."

"Why are they dipping into the reserve funds?" asked another freshman. "I don't mind paying another dollar at all, but I wish they would make it clear what they need it for."

In the opening question, Faulk was addressed by a disgruntled student over a decision Faulk had made concerning funding of student programs.

Faulk

The common thread that ran through the answers was simply, "I don't have time to vote."

Jeremy Faulk, a senior majoring in English, is one of two candidates running for the SGA presidency.

Faulk, currently a senator for the college of Arts and Sciences, established his experience in SGA matters.

Faulk pointed out his contacts with the faculty and his ability to use these contacts to get things done for the students.

Running on a platform of being the "students' voice," Faulk said he "wants the university for the students" and that he will work to keep the focus of the faculty on the students, not the paperwork.

In the opening question, Faulk was addressed by a disgruntled student over a decision Faulk had made concerning funding of student programs.

Although Smith immediately pointed out that the question violated proper procedure because it was not addressed, Faulk individually, he did not have time to answer.

Faulk chose to answer the question and take a firm stand on his belief that all funds should be allocated fairly to all students where the need is the greatest.

Faulk closed his remarks with a call to arms for all students to take up their power of choice and be heard by now.

Dan Rawls, a junior political science major, is also running for the presidency. He is currently a senator-at-large and chair of the finance committee.

Rawls called for a breakdown of the communication barrier between students and faculty.

"It is time for the students to come together," Rawls said.

Rawls said he would like to see the common hour, which will be instituted in the fall semester, used as a student forum.

"We would bring in speakers who would address the needs of the students," he said.

He also spoke of the need for APSU to join United States Student Association, a group that routinely lobbies in Washington, D.C., and to send representatives to the capitol.

Vice President candidate John Alley, a junior majoring in vocal performance, promised students an open door policy. Alley called for better organization in SGA, and for more student petitions and resolutions.

"It is good for students to be heard," he said.

Alley currently holds the executive secretary position, and has handled the affairs of the vice president in the absence of present vice president, Angie Harville.

Students, SGA see Cracker Barrel as crock

By RANDY OVERSTREET & KIEZHA SMITH

Dr. John Butler, vice president of academic affairs, was confirmed Monday as the spring commencement speaker following a week of student protests over President Sal Rinella's prior invitation to Austin Peay alumnus Bill Heydel.

Heydel, a founding partner and current board member of Cracker Barrel Old Country Store, Inc., was announced as commencement speaker in a memo from the president March 12. The invitation sparked student resistance because Cracker Barrel has been connected with sexual orientation discrimination in the past, specifically regarding a 1991 lawsuit.

The policy, which was later rescinded, stated that Cracker Barrel would not hire employees who "failed to demonstrate normal heterosexual values." The restaurant fell into the spotlight after firing 14 gay employees in 1991 and was subject to publicity from primetime broadcast and print media, as well as gay and lesbian organizations.

Later, the corporation backed off its stand, saying, "a written protest off our shoulder that we have gotten out."

It was just a small group of people who thought we were discriminating, but it wasn't true, we never had that policy. We were innocent," Heydel said in a phone interview March 27.

Later that same day, Student Government Association Vice President Angie Harville began circulating a petition condemning the graduation speaker choice, gathering just under 300 signatures before Thursday's SGA meeting.

The petition I circulated was designed to focus on one specific aspect: discrimination. This was not an attack on the speaker but on the restaurant's history of discrimination," said Harville. "If the petition represent anything, that would hope that they represent a concerned student body dedicated to making a difference."

At Thursday's meeting, SGA unanimously passed a resolution condemning the speaker choice and calling for a replacement, citing that no speaker at all was preferable to Heydel. Harville stepped down as vice president during the debate so that she could speak on behalf of the resolution, which received a standing ovation upon passage.

Faculty members were also concerned with the decision. Glenn Carter, professor of social work, said, "I think it's unfortunate that a speaker from an organization that has a history of discrimination was asked. I am so proud of students who investigated, organized, got petitions signed and passed a resolution."

Other faculty members who preferred to remain unnamed suggested that money was a key issue for the invitation.

"You choose a commencement speaker for a lot of reasons," said Rinella. "You would never select one more on the basis of donations."

SGA President Angel Smith, Vice President Harville, Executive Secretary John Alley and Sen. Jeremy Faulk presented the president with the petition of more than 350 student signatures in a Monday meeting.

"I really respect the democratic process and the individual's rights to express their opinions on any topic," said Rinella.

According to Rinella, the controversy regarding Cracker Barrel's past was brought to his attention on March 22 by Smith, who expressed student and faculty concerns.

"That was the first time I had heard about it," said Rinella. "It just never got brought up."

Rinella said he met Heydel at the Candlelight Ball, and that the conversation naturally turned toward commencement. "I kind of popped the question," he said.

According to Rinella, Heydel declined the speaking engagement Saturday, citing scheduling conflicts. "I called him myself to talk about the logistics and in the conversation he mentioned that he had been contacted by (The All State). It was also my intent to keep him some questions and voice my concerns," he said.

Some students also questioned the lack of female commencement speaker candidates. In the history of Austin Peay, there has been one female speaker, the president

Sexual harassment cases not always clear

By ALICIA MOOREHEAD

managing editor

This is the first in a three-part series on sexual harassment.

If a professor asks you if you had freckles all over your body, would you consider it sexual harassment?

Sexual harassment is still being defined, and sexual harassment policies vary from school to school.

According to the director of Affirmative Action LaVerne T. Walker, in the Tennessee Board of Regents has a general definition from which individual university's compile their own. This general definition is under the guidelines of the EEOC.

At Austin Peay, people who are sexually harassed are informed to report the problem to the Office of Affirmative Action.

"This office is responsible for the prevention of any kind of harassment or discrimination. It is also our responsibility to take action against such harassment or discrimination," Walker said.

When people go to Affirmative Action, a record of their complaints are taken and a "thorough investigation of the circumstances" is completed, according to Walker.

The record of the complaint is looked at for any allegation" and we investigate that allegation," she said.

Walker, along with a legal staff from the Tennessee Board of Regents, collaborate to investigate such allegations. If they are found to be true, the legal staff and Walker decide on the next course of action.

Many times the sanction is withheld within the university, and civil charges are not encouraged by the university.

"We try to resolve the issue internally; we ask what would be the most effective thing to do," Walker said.

"What you want to do is stop the behavior; we at the university feel it is our responsibility to prevent, investigate and eliminate that type of behavior."

There are two major types of sexual harassment, quid pro quo and

"We try to resolve the issue internally; we ask what would be the most effective thing to do," Walker said.

"What you want to do is stop the behavior; we at the university feel it is our responsibility to prevent, investigate and eliminate that type of behavior."

Quid pro quo can be explained by giving a student a grade for certain favors. The hostile environment type is the most difficult to define and it deals with people treating you differently, embarrassing you or preventing you from uncomfortable situations.

On many times these types of sexual harassment stem from power and it is currently being reviewed.

The policy was written to discourage relationships between people who have power over another. These professors, but there has to be a line with the mentoring, Walker said. "These kinds of relationships can only be painful because someone ultimately winds up getting hurt," Walker said.

It is very important that people recognize what sexual harassment is and what they can do about it.

Former director of the Wilbur N. Daniel African American Cultural Center was denied his request for an appeal by the Tennessee Board of Regents.

Stovall appealed to the Chancellor of TBR to overturn Austin Peay's decision last spring to deny his tenure.

The chancellor upheld APSU's decision. Stovall then appealed to TBR.

TBR denied Stovall's request to present his appeal to the board. The appeal to the board was Stovall's last internal appeal procedure.

In TBR documents, Stovall charged APSU with a "clear pattern of racial discrimination as practiced by the university against me."

Dr. John Butler, vice president of academic affairs, said, "We clearly believe that Stovall deserved his tenure."

Butler stated that Austin Peay's decision to deny Stovall tenure followed the usual procedures when evaluating a professor's work.

The tenure procedure includes the professor publishing articles in referred journals and reviews by students and fellow faculty evaluations.

Stovall's appeal denied by TBR

SGA passes $3,000 bill, Heydel resolution

With $5,155.81 left in the Student Government Association's budget, the assembly began the evening by allocating $3,000 to assist students participating in the Study Abroad in Africa Program.

After making the SGA for $3,000, members of the SGA voted to assist Sigma Chi Fraternity in attending their 1996 Leadership Training Workshop at the University of Bowling Green in Toledo, Ohio.

SGA also passed a $2,000 grant from $3,000 to the Delta Tau Alpha chapter at the 37th Annual Delta Tau Alpha Convention in Springfield, Mo.

An ROTC bill for $831.24 to assist the APSU ROTC in having the Austin Peay "Governor's Guard banquet and ball on April 19, was amended and passed at 8:25 p.m.

A resolution to recommend 24-hour visitation on weekends in all residence halls was tabled until next week's meeting.

An amendment to limit the amount of money an organization, individual or group of students can obtain from SGA to $1,000 each academic year passed with unanimous support.

A resolution to encourage the administration to reverse the decision requesting that Bill Heydel, founding partner and board member of the Cracker Barrel restaurant chain, speak at spring commencement was passed with acclamation.

Holocaust survivor to help celebrate commemoration

guest writer

Mel Mermelstein, the only member of his immediate family to have survived Nazi death camps, will speak at Austin Peay State University's Holocaust Commemoration Event April 8-9.

The event is scheduled in response to requests from the community for a follow-up to last year's five-day event commemorating the Holocaust.

Dr. Dewey Browder, associate professor of history at Austin Peay, said, "The Holocaust is a hideous part of human history. We can only confront it and learn from it. The more truthful we are about the past, the better prepared we are to cope with the present and the future."

Mermelstein will introduce the film "Never Forget" at 6 p.m., April 8, in Room 105 in the Kimbrough Building. He then will answer questions following the film. This event is free and open to the public.

Author of "By Bread Alone," Mermelstein is the main character in the film "Never Forget."

The film focuses on Mermelstein's legal efforts in 1980 and 1981 to expose the truth about the executions that occurred in Nazi concentration camps in World War II.

He says the film is an attempt to teach, educate and preserve the memory of the six million Jews who died because of prejudice. Mermelstein achieved the first legal recognition of the Holocaust under United States law in 1981.

On October 9, 1981, in the case of Mel Mermelstein v. Institute for Historical Review, Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Thomas T. Johnson, ruled in Mermelstein's favor deciding that the evidence presented in defense of the fact that Jews were gassed to death at Auschwitz Concentration Camp in Poland during the summer of 1944, is not reasonably subject to dispute. And it is capable of immediate and accurate determination by resort to sources of reasonably indisputable accuracy. It is simply a fact."

Mermelstein lives in southern California with his wife, Jane Nance-Mermelstein, who graduated from Austin Peay in 1957 with a bachelor's degree in elementary education. The couple has four children and one grandchild.

Mermelstein's book is available at the Austin Peay bookstore and he will be at the bookstore from 2-3 p.m., April 9, to sign copies. The book also will be available in the Kimbrough Building before and after the movie.

The event is sponsored by the APSU department of history and philosophy, the APSU History Club, the International Research Committee, the Visiting Speakers and Artists Committee and the Tennessee Holocaust Commission.

candidate and a sophomore majoring in economics, called for changes.

"There's only so much a vice president can do," he said. Mayes, chair of the internal affairs committee, has experience changing policy.

Last year, on Crawley's suggestion, the policy and procedures committee enacted a policy requiring that all upcoming legislation be posted in the SGA office no later than 4 p.m. on Monday.

Vice president candidate Phillip Mayes, a junior majoring in political science and the final candidate for vice president, talked about the need to resolve internal issues.

Mayes was highly critical of the handling of legislation in the SGA of the previous year.

"I do not think bills should be pushed through," he said. "They should be carefully thought out and handled correctly. They should not be pushed through if at all possible."

Mayes also called for a better allocation of funds.

"I want to be vice president because I want to control the Senate," Mayes said.

Ellen Smith, a junior majoring in political science and the final candidate for vice president, talked about the need to resolve internal issues.

The candidate was concerned with the loss of senators who had had to drop out during their terms, leaving their colleges unrepresented in the SGA.

"I think that after our absence (from a meeting), we should be warned," Smith said. "The second meeting is mandatory. The senator should be chosen in the secretary position, Heather King, who was elected to the position," she said.

She desires to represent students at the executive level, fully supports the referendum, and can help more organizations on campus, she said.

Students will have a chance to vote on the candidates and referendum today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the UC Ballroom.

surprise. "I think you deserve a big-time speaker of me, but I'll be glad to speak." The title of his speech will be "It's Not Finished Yet."

There is a communication committee, comprised of faculty and student delegates. But the decision of the president has historically been the president's prerogative.

Students will have a chance to vote on the candidates and referendum today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the UC Ballroom.

HOORAY to our newly discovered student activists. Their attempts to block an extremely wealthy APSU alum from speaking at the May commencement successfully ended with a change in speaker, for whatever reason.

Bill Heydal, who founded Cracker Barrel, was accused by many students of openly discriminating against homosexuals. In the past, Cracker Barrel had a policy which prevented the hiring of gay and lesbian employees.

Students were quick to take action with a successful petition drive, garnering more than 350 signatures in three days. Regardless of one's viewpoint, these student activists have to be admired for taking action on an otherwise politically apathetic campus. They showed the administration exactly whose campus this is.

Speaking of more than 350 signatures...that's more than voted at last year's SGA election. A premature HOORAY to students for participating in the democratic process. This is actually one time when voting makes an immediate difference that you can see, mainly because they disburse your money.

A HUMPH, BOO & HISS to the typically boring candidates for vice president of academic affairs. Does the term Wonder Bread mean anything to you? Diversity notwithstanding, an exceptional candidate within our own ranks was overlooked. The dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, D'Ann Campbell, was conspicuously missing from the list of finalists, all white males.

This leads The All State to wonder if perhaps incoming faculty are not considered good enough for the job. As students, we support those who know our school and ourselves over strangers.

A HUMPH and a KICK in the collective rump to representatives of Sigma Chi Fraternity that attended Monday's SGA debate in the UC Lobby. They were unconscionably rude to certain candidates not within their social spheres.

Whiny babies...are you crying over lost SGA allocations? At this time of the year, funds are simply not available for all pursuits, particularly those with special interests. With your behavior, it's not shocking that Greeks have the stereotypes they do.

A HOOGRAY goes out to the Govs and Lady Govs for their performances in the NCAA tournaments. They represented the school and their sport in fine fashion and deserve our appreciation.

If you have candidates for Humph or Hooray, contact us at The All State, P.O. Box 8334. We'd be more than happy to hear from you.

Letters to the Editor

Campus counselor welcomes concerns

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter in response to the March 20, 1996 letter to the editor, "Reader upset with campus counselor." I wish to reassure the students and faculty at Austin Peay that the staff at the Counseling Center are student friendly and those who have utilized our services recognize that we take seriously that variety and depth of concerns that are presented.

The staff at the Counseling Center have had a long tradition of warmth and courtesy that makes our work a pleasure and abiding commitments to students a natural consequence.

Any student coming to the Counseling Center can anticipate and expect our professional counseling staff to be open and receptive to effectively respond to other personal and academic needs in a timely manner. We also welcome student and faculty feedback about our services.

Dr. Ron Oakland

SGA senator to be student's voice

Dear Editor,

With the spring elections less than two weeks away, I am continuing my candidacy as president of the Student Government Association.

Having served as an SGA senator for two years, I feel it is time to serve in a different capacity, one that requires experience, dedication and leadership. Currently, SGA maintains some influence among the campus community but very little interaction among registrants and individual members.

SGA has the power to initiate change by writing student motions, such as the one I wrote to fall requesting the library to remain open until midnight on Sundays. This was the catalyst to bring the resolution to a reality. It is vital that SGA be an active voice rather than a passive one.

As an organization and as students, you have the supreme right to elect representatives for the student body. I urge you to vote your conscience on April 3 in the UCC Ballroom. Thank you for your time and attention in this matter. Now and in the future, I am your voice. I am open to your ideas, and I look each of you for your support.

the students and the administration, and more than anything, I want to be this link for YOU. I have the time that is necessary to be your voice. I ask you to grant me that privilege.

During the SGA meeting on March 22, the senate passed a resolution to include a student referendum on the April ballot. This referendum concerns an SGA fee increase of ONE dollar. If the referendum fails, SGA cannot attempt to increase the fee for another two years. With the senate spending beyond the funds allocated each semester, it is imperative and inevitable that it be increased.

How can SGA grant funds to an increasing number of organizations and students without the availability of more funds? We must have a balance; without this balance, organizations and students will not have equal opportunities to obtain funds from SGA. If your organization has received or plans to receive funds from SGA, I ask you to vote YES FOR the dollar increase. Not only will it benefit your organization, but others to follow.

As an organization and as students, you have the supreme right to elect representatives for the student body. I urge you to vote your conscience on April 3 in the UCC Ballroom. Thank you for your time and attention in this matter. Now and in the future, I am your voice. I am open to your ideas, and I look each of you for your support.

Campus parking upsets student

Dear Editor,

Speaking for all commuters, I would like to say that we do not appreciate our parking places being blocked by large yellow sawhorses. What is the purpose of this? Even if they are re-painting the lines or something, couldn't it be done over the weekend?

We commuters make up the majority of Austin Peay students. I believe this entitles us to some courtesy and respect.

Chris Campbell

Reader responds to faculty charge

Dear Editor,

To Dr. Sylvia Nasser-McMillan:

In your letter you say I criticized the counseling center's protocol. Read what I wrote. I criticized the counseling center's director using protocol as a justification for his sorry conduct. Regarding confidentiality, the person in question was never a client of Oakland's.

There is no confidentiality issue here. Up until that day, they hadn't met. And about my causing indirect harm to the student body: If there was any harm done, it was done by him and his treatment of the person in question. Don't shoot me, I'm only the messenger here.

You then say what your idea of the letter to the editor's page should be: "opinions about policies." Well, the normal scope of the opinion page is not that limited. People have opinions on actions, statements, current events, etc. Read any reputable paper in this country. Then, right after you say that one shouldn't send specific messages to individuals on the opinion page, you do just that. Message received.

My first letter was in response to an article featuring Ron Oakland where he came off sounding like Mother Theresa. Just as you responded to newprint regarding me, I responded to newprint about him. I thought that this shameful affair could be seen in the bright light of day.

Absorb this: Both you, Oakland and every one else working at APSU are public employees. What do you do if your official capacity is indeed open to public scrutiny? APSU policy 5-010.IB.B.3 says: "As a man or woman of learning and an educational officer, s/he should remember that the public may judge the profession and the institution by the faculty member's utterances."

Ron Oakland was at work in his official capacity when he did this. So, yes, something you say in class can be judged by the public. I even have the right to read your personnel file (State Board of Regents policy 5-01-00-10!!).

Where does your paycheck come from? In reality, you guys work for me. Like any other employer, I'd be foolish to let my employees make the rules. It is my and every other student's duty to make sure you're doing your job correctly but because you've never seen Ron Oakland do anything like this doesn't mean that he did not do this.

We commuters make up the majority of Austin Peay students. I believe this entitles us to some courtesy and respect.

Dear Editor,

The last time The All-State came

Personally, I never saw Ted Bundy splitting skulls in a sorority house with a piece of firewood, but he did if nonetheless. If you close your eyes, do you think he would disappear? You say it's difficult to know the specifics. I know the specifics and you don't. Yet, you defend someone. I said what happened. I think it shows the character of the administration in that no one above Oakland bothered to find out if what I wrote was indeed true. The victims would be glad to corroborate what I said (first hand) to anyone in a position to change things but did not want his/her name in the paper.

You also say I did irreparable harm to APSU. Try some dead and lose the historians. Do you believe that I've sent APSU spiraling to destruction with one letter? In this place really? That frisbee that I dropped a letter about an employee's egregious conduct will end it crashing down like some house of cards? Please, I said (first hand) to anyone in a position to change things but did not want his/her name in the paper.

You also say I did irreparable harm to APSU. Try some dead and lose the historians. Do you believe that I've sent APSU spiraling to destruction with one letter? In this place really? That frisbee that I dropped a letter about an employee's egregious conduct will end it crashing down like some house of cards? Please, I said (first hand) to anyone in a position to change things but did not want his/her name in the paper.

As in the suggestion that anyone owes Oakland a public apology, I have one question. Are you on glue? I praise The All State's newly developed spine. Go, Kiezhaw! This opinion page is the only forum available around here. An official complaint does nothing.

We have educators making fat jokes ("in class!!!") about an overweight girl, an African American Center that can't get a sign (and therefore, a presence) 28 garbage cans that cost $6,100 and now, I hear, a proposed school wide nap and cookies time that will interfere with my school down by one hour (when I'm footlong the bill for this extra hour!).

As least now, here, someone can hear about something that is going on. Everything I say I can back up with witnesses. Call my bluff! If this place wasn't so dry desert, I'd buy The All State staff a six-pack! After that letter appeared, about 30 students and 6 faculty members gave me the thumbs up. Not one person gave me a negative response. From my point of view, you look lonely, standing there all by yourself.

You are very eager to trumpet your reasons, justifications, and condemnations, but not once did you mention the student who was the victim in the first place. Once again, from another APSU "doctor," this person doesn't merit any attention.

A more appropriate statement from you would be "Although I don't know what took place, I'd like to tell the student in question that I feel horrible, just knowing they feel like they do, and if there's something I could do to help, please contact me."

If Ron Oakland showed that 10 percent of the concern you show for Oakland's reputation, this would have never happened to begin with. Your concern is badly misplaced, and your response is indicative of the problem.

Ron Oakland is a big boy, who should like he takes care and both of you should develop some concern for things other than your office, department or reputation. A human being was dumped on here, and you still ignore that fact.

Fans missed out on Lady Govs

Dear Editor,

The last time The All-State came out, there was a comment made in a letter to the editor about student support of athletics, especially Lady Gov basketball.

I had been wanting to comment on student support for the women's game for quite a while. As a female basketball player you start to get used to there only being a few fans in the stands at the beginning and by the end there is usually hundreds of fans and students fill in for the men's game.

I've witnessed many of these sites myself and as the popularity of the women's game has been moving at about the speed of light in the past few years, it puzzles me how and why fan support is so lacking, especially at Austin Peay.

Sure, the women's game doesn't have high flying slams and players shattering their shields but they slowly trout down the floor 20 feet defense. But if you didn't use a Lady Gov's basketball game this year you missed something special. You missed seeing the BEST Lady Govs basketball team in history. You missed seeing all the hustle and heart these ladies gave as they broke record after record and won, and won...12 games in a row to end the regular season as co-champions and then to win the OVC Tournament.

What a year Lady Govs! And how many of you students were witness to this? Not many.

Not only was the student support lacking but faculty and administrative support was almost nonexistent as well. However, they still start rolling out around the 3-meters of the Lady Govs games to see the next game.

The comment made in the All State before the OVC tournament asked the student to go out and support the Lady Govs. After the NCAA Tournament exposure for their record breaking, history making season and in return they receive a lack of recognition from their own university.

The university and students are not alone in their lack of recognition. The All-State has continued all season to put less information about the women's team than the men's.

In last week's All State a review of the women's accomplishments in the NCAA Tournament was written. Three and a half columns for the men and one and a half for the women. At least it was better than previous articles where a little box of three or four paragraphs were stuck underneath the men's half page article.

Finally, I would like to congratulate the Lady Govs on their extremely strong year. This is the result that is bringing APSU into the future and hopefully a better one. Although there was a lack of support for the team, many people recognize and appreciate all the hard work, heart and desire you portrayed on the court. It was awesome to watch and I can't wait until next season!

Interaction needed among students

Dear Editor,

Currently, several opportunities exist here at Austin Peay for students of one academic discipline to interact with another.

Denominational unions such as those of the Baptist, Methodist, Church of Christ, Catholic natures as well organized athletics, the VSO, the Non-Traditional Student Organization and Greek organizations all make the opportunity available for student to meet and socialize with one another on the basis of some criteria.

However, no such opportunities designed for the specific population of students, despite criteria, to interact with one another for examining the nature and purpose of their activities.

This seems to run counter to the principal purpose to which we have all committed ourselves here at Austin Peay. That purpose is to educate to ourselves to society to pursue ideals like individual liberty and happiness.

This absence of purposeful dialogue has left the direction of the academic life here at the university primarily up to the administration. Our lack of participation has fostered an air of apathy that, with the exception of some groups, had left the university alienated from the community in which we live and work.

It has made the "university life" limited, at times boring and with little hope of being more than stagnant. This is not the administration's fault. We cannot hold the administration and the faculty responsible to the huge task of producing more life on a campus where the majority of the student body here. She said, "You've got to take into account that much of the student body here is unique. Students hold full time jobs or must take care of their families after normal campus hours." She is right of course, and that is why, we must tailor events that promote student interaction to our special circumstances.

On the 18th of March, I had the opportunity to speak to Dr. Rinella Williams. Dr. Williams was concerned about the poor showing at that night's event, his concern will lack identified direction without an opinion which reflects an identifiable portion of the student body. In closing, I would like to make the point that to identify the direction we would like to take the student government first consider the reasons we are here. If we are here to learn about those things which we have little or no knowledge for the purpose of getting more out of life, then it can only benefit us further to create the circumstances which allow us to get that much more from our education.

It is in our direct interest to participate in the life of this university. When you leave here to go on to fulfill your end, you leave behind the vast resources which create the university.

Diamondmen look for more offense to end current skid

BY BYRON SHIVE

The Austin Peay State University baseball team, losers of five of its last seven games after opening the season at 19-4, will look to revive a sputtering offense that played a key part in the fast start to the season.

The Governors, now stand at 21-9 on the season, face a five-game homestand that begins tonight with a visit from Southern Illinois. Game time is set for 6:30 p.m. at Raymond C. Hand Park.

The squad will then return to Ohio Valley Conference play, where the Governors are 5-3 and in second-place, on Saturday with a doubleheader against Tennessee Tech that starts at 2:00 p.m. The squads will return on Sunday for a single nine-inning contest at 2:00 p.m.

Austin Peay will then play host to Louisville on Tuesday night in a 6:30 p.m. match-up. The Govs had a game at Louisville postponed on March 20 due to snow.

"In the beginning of the season, our offense was the key to us winning games," said shortstop Chuck Abbott. "We were hitting the ball well. We've been down here of late, but that's because we've not been hitting."

Austin Peay, which saw its potent offense throttled to a season-low four hits in a 6-2 loss at Evansville on March 12, dropped a 9-1 decision to the Purple Aces Tuesday night at Raymond C. Hand Park. The Evansville pitching staff limited the Governors to just three hits in the win.

The Purple Aces had the game well in control by the third inning, jumping on APSU starter John Huffman for six runs in the second-inning, enroute to a commanding 8-0 lead after three.

Abbott, who has been sizzling at the plate with a .435 batting average, picked up a hit along with Billy Mortimore and Mark Turken.

Huffman was tagged with the loss, dropping his record to 1-1 on the season.

The Governors returned to action on Wednesday to post a 5-4 win over Vanderbilt, rallying with two runs and two outs in the bottom of the ninth-inning for the win.

Glen Longhurst pitched the final two innings for the win, throwing three strikeouts in shutting down the Commodore attack.

Turken led the offensive charge with a three-for-four evening. The sophomore centerfielder belted a double and a triple and drove in three runs.

Leadoff hitter Kris Runk was two-for-four with a run scored, while Abbott went two-for-three.

Indiana State, which Austin Peay swept a pair from to open the season, posted a 10-3 victory over the Governors in Terre Haute on Thursday.

The Sycamores jumped on APSU

The Indians, who entered the game with a mediocre 12-12-1 record, swamped the Govs with a 13-0 blowout. The win was keyed by a six-run fifth-inning that iced the SEMO lead to 8-0, as the Indians scored 11 runs in the final three innings.

APSU starter Jason Fischer was tabbed with the loss, as Austin Peay dropped to 4-2 in conference play.

Bennett and Brock Maiser both belted doubles for the Governors, while Mike Manning went two-for-three at the plate.

Abbott continued his torrid pace, inheriting the nation's longest hitting streak, which he upped to 28 games with a single.

The Governors dropped a heart-breaking 9-4 decision to the Indians in the nightcap Saturday, as SEMO exploded for seven unanswered runs in the top of the seventh inning to erase a 4-2 deficit and put the the Governors on the verge of a series sweep.

Runk went three-for-four from the leadoff spot, while Bennett went two-for-four, including his team-best 11th double of the season.

Maisier belted his third round-tripper of the season en route to two-for-three day, while Abbott upped his hitting streak to 28 games.

Starter Mike Eikenberry picked up his first loss of the season following the seventh-inning barrage by SEMO, dropping his season mark to 5-1. He struck out 10 in the loss.

The Governors overcame a hour-long rain delay in the fourth inning Sunday afternoon to post a 7-1 victory behind 13 hits.

Starter Craig Smith pitched a nine-inning, three-hit battle to raise his record to 5-2, surrendered an unearned run in the sixth-inning and struck out eight Indian batters on the day.

Abbott, who has hit .364 every game this season, extended his streak to 30 games with an eighth-inning double.

Manning and Benji Zimmerman also doubled for the Governors with Manning going four-for-five on the day.

The Austin Peay distance medley captured first-place, while the 4x100-meter relay squad finished second.

Tanya Flanigan was the first across the tape in the 100-meter dash in a time of 12.73 seconds, while White (13.45) and Joselyn St. (13.51) finished in second-third-place, respectively.

Sofie Barnes took third-place honors in the 400-meter run with a time of 1:05.22, while Lora Price (second-place) and Michelle Bass (seventh-place) finished well up in the 3,000-meter run.

The sprint relay team (100x100x200x400) meters finished in first-place with a time of 1:54.57.

Lady Govs sweep dual meet

BY BYRON SHIVE

sports editor

The Austin Peay State University women's track team swept a double dual track and field meet at Governors Stadium Saturday afternoon.

The Lady Governors utilized a good all-around performance to defeat Tennessee-Martin 65-43 and Tennessee Tech 64-34.

Talene Davis led the Lady Governor charge in the discus competition, defeating the next closest competitor by almost 30 feet with a throw of 129 feet, as Austin Peay placed four finishers in the top five. Kerri Wilburn finished in third-place with a toss of 98'1/2", with Jen Murrell and Kacey Bowen finishing in fourth- and fifth-places, respectively, with throws of over 90 feet.

Evette Edwards finished in second-place in the high jump with a jump of 5'2", with teammate Emily Anthony finishing fourth.

In the long jump, Edwards captured first-place with a jump of 16'7 1/2", as Zuri White finished in third-place for the Lady Governors.

The Lady Governors placed four people in the top five places in the shot put, including the top three.

Bowen led the Austin Peay charge with a throw of 41'4", while Davis and Wilburn finished in second- and third-place, respectively. Murrell's throw was good for fifth-place.

PAIN KILLER.

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets — money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pretax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving for federal and, in most cases, state and local income taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

To find out more, call 1-800-842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.

Student band spoons out soul for community

LYDIA MELTON and CELLY WILKERSON
Guest writers

College bands are everywhere, every school has at least one and Austin Peay is no exception.

One of the most prominent bands

Austin Peay is Community Spoon, their music reaches far across the university's campus, the band plays shows around Clarksville and the rest of middle Tennessee.

Community Spoon are Nathan Sallee, drums, Bart Sallee, drums, Peter Bloomfield, guitar, Daniel Morris, rhythm guitar, and Dave Morris, bass.

The band first got together in 1992 when Ellis and Sallee were selected to be a part of a pick-up and that performed at the Tennessee Teen Institute Anti-Drug Conference in Pulaski, Tennessee, after that show, Ellis and Sallee decided to stay together and form a more permanent band.

They have been the only constant members of Community Spoon since its inception a year and a half ago, the band has been through 14 other members but now they said that the group is "solid."

"But I finally found the right people to play music with," Ellis said.

The current line-up of Community Spoon has been together since February when Bloomfield, Dayton, and Morris joined the band.

Even though this version of the band has been together only a short amount of time, they have already accomplished a lot. They played two shows on St. Patrick's Day, one at the Retro Caffe in Clarksville and the other at the Irish Festival in Erin, Tennessee. They have another show lined up at the Retro Caffe for May 4 and will be playing Main Street in Murfreesboro on April 16.

As to what the band's style is, well, that's a point of contention among the members.

"Rock-a-billy," Sallee laughed. "Country contemporary thrash metal," Bloomfield joked back.

"Rock-a-billy thrash metal," Ellis added.

"I just play guitar," Morris said.

Even though the band can't agree, their business card seems to have done it for them. It describes them as a progressive alternative rock band.

The disagreement over the band's style may stem from the fact that the members of the band have diverse musical influences. Ellis said he is influenced vocally by Layne Staley from Alice in Chains and Maynard Kennan from Tool and lyrically by Tori Amos. Sallee said he has been inspired by Technotronic, Nirvana and music from video games. Bloomfield's influences range from the bands Morbid Angel and Korn to horror movie soundtracks. Morris said his influences are Nirvana, Smashing Pumpkins and Pearl Jam while Dayton is influenced by Fugazi, Minor Threat and the Pixies.

And where did the band come up with the name Community Spoon? Originally, the name developed when Ellis and his father moved into a new house.

The only silverware they had was a spoon. Whenever people came over, they had to share the community spoon, hence the band's name. Since then, the name has grown to mean more than that. Ellis said the name means "a voice under the community."

"A spoon is a mothering, nurturing instrument. Our name really means a nourishment for the soul," Ellis said. "So many people are going through life and they don't feel things as strongly as they used to. What we are trying to do with our music is nourish people's souls back to life."

"We're making the music to fulfill something in our soul," said Ellis. "When we're on stage and we're making people happy, that makes us happy. If we happen to go out there and people like us and we make money, well, there's nothing wrong with that."

While making money is something they would like to do, the band's real mission is to entertain everyone.

When the band plays a show, they don't want to be like other bands who just stand on stage and don't look at the crowd. Community Spoon likes to interact with the people at their shows. "At our shows, feel free to come up and hang out with us. We just want everyone to have a good time," Sallee said.

"It goes back to the nourishment for the soul," said Ellis. "We want everyone to feel good about themselves and want them to live a little bit more after they come out of one of our shows."

The members of the student band, Community Spoon, formed the group in 1994. They will appear at the Retro Caffe on May 4.

Trolley makes AP stop

During the month of April, the Clarksville Transit System is offering free trolley rides to Austin Peay State University students, faculty and staff throughout downtown Clarksville.

According to Chief Douglas Douglas of APSU campus police, the system is designed "to get students in and around the downtown area."

Sneddy said the trolley will be available to students and faculty who do not want to lose their parking place to drive downtown, or to students who do not own vehicles but want to get off work for a while.

Sponsored by APSU, Main Street Clarksville, downtown merchants, local businessman Charlie Hand and CTS, the one-month trial project, if successful, will be made a full-time benefit to Austin Peay students, faculty and staff.

Neely is confident about the trolley schedule cutting down on traffic and parking problems on campus.

"If students will use it, it should help traffic a lot, especially during lunch," Neely said.

The trolley will run in a continuous loop weekdays from 10:45 a.m. to 2:15 p.m.

Famous U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team Diet!

During the non-snow off season the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team is using the "Ski Team" diet to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. That's right - 20 pounds in 14 days! The basis of the diet is chemical food meal-replacement bars devised by a famous California physician specifically for the U.S. Ski Team. Normal energy is maintained (very important!) while the U.S. Ski Team diet is maintained - because the diet is designed reducing. You keep full - no starvation - because the diet is designed this way. It's a diet that is easy to follow whether you work, travel or stay home.

This is, honestly, a fantastically successful diet. If it weren't, the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team wouldn't be permitted to use it. Right? So, give yourself the same break the U.S. Ski Team gets. Lose weight the proven way. Even if you've tried all the other diets, give this one a try. You'll want to try the U.S. Women's Alpine Ski Team Diet. That is, if you want to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. Order today! Tear this out and do it now. It's a reminder.

Send only $8.95 ($9.60 in Calif.); add .50 cents RUSH service fee; CA American Institute, Dept. 254, Santa Maria, CA 93454-4507. Don't order unless you expect to lose 20 pounds in two weeks. Because that's what the Ski Team Diet will do.
