

Robert Bly to speak; Austin Peay to listen

Robert Bly, poet and translator, will read his poetry Wednesday, Nov. 10, at 8 p.m. in the Trahern Theatre on the APSU campus. The reading is sponsored by the department of languages and literature and is free and open to the public.

This is a return engagement. Bly read here first in 1974, and again in 1976. "He was received both times by arge and enthusiastic audiences," noted Dr. David Till. Bly's first book of poems, published in 1962, was Silence in the Snowy Fields. Since that time, he has published more than 15 books of poems and translations.

His most recent book (1981) is The Man in the Black Coat Turns. He is currently at work on a book of love poems, a book of selected essays and a book exploring the psychic implications of fairy tales.

According to Till, "Bly has always been a controversial figure. He is an enthusiast who is constantly exploring issues that affect us all. At the same time, he is able to see how much grief and love the old pine tree bears with it into each new day."

Attack on Jesus draws petition for apology

page 4/The All State/Nov. 3, 1982

Dear Editor:

I was shocked and disgusted when I read Ken Knapp's column in the Oct. 20 issue of The All State. There are many of us attending Austin Peay who believe that the Bible is the infallible, inerrant Word of the living God.

We believe that it is the only true source of hope for a world that is hopelessly lost in sin. To us, the Bible is precious; it is not something about which to lie and poke fun.

True, there are also many students on this campus who do not agree with what I have just said. That is their prerogative. But let me ask you this: Would you sit still if I were to publicly ridicule your father and tell lies about him, making him look like a fool?

I dare say you would not. Well, that is exactly what you have done to my Heavenly Father. And, please do not ask, "What's the matter, can't you take a joke?"

The answer to that is an emphatic "No!" No more than you would consider it funny if I were to print lies about your father and circulate them for thousands of people to read.

It is for this reason that I am asking that you publish an apology to your many readers who feel as I do. You will find signatures of many of them following this letter.

In closing, I will pray for you, but I will never put you down for the way you believe or for your way of life, whatever that may be. All I ask in return is that you give the Christians on this campus the same courtesy. Please read Galatians 6:7, and keep it in mind the next time you are tempted to mock God and His Word.

Respectfully,
J.A. Longwell

P.S. We, the undersigned, do hereby join together in calling for the editor of The All State, official newspaper of Austin Peay State University, to publish an apology for his deliberate attack on Jesus and the Bible in the Oct. 20 issue of said newspaper: Greg Moore, Ruth Gassett, Joyce Campbell, Peggy A. Swan, Mongenia Richardson, Sheryl Damron, Paula Downey, Lee Suddeth, Amy G. Fort, and Vickie Gill;

Dana Armstrong, Staffor Hammoh, Sonya Pope, Sam Merriwealth, Carol E. Rial, George Goetzka, Annie M. Brown, Joyce Ellen Wright, Rita A. Killebrew, Jo Ann Cannon, Hannah Iam, and Debbie E. Brown; Mary J. Elrod, Cynd Buchanan, Veronica Row, Roger Puckett, Tonya Smith, Susan R. Hudson, Gogita Roper, Candy Sadler, and Rev. rich Gysow;

Becky Gipson, Vickie Ralph, Connie Hicks, Rev. Billy R. Jones, Minia Joyce Suiter, W.A. Sheppard, Rachelle C. Sheppard, James D. Baggett, and Mardell Longwell.

All State criticized; Stevens praised

Dear Editor:

Senator Stevens' battle with a biased press has had the effect of distracting attention from the issue of the student funds' accident scandal. In fact The All State has confused the issue to such an extent that it is obvious that the writer of the article was not present at the SGA meeting where the controversy was first aired.

For anyone interested, this all began when Sen. Stevens discovered that student funds had been (MIS) appropriated by executive action for a party during the summer. When Sen. Stevens and members of the gallery questioned this expenditure, Sen. Stevens was told that if he wished to make a complaint to please submit it in writing. At this time a formal complaint was registered and an investigation requested.

The All State that week published an article which misrepresented Stevens' position, and has since challenged the integrity of the Sen. by using quotations out of text.

For the record, Stevens did not complain that he was not invited to the party, his complaint was that virtually no students or senators were invited. In fact at the time of the meeting neither the Pres. of the SGA (who authorized the expenditure) nor the VP claimed any knowledge of who was even in charge of handling the invitations. I would tend to agree with the Senator, this does seem to be a somewhat irresponsible action by our chief representative.

It is a pity that a paper with the credentials that The All State supposedly has would not even make an attempt to inquire into the facts of the issue before publishing an article on the matter.

In The All State response to Sen. Stevens' letter to the editor it was stated that due to the actions of the Pres. and Vice Pres. of the SGA the students are represented by the best student government we've had in years.

It is my contention however, that we are represented by a group of very capable Sen. who, free from their threat of a hostile National Enquirer type press, will continue to do the outstanding job we've come to expect.

Profs rob students by absence checks

Dear Editor:

I'm writing this letter to publicly complain about an injustice some of the APSU instructors are doing to APSU students. Some of the instructors will take off points or even a whole letter grade from a student's final grade if the student misses too many of that instructor's class periods.

This policy is an injustice. The student pays for the class and the instructor is, in a sense, stealing from the student by not giving him the grade he earned and deserves.

If the student can miss half the quarter and still get a grade that he is satisfied with—fine.

But the instructor should not have the right to lower the student's grade. If instructors can't think of a better way to keep students from skipping their classes why should the student have to suffer.

David Knapp

When is a Student Center a Student Center?

While curious students at other universities are gaining more voice in the "decision-making process" which affects their social lives, the student body at Austin Peay is making progress in the opposite direction.

Consider the dilemma at the University Center. Funny how the name "Student Center" never shows up, even when full-time students pay $5 each quarter for the obvious privileges of using its facilities.

It may be a difficult task, but let us decide now. Let us choose our leaders; from corned-beef to corned-beef we shall hold no secrets, and from Student Center to Student Center we shall be one.

One positive move on campus has been the recent implementation of the SGA Bitch Box. But isn't it ironic that the Bitch Box is downstairs in the University Center...in the post office...where a lot of grumpy people walk around?!

Remember—we had a chance to see X-rated movies at Austin Peay. Know what happened?

Some conservative wimp heard about it and blew his stack. Like Wordsworth said "Flowers laugh before thee on their beds and fragrance in thy footling treads; thou dost preserve the stars from wrong...through thee, are fresh and strong."

It's obvious that Miss Pacman is at least three-times more difficult to play than regular Pacman. I bet some women's libber invented the thing. "That'll show those chauvinist hogs!" So who's responsible?

But ever since I have been connected with this institution, almost every statement passed down from the administration has reminded me that the primary goal of Austin Peay is education.

An evaluation is definitely in order. University Center, indeed.

Homer said "And when he had marveled in his heart at everything, he went speedily over the threshold into the hall. He found the leaders and counselors..."

Traffic, signs, car lots...

Clarksville's five worst eyesores ranked Man, with his technology and innovations, has done a great deal to alter the decor of our natural surroundings. Some such alterations are for the good. Others stink.

With this in mind, I humbly present my list of the five worst eyesores of our community. These are of course, listed in inverse order. (For the illiterate, that means I'm starting with number five and working my way down to the worst.)

1). DON TROTTER FOR MAYOR SIGNS. This is nothing against Don or his candidacy. Don is a great sportsman and true humanitarian. By the time this issue of The All State hits the streets, bird cages and wood stoves of Clarksville, the election will be over. If Don is elected, I know he'll do a good job for Cville. The same is true of the incumbent.

Never-the-less, Don's signs are ugly. Everybody knows that green and blue don't match. This is especially true when you consider that we're dealing with a very ugly green here.

You have to give Don credit though, the signs certainly caught your attention. However, the same can be said for Three Mile Island.

(A close contender for this spot on the list is the Daryl Summers campaign signs which are still up from the August elections.)

4). DOWNTOWN NEW PROVIDENCE. Never has such a menagerie of electric poles, wire and portable signs been assimilated in so small a strip of road.

Driving through New Providence, you can't help but wonder if there's anything to the burg other than what is on 41A. This area was obviously designed by a group of businessmen, with

Outdoors

each trying to get there fastest with the mostest.

3). BRIDGE WORK IN NEW PROVIDENCE. The long traffic lines simply add to problem cited above.

As you go up Boot Hill, you see all of these cars sitting there dormant. It reminds me a herd of caribou that's gone down on its bellies, waiting for somebody to do something.

The good thing about this is the new source of entertainment it has created. The most daring drivers try to wait until the last possible moment before merging left.

Make no mistake, the CBers are betting on which ones will make it. A lot of cash changes hands on that road.

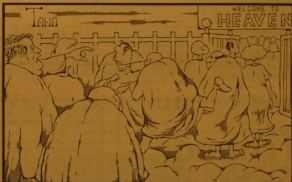

2). 41-A'S USED CAR LOTS. The philosophy that governed the design of New Providence, has been extended north in a much more inept fashion.

Where else can a pawn shop become a car lot in one afternoon?

1). THE NEW MARLBORO SIGNS. These signs are atrocious. They look like the little wooden figures you put on your lawn at Christmas, on a larger, uglier scale.

Unlike the Budweiser sign at Municipal Stadium, these would probably look better if they were covered with green plastic. One can always hope.

Grant changes will affect APSU students

by Susan Iherd

The official word from the federal government regarding Pell Grant revisions finally arrived Monday, Oct. 25. There has been two major changes affecting students at APSU.

Many veterans will now receive a portion of their Pell Grant entitlement for the 1982-83 academic year. Up until now, all of the veterans benefits which a student received or expected to receive was used as an offset against the Pell Grant cost of education.

The new calculation requires that we only consider one-third of the total expected veterans benefits. Students whose awards will be revised because of this change should be notified within the next two weeks.

The revised payment schedule reflects an increase of $140 million in Pell Grant funds available to students for 1982-83. All students who are required to pay out-of-state fees will receive an increase because the maximum Pell Grant has increased from $1674 to $1800.

These students have the highest cost of education at APSU. Approximately 40 percent of all Pell Grant recipients at APSU will receive an increase in their Pell Grant awards.

We expect to have these revisions complete within the next two weeks, in addition to the revisions for students receiving veterans benefits. Students will be notified by the receipt of a revised award letter in their university post office boxes.

Financial Facts

Some students have received a letter from the SFAO regarding Social Security information. Both the ACT Family Financial Statement and the CSS Financial Aid Form, as well as the federal aid application, ask for specific information regarding Social Security benefits for the student and family.

We have received word from the Department of Education that a student who left the space for Social Security information on the application form blank, regardless of which application was used, will be required to sign a statement saying that the student either did not receive Social Security benefits or neglected to include them.

The word BLANK appears on the back of the SAR when no figure is indicated. The statements have been sent to students who have already received their awards for the current year, and those who received the statement are asked to return it as soon as possible.

Students who are submitting SAR's for processing now will be required to sign this statement before an award is made. Also, aid will be held for next quarter until the statement is signed.

Any veterans who have submitted Pell Grant SARs and do not hear anything from the SFAO by Nov. 15 regarding their eligibility for Pell Grant should check with the SFAO.

With the number of awards which we will be adjusting, it is possible that we could overlook one or two.

Anyone who remembers the Financial Facts column from last spring can see how much the federal financial aid regulations have changed in the last few months.

It seems we can expect to continue expected change for the foreseeable future as long as Congress and the federal administration disagree on the future of federal financial aid programs and their scope.

Backed .38 Special

Foreigner's style not carried over into Spys' music

by Everett Buxer Bruce

Spys are a five-man electrical band. They opened for .38 Special last week, and if the Spys brand of Foreigner-derived rock isn't really that similar to Special's chugging pop boogie, at least the Spys are trying to enter the pop world of the '80s in some acceptable fashion.

Spys are considered by some to be an offshoot of Foreigner, a band who has taken a lot of criticism for their stolid acid sound that in recent years has been perhaps unjustly compared to the wide-open freedom of, say, the Clash. We talked to bassist Ed Gagliardi and keyboardist Bal Greenwood, both former Foreigners, and we asked them what they thought about the Clash and new wave in general.

"I've spent most of my life becoming a proficient player," said bassist Gagliardi, "and I really resent those bands like the Human League that use drum machines and stuff. As for the Clash—I can't understand any of what they sing!" Gagliardi said in his thick Brooklyn accent.

When asked about Foreigner, the two had this to say: "We eventually became sidemen in our own group. There was nothing democratic about it, it was Mick (Jones)' group. That's why (former King Crimson member) Ian McDonald left. Ian is very good on woodwinds, reeds, keyboards and guitar. But Mick wanted to be the sole guitar player, so...out went Ian."

Greenwood and Gagliardi asserted that Foreigner wasn't really democratic, but Spys are. "We sit around and if someone, like Al, come up with a riff or a line we like, we expand on it until everyone has made a contribution. It's very democratic."

The first, self-titled Spys LP is out on EMI-America. It owes a lot to Foreigner/Loverboy school of traditional heavy metal entities with a few distinguishing touches.

Although Gagliardi professes a love for the Beatles, Genesis and Yes—and Greenwood likes Roxy Music—the whole new wave/punk scene leaves them largely untouched.

Which isn't really a bad thing, when you consider the rock audience is the same way. But it has to be said that Spys are not the most original band in the land, and that it's debatable whether the formula to which they stick hasn't been long exhausted.

In any case, the group likes playing live. They see it as an adventure, and like to change the way they play at each show. They also like southern audiences because they seem more enthusiastic. Only time will tell whether Spys will make a dent in the rock consciousness. There's a lot of Human League out there.

Apartments dedicated to Meacham

by Margaret Langford

Austin Peay State University's foremost social events coordinator, Mabel Meacham, was honored last week with the dedication of the new student apartments located on West Avenue.

President Robert O. Riggs unveiled a plaque naming the Mabel Frances Meacham Student Apartments in a ceremony Thursday, Oct. 21.

The ceremony was held in the breezeway of the apartment complex. A reception followed in the lobby. Several local business and government leaders and the public attended the ceremonies.

Miss Meacham came to Austin Peay in 1946 as an instructor and dean of women. She then dedicated 23 years to coordinating and insuring strong social events calendar for APSU students.

Her work has resulted in events that have become traditions at Austin Peay, such as the homecoming festivities and new student week activities.

During the ceremony Miss Meacham related stories about the early years of Austin Peay. The most far-reaching event was the collapse of the Castle Building, which was then the student activities building.

Because of this collapse, the State Board of Regents realized that Austin Peay was desperately in need of new buildings and appropriated funds for them.

The Mabel Frances Meacham Student Apartments were completed in the summer of 1981 and have been in use since the fall quarter of 1981.

The apartment complex contains 53 units for student use, including three units designed for handicapped students, and houses 210 students.

The $2.1 million apartments, designed by Clark and Associates Architects, Inc. of Clarksville, were built by James G. Harris Building Contractor of Clarksville.

Inherit the Wind
kicks off events

A weekend celebration with alumni and friends has been planned by the department of speech, communication and theatre in conjunction with the production of Inherit the Wind, which opens tonight in the Travern Theatre.

More than 120 persons have accepted the department's invitation for the first reunion of persons who have been involved in the department's activities over the past 20 years.

According to Dr. Joe Filippo, department chairman, a small contingent will be coming down from New York for the festivities.

Most of the activities will be held before and after Friday night's performance. A banquet is scheduled for 5 p.m. at the Peddler. A party has also been planned to follow that night's showing.

According to Filippo, the guests will consist of current students, alumni, faculty and others who have been involved in the department in some capacity.

Inherit the Wind will run through Saturday, with performances at 8 p.m. The show, which is directed by Filippo, has a cast of more than 40 actors.

Several former APSU students are cast in the production of the R. Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee drama. They include John Ignacio as E.K. Hornbeck, Eddie Powers as the Mayor, S.A. Weakley as Meeker, and Rosemary Hunter-Foster as Mrs. Krebs.

Susan Herrington, another Austin Peay alumna, designed costumes for the production. She has also served as head seamstress for their construction.

Dr. Tom Pallen, of the theatre faculty, is technical director, scene designer and lighting designer for the show.

Reservations are still being accepted for Inherit the Wind. They can be made by calling 648-7379 during regular office hours.

ENDLESS BOOGIE—38 Special backup band Spys warms up the audience at last Tuesday's concert. Bassist Ed Gagliardi, at right, and Keyboardist Al Greenwood, hidden behind keyboards, were once members of Foreigner, but left the group after the Head Games LP.

WELCOME BACK—former APSU tennis star Amanda McShane returned to campus this past week. She is pictured with her son Kevin and husband Joe.

Fifty years later

McShane returns to AP

by Don Carlson

Thursday, Oct. 28, marked a day to remember for Amanda Dean McShane, a former resident of Clarksville, now residing in Hopkinsville, Ky.

She and her husband, Joe McShane, toured the campus of Austin Peay State University for the first time since her graduation from Austin Peay Normal School in 1932.

To top off the day, the tour was conducted by their son, Kevin. McShane received his bachelor's degree 50 years after his mother, in 1982. He is now a graduate student in the history department.

The tour included the library and a walk by Archwood and Harvill Hall, the only two buildings Mrs. McShane remembers from the 1930-32 period.

During a meeting with Dr. Roscoe Shain, interim dean of students, she commented that it was hard to remember the place after 50 years, but it had certainly expanded.

Mrs. McShane was a tennis player of some talent. At that time, the tennis courts were located in the area currently occupied by the Claxton Building.

One day, during a heated match with a friend, she missed a back-hand shot and yelled "dammit." To her surprise, Philander P. Claxton, president of the school, was standing behind her.

As Mrs. McShane remembers, she was ordered to leave the court, shower and change clothes and be in the president's office in 30 minutes.

Claxton has called her parents, also, to meet with him about the vulgar way their daughter acted in public. "Those days at the Peay were like a convent," she said.

Despite the disciplinary problems, she went on to win the singles tennis tournament that year.

Visiting hours in Harned Hall, the only women's dorm, were indicative of the convent days. Males could visit the dorm during a two-hour period on Sunday afternoon and they were only allowed in the lobby.

Since Mrs. McShane lived with her parents, she didn't worry too much about the rules of the dorm. She noted, however, that it was the best place to hide while skipping classes.

Austin Peay did not have a football stadium in those days, as Mrs. McShane recalls. The games were played in an empty field off of Greenwood Avenue, where Greenwood Middle School now stands.

Kevin, a more recent APSU graduate, also recalls some traumatic experiences at the university. They include the computer changeover, construction, seas of oozing mud and the sidewalks that would mysteriously disappear.

Cheerleaders build path to Gov's victory

by Don Carlson

"Be positive-think victory-think red," said Theresa Miller, director of public affairs, in describing the student participation events of the Annual Homecoming Week festivities whose theme this year is "Mardi Gras."

"We want to get everyone involved, we want to make this the best homecoming celebration ever," she continued.

"The emphasis is on wearing red all week," she added, "any one caught will be punished, and I won't say what that punishment will be. It could be almost anything, from squirt guns on."

Wednesday is Mardi Gras Day, every one should wear a costume, any sort of a costume," she stated. "It's also 'Paint the Town Red Day' in Clarksville. We will have many of the local merchants decorating their windows in a Mardi Gras theme."

On Thursday, the celebration continues with a band concert by APSU Musicians, in the university bowl, at noon.

"Later that night we will build our 'Pathway to Victory." Miller said, "each block of sidewalk, from Rawlins Hall to the steps of the Dunn Center will honor a member of the APSU squad. Each block will have the player's name and number painted in red on it, and each player will put his handprints, also in red on it. Finally a red stripe will be painted from the Dunn Center to the stadium; the 'Pathway to Victory.'"

The night will culminate with a gigantic pep rally to be held on the steps of the Dunn Center with many surprise guests. It will end with the traditional bonfire in the band practice area in front of the Dunn Center.

Daily activities abound for homecoming

by Gina Francis

Mardi Gras comes to Austin Peay in the form of the 1980 Homecoming events planned for the week of Nov. 24, including everything from golf tournaments to parades and football games.

Thursday, Oct. 28, five finalists for Homecoming Queen were chosen from a field of 16 candidates.

The candidates included: Betty Bax, Sheila Brigham, Miriam Brown, Hallie Coppedge, Doris Renee Dunn, Mary Beth Fletcher, Janet Goad, Michelle Harrison, Angela Harwood, Thonda Pentecost, Debra Potter, Sue Upchurch, Evelyn A. White, Pamela Marlene White, Jackie Woodard, Lennie Young.

Students were allowed to vote for three girls. The five receiving the most votes will be in the final election, on Nov. 4, for the Homecoming Queen and her court.

The five finalists are Betty Bax, Mary Beth Fletcher, Michelle Harrison, Thonda Lee Pentecost and Evelyn A. White.

A Mardi Gras window painting contest for campus organizations will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday. Each club will be assigned a window in the University Center.

The deadline for the contest, which will be judged by representatives from the art department, is 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Wednesday has been designated "Paint the Town Red Day." All Clarksville area merchants have been asked to decorate their windows with Austin Peay banners, logos, or window painting.

Students and faculty are asked to dress up as if they were attending a New Orleans Mardi Gras festival on Wednesday.

At noon the cheerleaders will perform in the University Bowl.

On Thursday, the cheerleaders will paint a path with the football players' numbers from Rawlins Hall (where the football players live) to Municipal Stadium.

At 6:30 p.m. there will be a bonfire and pep rally where the players and coaches will finish painting the numbers on the sidewalk to the stadium.

Friday is the day that all students and staff at APSU are asked to wear their homecoming T-shirts.

There will be another pep rally at noon in the University Bowl at which winners of the window painting contest will be announced.

At 8 p.m. there will be a Mardi Gras Homecoming Party in the Dunn Center. Through what SGA President Wayne Mosley describes as a "result of a lot of student input," Eddie Murphy, from "Saturday Night Live," will be appearing.

The band "Chevy 5," which specializes in music of the '50s and '60s, will provide the night's musical entertainment.

Tickets for the evening are $6 in advance and $10 the day of the show. A limited number of reserved tables are available for $25.

At 5 p.m., the speech, communication and theatre department will sponsor a banquet for alumni and friends.

At 8 p.m., they will present Inherit the Wind and an after-the-show party will follow, hosted by the AP Playhouse and the Forensics Union.

Saturday morning, after various breakfasts and coffees, at 10 a.m., the parade through downtown Clarksville will begin.

It will be followed by a Tailgate Picnic in the parking lot of Municipal Stadium planned by Mississippi Valley Food Services.

At 1:30 the football games between the Austin Peay Governors and the Murray State Racers.

President Robert O. Riggs has predicted that more than 10,000 people will attend the football game. "We've always had a full house for the football game," Riggs says.

The football game will be followed by various open houses and parties. Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity will host an all-school dance from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Jaycees Civic Center.

Fuchs added to health fac

"Call me Dr. Fuchs (pronounced Fox), or Jan. Do not call me Miss Fuchs" Dr. Jan Fuchs is a new faculty member in the department of health and physical education. She replaces Dr. Joe Miller who resigned last Spring.

Fuchs is from Northern Indiana, she did her undergraduate work at Goshen College in Goshen Indiana, earned her masters at the University of Florida in Gainesville and her doctorate at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale.

Fuchs taught as a graduate assistant at SIU before coming to Austin Peay. She enjoys golf, tennis, music-country and western and jazz-and the finding and restoration of antiques.

Although she has not had a lot of interaction with other departments on campus yet, Fuchs said that within the department of health and PE everyone has been most helpful and supportive. She also said that the students have been "good people to work with."

Fuchs noted that Clarksville seems like a nice community. She is impressed with the shopping here. "This is like a metropolis as compared to Carbondale," she said.

Fuchs is assisting the department of health and physical education in the examination of the undergraduate and graduate curriculum and the suggestion of changes.

Her long ranges goals involve her interest in wellness within industry. She is hoping to make contacts in order to further her research in that area.

Blazer errs

In last week's edition of the Trail Blazer it was reported that in their previous paper an error had been made. It seems that the qualifications for a homecoming queen candidate are that she must be an upperclasswoman, (30 or more hours) and she must be in good standing with the University (not be on academic or social probation).

The Revere Bowl to be presented is silver plated, not sterling silver. It will be presented by the Student Association, not the Alumni Association.

Only eleven finalists will be presented at the homecoming dance, not all 40.

Young Republicans generating interest

"After the elections are over, we would like to see continued interest in the Collegiate Republicans," said Dr. David Kanervo, associate professor of political science at Austin Peay.

Kanervo is the faculty sponsor of Austin Peay's Collegiate Republicans. The group has no formal officers this year, though, because attendance has been too small. "We just conduct our meetings as a group on an informal basis," Kanervo said.

The group is now in the process of drafting a new constitution because last year's was not renewed due to the inactivity of the club.

Kanervo had hoped that interest would be stimulated this year because of the elections, but membership has still been limited. "We had a lot of interest at the beginning of the year," he said. "I think other priorities of the students are the reason for the small turn out."

The Collegiate Republicans have co-sponsored several visits by Republican candidates to the Austin Peay campus this year.

The primary goal of the organization is to promote interest in and support for the Republican Party and its candidates. "We have encouraged students to become active in the campaigning," Kanervo said.

The weekly meetings give students a chance to meet with others sharing similar interests and to discuss Republicans and the various campaigns being conducted.

Some of the members have become involved in local campaigns, but Kanervo said the insufficient number of active has prevented any effective group activity.

"We don't have any thing specific planned for the future," he said.

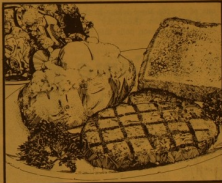

"Interest tends to be cyclic, focused around elections." He did say Republicans might be invited to speak at forthcoming meetings.

Interested students can speak to Dr. Charles

Boehme, professor of biology, or Kanervo, for more information.

Governor streak in jeopardy

Austin Peay comes home in pieces

This Saturday afternoon's Austin Peay-Murray State football contest is not receiving all the pre-game media hype that one would have thought. And there's a reason for it.

Austin Peay's 37th annual homecoming features two of the most troubled teams in the Ohio Valley Conference. Murray State hobbles into Municipal Stadium's 1:30 p.m. showdown with a 2-6 record, including zero wins in four OVC starts. Austin Peay's 2-5 slate (1-3 in OVC) is equally as disappointing when you consider the recent past of the two schools.

Five consecutive non-losing seasons have preceded Peay's 1982 campaign. A 8-3 record and OVC championship in 1977 ignited seasons of 6-4, 7-4, 7-4 and 5-5 from 1978-81 as the Gove established themselves as perennial league title contenders.

Murray State has been equally as successful, combining records of 9-2-1, 9-2 and 8-3 from 1979-81, including an OVC title in 79. The Racers were regarded as one of the top three teams in the league (along with Eastern Kentucky and Youngstown State) in preseason polls this fall.

So, what happened?

On Austin Peay's side of the ball, September's depth chart has become November's injured reserve list. No fewer than 25 Governors have been lost for the season due to broken bones, torn ligaments and the like. That averages out to the incredible statistic of nearly two Governors lost for every full-contact scrimmage or game, APSU head coach Emory Hale noted. "I'd hate to think that anybody has worse injury problems than we do," he lamented.

Murray State has had the same type of problems, Hale said. A rash of injuries and an inability to move the ball on offense have insured the Racers of their first losing season since the 4-7 squad of 1978. "They're a lot better than their record indicates," Hale viewed of the roughhousing Racers.

Murray State gave Eastern Kentucky, ranked No. 1 among the nation's Division I-AA teams, all it could handle on Thursday Oct. 28 in a nationally-televised night game from Richmond, Atlanta's WTBS-TV as EKV squeezed out a 21-20 victory with a last minute touchdown pass.

Hale expects second-year head coach Frank Beamer's squad to play a strong defensive game and move the ball primarily on the ground. "They'll run it a lot, using trips and multiple sets to fool the defense," foresees Hale.

But Hale thinks his troops will be ready to play. Tailback Roland Shields, tight end Rodney Tucker and offensive center Mark Stokes, all regulators currently on the disabled list, are possible starters Saturday afternoon if all goes well in practice this week. Throw in the fact that Austin Peay has won its last four homecoming games, including a 24-0 whitewashing of Murray State in the '80 alumni outing and there is room for optimism.

And if that optimism can carry onto the field, the remaining three games (Murray State, Tennessee Tech and Akron) could spell yet another .500 or better season for the Gove.

Next week: The All State will take an inside look at the upcoming Ohio Valley Conference basketball season. League coaches and conference officials will gather at the Nashville Airport Hilton tomorrow morning to preview the title chase in both men's and women's play.

Ohio Valley Conference football standings

	Conf.	All
Eastern Ky.	5-0	7-0
Akron	4-1	5-4
Youngstown	3-2	3-5

Hall of Fame inducts trio

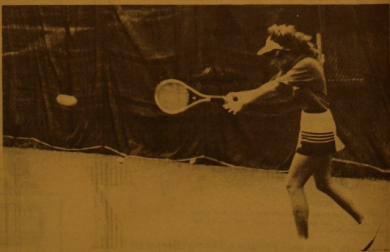

Two former Austin Peay athletic greats and a renowned Governor basketball coach will be inducted into the APSU Hall of Fame Saturday morning. The 8 a.m. breakfast in the Joe Morgan University Center will precede the APSU-Murray State homecoming football game at 1:30 p.m. in Municipal Stadium.

Clarkville with his 1971-77 teams, will be honored.

Tickets are $4 each and may be reserved by calling Janie Simpson at the APSU athletic office (648-7615) before noon on Friday.

Sherwin Clift, APSU sports information director, will emcee the sixth annual presentation, while University president Dr. Robert O. Riggs will give the opening remarks. Governor football coach Emory Hale will cite the closing remarks.

The three inductees bring the total number of Hall of Famers to 24 since its 1967 inception.

EYES ON THE BALL—Austin Peay junior Elana Callie returns a shot in tennis action earlier this season. The Lady Gove closed out their fall season with a 4-3 loss to David Lipscomb College on the Governor courts last Friday as Callie dropped her No. 4 singles match, but teamed with T.J. Kleynhaus to capture the No. 1 doubles match for APSU. For related story, please turn to page 15.

Junghahn wins Lipscomb Classic

by Steve Harmon

Hartmut Junghahn extended his fall tennis conquests to another week as the Austin Peay junior won the David Lipscomb College Open Fall Classic in Nashville last weekend. The title came on the heels of his top four finish in the MTSU Invitational on the previous weekend.

Among Junghahn's victims in the 32-man field were Peter Bear of MTSU, a 6-4, 6-4 hurdle in the quarterfinals and APSU teammate Fred Hall, who fell 6-2, 6-2 in the semifinals.

"I've been working hard in practice all season," Junghahn explained of his sudden emergence as one of the Governors' top players. "I'm playing smarter and keeping the ball in play," he added.

Peay's Hall, a Detroit freshman, claimed a little revenge for his Governor teammates by knocking off Trevecca's Nicklas Wehmal 1-6, 6-3, 7-5 en route to the final four. Wehmal had ousted Hal Jolley and Kurt Angel of APSU in Murfreesboro during the MTSU tourney.

"That was really a good win for Fred," said Junghahn of Peay's newcomer.

In other Austin Peay tennis news, Hal Jolley won his opening round match in the Nike Invitational in Los Angeles, before falling in the second qualifying round. Jolley beat Tim Klein of New Mexico, 6-3, 6-2 before being eliminated by UCLA's Craig Venter, 6-3, 6-3.

"I made a mistake playing at Middle Tennessee," Jolley reflected of his decision to participate in Murfreesboro on the day before he was scheduled to fly to Los Angeles. The 1980 OVC champion said his last-minute arrival may have hurt his performance.

Sigs win IM title

Sigma Chi fraternity upset Track-n-Thangs by a 12-6 score last Wednesday evening to win the men's intramural touch football league championship. According to Drew Simmons, IM director, it was the first time in four years that a team other than the track team or a combination of former football and track athletes have won the title.

Racquetball tourney being planned

The 5th annual Anheuser-Busch Natural Light racquetball tournament will be held from Nov. 15-19 in the APSU Recreation Complex. Competition is open to Austin Peay students, faculty and staff.

The field is limited to the first 32 men and 16 women. T-shirts will be given to all participants while the winners in both the men's and women's divisions will receive an as yet to be determined first-place prize.

A $1 entry fee is charged. Deadline for entry is Nov. 12.

Buddy Bumgarner, coordinator of social activities and special events at APSU is organizing the tournament to be sponsored by Ideal Distributing Co. and the APSU Intramural Department.

Austin Peay's Lady Gov tennis team closed out their fall schedule with a 4-3 loss at the hands of David Lipscomb College on the APSU courts Friday afternoon.

Miller named interim golf coach

Athletic Director Johnny Miller has announced he will assume coaching responsibilities for the APSU golf team to be effective immediately.

The action results from Mike Keith's resignation from the post last week. Keith, a member of the 1980 Tennessee golf squad which finished in the top 10 of the NCAA, left to become a club professional in Mississippi. He was in his second season as the Governor coach.

Miller's role as interim coach of the APSU golfers is not an unfamiliar one. The 50-year-old administrator was forced to head the team two years ago when former coach Steve Hylton was dismissed for financial misappropriations.

Miller said the University is searching for a graduate assistant to fill the vacancy, but that he will not hire someone "just for the sake of filling it."

Stockton receives Fisher Award

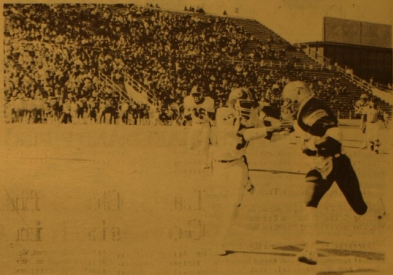

Austin Peay basketball star Mandel Stockton was the recipient of the Mickey Fisher Award, given annually to the best conditioned athlete in the Governor fall program.

Stockton, a 6-6, 200-pound junior from Glasgow, Ky. will team with second team All-OVC selection Lenny Manning as the Govs take over the starters this season.

Peay welcomes Venezuelans

Head basketball coach Ron Bargarzate and his APSU staff have welcomed two Venezuelan coaches to Clarksville for the purpose of observing American basketball.

Jesus Cordoves and Omar Sinza will be the guests of the university in their efforts to improve their national junior team at home.

IN HOT PURSUIT—William McElroy (38), Governor defensive back, wrestles with a Middle Tennessee player during OVC action earlier this year. McElroy and his teammates will grapple with Murray State this Saturday in the Govs' 1:30 p.m. homecoming in Municipal Stadium.
