Pi Kappa Alpha's Animal Week ends with block party

by Robert Boswell

Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity concluded its annual Animal Week with a block party last Friday night.

The week's main purpose was to raise money for the Clarksville-Montgomery County Animal Shelter. Various events took place during Animal Week.

The week started with a kick-off party Sunday night at the Pike House.

On Monday pies began to fly as the Pikes sold pie contracts to anybody with a dollar. Persons could take out a contract and have a plate full of whipped cream thrown in the face of whomever they wished.

Also on sale Monday were teacher kidnapping contracts. Many campus instructors found themselves being escorted out of their classes by costumed students who were hired for the job by one or more of their students.

Tuesday was all-sports day in the intramural field and many people took part in this event. Brookies was opened up for an Animal Week party on that same evening.

Sporting of sorts took place at the party at Brookies as a couples chug-off was held as the evenings main event. Winners of the chug-off were Walt Hill and his chug-a-lugging partner Donna Anderson. Both winners were given a trophy.

Wednesday a chili-fest was held at the Student Center and various organization made and submitted pots of chili to the contest. The Woodshed came out of the competition with the first place title.

Thursday played host to the "Busch Build a Mountain Contest." Five teams had one hour to drink as much beer as possible and build the most creative mountain type design from the empties.

Friday was the big day for the Pikes as the week long festivities came to an end. Due to rain a friabee golf tournament that had been planned was forced to be canceled. A dinner given by the associate members of the fraternity was a success, though.

Rain gave the fraternity problems in setting up for the block party that was planned for Friday evening, but the skies cleared and the Pikes took to the streets with many more people following them.

The scores and list of winners for various Animal Week events were unavailable at press-time.

Applications due

All students who want to reside on campus during the summer quarter must file their application in the Housing Office (north entrance of Ellington Hall) prior to May 25. Only those students with summer quarter applications on file will be permitted to reside in the residence hall post June 4, 1982. Housing for the summer quarter will be in the New Student Apartments. If you have any questions, please see Ken Moseley in the Housing Office prior to May 25, 1982.

IT club plans picnic

The Industrial Technology Club members moved into the swing of spring 1982, by visiting facilities of the Fort Campbell Post Engineers on April 14 and Union Carbide on May 5. May 16 a Club picnic will be held at Rotary Park.

The club also wishes to thank faculty members and university officials for their support in its events and activities.

Fall Schedule goofs

The Fall Schedule of Classes states that permission of the instructor is required before a student enrolls in English 101-01 through 08. This is not true. These sections are designed for students with an ACT in English below 14, who have failed English 101, or received a "P" and for students who have serious writing problems. Permission of the instructor is not required.

Loan requests due

According to the Woodward Library, students who require interlibrary loan materials for papers and projects due this quarter should submit their requests no later than May 14.

Interlibrary loan requests submitted after May 14 for assignments due this quarter cannot be accepted because the library cannot assume timely delivery. It normally takes about two weeks to complete an interlibrary loan.

Harbison to speak

In recognition of Law Day at Austin Peay State University May 13, Tennessee Supreme Court Chief Justice William J. Harbison will speak at 11 a.m. in room 313 of the University Center.

Harbison will speak on the Tennessee Judicial System and some of the changes which have been made by the present Supreme Court during the past eight years with respect to the practice of law in this state.

The John Jay Pre-Law Society and Pi Sigma Alpha political science honorary will co-sponsor the day. The public is invited to attend.

Conference held

The Iota Upsilon Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. has elected to send delegates Bennetta Shelley and Sherry Bond to represent the chapter in its regional conference. The conference will be held July 8-11 in Chattanooga, TN.

Shelley is presently the vice president of the chapter at Austin Peay. She is a junior education major from Clarksville.

Bond is presently Historian of the Iota Upsilon Chapter. She is a sophomore special education major from Union City, TN.

Many Austin Peay State University students receive social security benefits and/or veterans educational benefits to be used to help subsidize their education. Those students who receive social security are already aware of the fact that these benefits will be reduced by 25 percent a year for the next three years, until no more benefits for college students (18 and over) will be available.

The benefits will also be reduced from year around to only eight months.

One of the Reagan administration's proposals in regard to the reduction of the availability of federal financial aid will have a direct effect on these two groups in terms of the amount of aid available to them through the Pell Grant program.

Every participating institution has a Pell Grant cost of education, a figure which is comprised of a basic living expense ($1500 for an off-campus student), and tuition expenses for the particular institution.

The current intent is to use social security benefits and veterans benefits as the amount of Pell Grant available to the student. In simple terms, if the students' VA or social security benefits, plus the expected family contribution (which is the Student Aid Index on the Student Aid Report), exceeds the cost of attendance, the student will not receive any Pell Grant.

Therefore, a student could receive an SAR which indicates that the student will be entitled to a Pell Grant award, when he or she will not receive any Pell Grant once the social security and veterans benefits are considered.

All social security benefits must be reported on the Family Financial Statement. The company which processes the Pell Grant Student Aid Report will have information from the Social Security Administration on every student whom they know to have received social security benefits in 1981 which were unreported on the FFS.

Those students whose Pell Grant eligibility will be affected by the new procedure in considering social security and veterans benefits will be assisted with other forms of campus-based aid if at all possible.

In addition to the above changes in the Pell Grant awarding for the 1982-83 academic year, some other significant changes are taking place with regard to processing Pell Grant applications. As mentioned in The All State last week, there is presently a ten to 12 week delay because of the backlog of applications.

The Department of Education is not allowing the Pell Grant processor to work overtime or hire extra employees to assist at the time when their workload is heaviest, as a means of controlling expenditures. Also, as of June 1, 1982, the toll-free number to the Pell Grant program will no longer be available.

There will be a toll number available, but this will certainly discourage a number of students from contacting the processor about their SAR.

Students having any questions about this situation are encouraged to contact the Student Financial Aid office, Room 216, Browning Building.

WOODSTOCK--No, the APSU students pictured were not interested in drugs or Jimi Hendrix during Pi Kappa Alpha's Annual Week. Relaxing in the sun, these students were only concerned with puppies and the Go-Go's. Maybe cuteness is "in."

Board of Regents issue new policy

The State Board of Regents' Office has issued a policy that requires students who advance schedule their classes to pay fees in advance of registration day. The policy provides that those who do not pay fees in advance must have their advance scheduled classes canceled.

Students who advance schedule classes for the fall quarter are encouraged to read page 2 of the full schedule of classes to determine how they complete their registration.

September 22 will be registration day. September 30 and 31 are not registration days. On these two days there will not be any opportunity to schedule classes. The two days will be for the collection of registration fees from those who advance scheduled classes.

Those who advance scheduled classes and fail to pay fees by 6:00 p.m. on Tuesday, September 21, will have their scheduled classes canceled, and must register in accordance with the instructions on the schedule of classes.

pay their fees and hold a fee statement, properly stamped showing payment, their registration is complete. Should they decide not to come to classes for the fall quarter, they must properly withdraw from the University or be subjected to receiving grades of "F" for those courses registered. Also, they must properly withdraw in order to receive a refund, if applicable.

Computer programs have been revised, and we are attempting to complete the registration without the use of the Registration Master Card. Should this process work satisfactorily during the fall quarter, we may be able to permanently cease using the card.

When there are changes in the registration process, more errors than usual exist the first few registrations after the changes. The changes this time are not dramatic.

Remember: (1) To prevent the cancellation of your advance scheduled classes, fees must be paid on September 20 or 21; (2) The Registration Master Card is not required. If you hold a fee statement properly stamped, you are registered.

SGA banquet held; new officers inducted

by Robert Boswell

"I challenge you to help me make 1982-83 a tremendous year." Those words were spoken to the new student government officers by university President Robert O. Riggs as he addressed those attending the SGA banquet Friday evening.

Officers for sophomore, junior, and senior classes were sworn in and readied to take office at the annual banquet given in the ballroom of the University Center.

Riggs and Dr. Charles Boehms, vice president of student affairs, were speakers at the banquet, and outgoing SGA president Mike McDaniel and vice-president Duane McDowell also made speeches.

In the course of his speech Riggs told newly elected officers that it was an honor for them to be elected by their peers and encouraged them to take the positions which they have filled and do the best possible job that they are able to do.

Speaking on recent and past problems in the SGA, Riggs said that "problems simply can not continue to exist." Riggs encouraged an active SGA for the coming school year and expressed his feelings of confidence in the new officers.

Riggs stressed that academics at Austin Peay State University are strong and that the social and cultural aspects of the campus are equally as strong. He said that with Clarksville being a small town he felt the university was sometimes overlooked and taken for granted in everyday life.

"We are so much better than we are perceived," Riggs said. He stressed how important the SGA was to the campus and that it was also very important for the reputation of the institution.

After dinner and the speeches made by Riggs and Boehms were finished business was moved into the swearing in of the officers. Mary Kay Hinton, past chief-justice of the SGA swore Mike Latham in as the new chief-justice.

Following his being sworn in Latham swore in new class officers. All positions were sworn in at the same time by having each person state their name and office to be held.

Latham also swore in Amy Perry as executive secretary, Mike Trent as vice-president, and Wayne Mosely as president. Each executive branch officer gave a short speech after they were sworn into office. All were very consistent in their feelings of advancement for the SGA this next school year and all were very excited to get started on the new year.

by Mike Lynch

The Austin Peay Playhouse will wind up its current theatrical season in one week with the N. Richard Nash comedy, The Rainmaker. The show, which runs May 19-22, promises to be one of the highlights of an abbreviated schedule.

"The show has progressed two, maybe three times faster than the normal college production because of the experienced cast and crew," said S.A. Weakley.

Weakley plays the role of Noah Curry, the oldest of two brothers, who runs his father's ranch through a period of immense drought.

"It is a dream come true; to participate in this beautiful work has exceeded any previous desire," Weakley noted. "The forthwith performance of Hallie Coppedge as the show's female lead shows only a fraction of the potential that this actress possesses."

The Rainmaker is directed by Dr. Thomas A. Pallen.

Pallen is in his first year at Austin Peay; he holds a Master's degree from the University of Missouri and

"He shows a great versatility in being both an acting director and technical director," Weakley said of Pallen. "His regular use of playback on video tape points out every small detail all actors need to sharpen."

Weakley and Eddie Powers, who plays the role of Bill Starbuck, are both 1980 graduates of Austin Peay who are making return appearances in The Rainmaker. Weakley has been selected to direct the Hilldale Kiwanis summer musical, Damn Yankees.

Reservations for The Rainmaker are selling fast, according to box office manager Lori Petty. The Traphern Theatre seats 192 persons for each performance. Remaining tickets can be reserved by calling 648-7379 or at the box office located in the Traphern lobby. All seats are $2.

RAIN, DAMMIT—Eddie Powers will star as Starbuck in AP Playhouse's production of The Rainmaker.

We applaud rape awareness...but who's aware?

As is invariably true with most college newspapers, The All State is not above shooting poisoned arrows at those considered to be less than diligent in their efforts to fulfill the responsibilities of their positions. By the same token, the staff believes that due praise should be given when someone proves to be competent. When someone does more than expected, we write an editorial in the hopes that the behavior will spread. Such is the nature of this writing.

Due to the efforts of Steve Liebach, a member of the APSU campus police force, and head residents Randy Beaudin and Cissy DeAsea, two rape-awareness seminars have been presented in women dormitories since February.

The All State, knowing that Liebach has taken the time to collect information on rape awareness and prevention and has attended special classes in Nashville, thinks that the officer is displaying a commendable interest in finding effective ways to combat student ignorance about such a frightening ordeal as rape.

While the staff is pleased to see that the department of public safety is working with head residents across the campus to see that students receive helpful information on rape prevention, it remains unsettling to think that a total of only 50 women attended the two seminars.

Perhaps students are casually dismissing the chances of such things happening to them. If so, there is cause for real concern. Many students may be unaware of the fact that a rape was attempted on campus earlier this quarter. Luckily, the attacked woman was able to ward off the offender. Unluckily, though, the offender was not apprehended.

This incident is not mentioned now to frighten or embarrass anyone; the staff simply wants the student body to be aware that not only are there programs available to help students protect themselves, but that there are also very real causes for the development of these programs.

Two years ago, a woman was raped on campus and the department of public safety was subjected to the arrows of The All State and the criticism of the student body.

At that time, there was no existing program for rape awareness. There is one now. Use it.

Hello, Dr. Riggs, please talk to us

Editor's Note: The following editorial was written by Dan Carlson, a member of The All State's staff.

Talk to us Dr. Riggs. I've just finished reading your article in The Leaf Chronicle (Clarksville, Sunday, May 2) I have been here at Austin Peay State University for three years and I would like to write about what you did not put into that article.

I am talking about the apparent failure to utilize the most important single resource on this campus, the thing that will make this school great, or return it to what it was—a pretty innocuous campus peopled with pretty innocuous people who spend four years simply gathering laurels for the yearbook. Is that what you want?

In the time that I have been here, I've seen a student body whose school spirit ranges from disinterest to apathy. I've seen a good faculty, great instructors, beat their heads against a wall of students who feel they are nothing more than four year statistics used in order to receive allocations for further improvements.

"We are more attractive than we were a few years back," you said. You want to enhance the university's public image. Well, it isn't the pats on your back that you filled the article with which will do it.

We really haven't made progress. New buildings do not do it. Neither does riding on the back of the achievements of the faculty.

What is going to advance this institution is listening to the average "book-carrier"—and you don't. In my three years, I have never seen you on campus for anything other than greeting a dignitary or turning a shovel at a ground-breaking.

When a student tries to speak to you, he is shunted off to one of the assistant deans—good, competent men—but not the president.

Why do you stay in your beautiful office communing with God and Governor Alexander? Why not walk out onto the campus, stop us, talk to us, and find out what the problems are? You are busy; I don't doubt that, but so was Hyakawa at Berkley. So are Dr. Fort at the University of Wisconsin and Enarson at Ohio State, but they find time to walk among the students.

These men know where the problems are. Talk to the blacks, the hispanics, the retired and late entry people, the wives and servicemen from Fort Campbell.

Don't use the idea of "Town Hall" meetings; we know them for what they are: patently phoney.

Please talk to us, or else this school will sink back into the magnolia scented morass from where it came. A safe haven for blonde, blue-eyed binkies and buzzies.

SGA positions open

The Student Government Association at Austin Peay State University has announced that approximately forty-eight positions are open to eighteen standing committees in the SGA.

Wayne Mosely, President of the SGA encourages that anyone with an interest in working on one or more of these committees should contact him in the SGA office.

Mosely also said that one does not have to be a present member of the SGA senate in order to work on these committees. "Student input in the SGA is very important and it should not be left up to the senators and the executive officers to do all of the work," he said.

The SGA office is on the top floor of the University Center and is generally opened with an office worker present.

administration would be the mandatory food plan which has been in the senate for the past quarter.

"We've brought in a lot of ideas that we want to work on," he said.

He was very complimentary to the out-going administration and also gave congratulations to Trent and Perry and expressed his eagerness to start working with them.

Trent expressed his hopes for the next year and said that "it makes you feel good to know that students think you can do the job." Trent said that he and the other officers will be working this summer to make sure that they are ready for the start of school in the fall.

After the banquet Trent spoke on some of the plans that he and Moesley have for the coming year. The main concern he had was for the relationship between students and the SGA.

"More unification between the students and the senate will be one of our major objectives," Trent said.

Two of the major items that SGA will have to deal with till be the mandatory food plan and how to reduce the current food plan on campus.

There is a possibility that the campus could receive a fast food restaurant to handle the students, and the two main areas that students are meeting at now—the grill and the student center—will most likely be moved to a renovated area of the Memorial Health Building.

Another major problem facing the new officers will be the lack of student participation that the SGA has seen in the past.

"We are going to hold workshops for the senators and everybody else in the SGA," Trent said. "The workshops will deal with learning how to debate, speak and carry out the responsibilities of being on the SGA."

Trent also spoke on the relations between the Clarksville community and APSU. "There is still a lot of apathy from the community," he said.

Moesley, Trent and Perry all have fresh new ideas that they are going to be working on to accomplish.

"Student support is vital," Trent said, "and it is true, the SGA cannot be expected to do all it is supposed to if there is no student input."

Favorite business prof to be selected

On Friday, May 14, Alpha Kappa Psi Professional Business Fraternity will hold elections for the favorite professor in the College of Business. The elections, to be held on the 3rd floor of Claxton, will be open to any student with a current I.D.

According to Mike Henson, president of the fraternity, "one of the purposes of AK Psi is to promote better relations between the students and faculty."

By holding the annual election, students are given the opportunity to recognize those teachers that they feel have done an outstanding job both inside and outside the classroom.

Last year's winner was Roscoe Shain, Assistant Professor of Business Law. "I hope that all students will take the time to vote on Friday," Henson added.

Alpha Kappa Psi has also recently held officer elections for 1982-83. New officers are Mike Henson, President; Roger Harris, Vice President of Operations; Bob Wilkinson, Vice President of Administration; Betsy Atkins, Secretary; Sheril Bradford, Treasurer; and Mark Patrick, Master of Rituals. Chapter Advisor for the fraternity is Robert Martin.

Van Halen's latest album doesn't dive down

by M.M. Morris

Van Halen's Diver Down contains the current single "(Oh) Pretty Woman," penned and originally performed by Roy Orbison. Diver Down is a bit more mellow and smoothed-out compared to Van Halen's last album. Still as evident as ever is the Van Halen bang-bang style, but songs such as "Cathedral," "Secrets," "Little Guitars Intro," "Big Bad Bill (Is Sweet William Now)" and Dale Evans' "Happy Trails" sang scappella is quite a shock and a half.

"Where Have All The Good Times Gone!" is a basic moderate tempo hard rocker with focal emphasis on guitarist Edward Van Halen and baritone-voiced David Lee Roth. This tune was penned by Ray Davies, a member of the British band The Kinks. It deals with (as it says) "Where Have All The Good Times Gone!" This should hit homeplate to the general public as Roth wails "All my life I never stop to worry 'bout a thing, and about it out and never try to sing-wondering if I did it wrong-will this depression last too long? Woncha tell me where have all the good times gone!"

"Cathedral," is a montage of "hearing is seeing and believing," and is the real high point on the album. It spotlights Eddie Van Halen very progressively with either a guitar synthesizer or volume pedal connected up to an electric guitar with a bit of reverbation used that gives the song its awesomeness and depth. This song has some strong strains of classical Bach, a definite influence Eddie brought with him from his classical training and homeland, The Netherlands.

"Secrets" is another winner with its moderate tempo and fluid instrumentation in a bluesy minor key, but not blues as such-1982 Progressive Blues. Guitarist Eddie Van Halen shows here that he can play under Roth's vocals fairly tasteful (for a bunch of hard rockers), then taking the lead role comfortably.

"Intruder" takes on the impression of a horror movie soundtrack. Eddie on electric guitar here, running the pick down the strings to make the scraping noises, amounting to a very abstract and bizarre one minute and 39 seconds.

"Dancing In The Streets" starts side two of Diver Down with very positive lyrics topped with a funky latin percussion feel. David Lee Roth sings "All we need is music-sweet music there'll be everywhere-they'll be swingin', swayin', records playin'-dancing in the streets." This one's another highpoint on the album.

"Little Guitars Intro" is 42 seconds worth a listening. Edward Van Halen plays classical guitar for this and features him solely. This "Little Guitars Intro" has a very Spanish feel. The only problem is Eddie's technique, literally crying out for more work on the classical techniques. This is very reminiscent and dominant of veteran Steve Howe's writing and playing style.

All-in-all Diver Down is a very good album considering the hard rock (and a few pleasant surprises it contains, but the members of Van Halen should know what good intonation means after four albums have been produced, and David Lee Roth should also know what enunciation means here.

Very special thanks go out to Budd Bailey and Program Director Hank Boncuter of WJZZ radio for their help, cooperation and use of the Production room. Without these two people this review would not have been possible.

Rewards offered in Austin Peay's ROTC program

College students can be commissioned as officers in the Army in just two years through the Army ROTC Two-Year Program at Austin Peay State University.

By enrolling in the Army ROTC Two-Year Program, students do in two years what ordinarily would take four. The program is designed for two-year and community college students, as well as students at four-year institutions who did not take ROTC in their first two years, according to Captain Tom Patty, assistant professor of military science at Austin Peay.

Students start with a six-week basic camp, which is held during the summer before their junior year at Fort Knox, Ky. Here, students get their first taste of Army life. Students in basic camp are evaluated on their potential to be Army officers.

"What we look for at basic camp," said Patty, "is students who are really trying to prove themselves. We're looking for the leadership potential that makes a good officer."

After basic camp is successfully completed, students have the option of enrolling in Army ROTC if they decide it's for them.

The focus of the Army ROTC Two-Year Program is leadership and management training. Each student in the program has the opportunity to use his or her judgment in deciding what action and approaches should be taken for effective problem-solving. These skills are extremely valuable to employers both in the military or in business," Patty said.

"I wanted to lead and to perform," said APSU ROTC student Manuel Santiago. "And cadets do. Whether commanding a squad during field training exercises, devising a strategy or counter strategy in ROTC classes, or just teaming with fellow students on projects, Army ROTC demands development of leadership skills."

Management exposure through hands-on experience and solid academic courses provides another dimension.

"I want to get into Personnel Management," said Fred Schute, another ROTC student. "With the training I'm getting in the Army ROTC Two-Year Program, I am becoming more confident that my career goal will be achieved," he said.

Students attending basic camp may also compete for special two-year scholarships based solely on merit. The scholarships pay for full tuition, lab fees, books and certain other educational expenses.

Up to $1,000 a year in living allowances for each year the scholarship is in effect is an added attraction. As scholarship recipient Patty Andrews of Austin Peay said, "It would be rough making it through school without my scholarship."

"And besides," she added, "the Army ROTC Two-Year Program has given me the opportunity to prove to myself and to others that I have a talent for leadership. I always thought I had it, but ROTC proved it to me. That's something nobody can take away from me."

Anyone wishing information about the Army ROTC Two-Year Program should call Patty at 646-6155 or 646-7977.

IFC elects new officers for 1982-83

A new list of officers were elected to take the reins of the Interfraternity Council during the 1982-83 academic year.

New officers are John Lilly, President; Norman Miller vice president, Mike Trent treasurer, and Kip Stevens secretary.

According to John Lilly the IFC will become stronger in the next year. "I believe the Greek system will be much stronger in the future as opposed to the past," Lilly said.

Lilly went on to say that "I'll want to see the fraternities continue to grow. We have a good strong foundation, with the continued input, feedback and voluntary compliance of all Greeks at APSU we will all benefit and take part in the rewards."

An all "Greek" newspaper will be available to incoming freshmen during orientation sessions scheduled for the latter part of the summer.

One page of the 16 page publication will be devoted to each of the Greek fraternities on campus.

To provide additional information on fraternities at APSU each fraternity will visit some of the local high schools beginning May 10.

Lilly urges Greek support in order to make IFC work. "I encourage all Greeks at Austin Peay to submit suggestions for making the IFC work effectively for you," Lilly said.

Phi Beta Sigma has received the approval for membership from the IFC. Following conformation from the Student Government Association Phi Beta Sigma will join the list of fraternities at Austin Peay State University.

Harmon offers solutions

'College Night' lacks aesthetic feeling

Upon my return from "College Night" at Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati last Friday, I have but one conclusion to render.

College students make the best fans in sports today.

from tee to green

by Steve Harmon
Sports Editor

While taking my better half home to meet the folks, we decided to join a group of friends and rally round the Reds during their homestand against the Pirates.

Riding a wave of beer into the center field bleacher seats, our counterparts in higher education cheered the hometown Reds to a 5-0 victory behind the five-hit pitching of National League strikeout leader Mario Soto.

Happily as I was with the win, along with a good time had by all, I felt ostracized by the Reds' organization as a college student.

Our enthusiasm is taken for granted.

Even though the front office had reduced the reserved seat ticket prices from the regular $5 to $3 with a college ID, it wasn't such a good deal.

They stuck all the campus rowdies in the depths of center field and sold us 32 oz. beers for $2.50.

Same deal.

Granted, the Cincinnati Reds are a first-class organization, but there's a vital aesthetic element missing from the stadium.

You know, like the San Diego chicken or Atlanta's Chief Sock-a-homa.

Mr. Red the big head just doesn't stir up any excitement.

So, based on our collegiate peers' proven track record, I'd like to introduce a few proposals to the Reds' brass.

1. First of all, make all box seats available only to those people under the age of 30.

There's no sense in having the board chairman and bank presidents sit at field level because they're not yelling in support of the home team. Stick 'em up top with the pigeons.

2. Make a breatherless test mandatory for those wanting to obtain seats behind the visitors' dugout.

An alcohol content of .08% or above would be required to purchase a ticket in this section. Anything at .15% or above would receive a $1 discount. After all, the object is to win, isn't it? Why not get inside the opposition's heads?

3. Put a delicious-looking young starlet on each foul line to chase stray balls.

Why have some clean-cut 15-year-old kid from the local high school there? The baseball fans of today demand something they can look at.

4. And last, but definitely not least, lower the beer prices!

The Reds traded off all their big money players, so they'll undoubtedly operate in the black again this year. So why tap the resources of its hand-to-mouth collegians through their overzealous tap tax?

I think these proposals are in the best interest of baseball and would make the game much more enjoyable from the fans' standpoint.

Take note Reds' President Dick Wagner because a revolution is upon you.

Quiz: How many lawnmowers are in operation at Austin Peay State University?

By the condition of the intramural softball fields at this writing, if you answered zero or less, you're probably correct.

We could play with a football and get truer bounds.

Sigs host Canoe Regatta

Sigma Chi fraternity, in conjunction with Miller High Life beer, will sponsor the fourth annual Canoe Regatta on the Cumberland River in Clarksville on Sunday May 16 at 1 p.m.

All proceeds from the event go to the Wallace Village in Broomfield, Colo. Wallace Village is a rehabilitation center for children with minimal brain damage and serves as the national philanthropy for Sigma Chi.

A kickoff party will be held at the Sigma Chi house on Saturday night at 9 p.m.

WKVL radio will broadcast live from the party, as well as at the riverfront on Sunday during the race.

The canoe race features teams of two paddlers and one cargo person (minimum 90 lbs.) in a 400-yard dash on the Cumberland.

Competition will be divided into men's and women's divisions.

T-shirts are given to all entrants, while prizes of $75 for first place, $50 for second place and $25 to the third place team are to be awarded in each division from the Ajax Distributing Co. Trophies will also be given to the top three squads in each division.

A rotating trophy will be presented to the winning organization on campus, according to Canoe Regatta chairman Mike Zenker.

"The group must be from a 'recognized' organization on campus," Zenker stipulated.

Zenker estimated between 50-75 participants, weather permitting.

Registration will be held today and tomorrow in the university center.

The $10 entry fee should be made payable to the Sigma Chi fraternity.

Stroh's Superstar competition will be held from 10 a.m. - 1 p.m. today in the university center bowl.

The sixth annual event is sponsored by the APSU special events department in cooperation with Ideal Distributing Co.

The competition consists of a total of five events, done in sequence, as each contestant races against the clock.

The fastest individual in both men's and women's divisions, will be awarded Schwinn varsity bicycles worth $300.

Other prizes will also be awarded.

Each contestant receives a superstar's T-shirt upon entrance into the competition.

The competition begins with the contestant throwing five frisbees through a hoop. Each successful toss deducts 10 seconds from the total time.

Then, he/she must chew gum and blow a bubble before advancing to the jump rope, hula hoop and paddle ball events (25 repetitions each).

"This special event is designed to allow everyone to be a winner, no matter how large or small," intramural director Artie Manning said.

"I would like to encourage all faculty, staff and students to come out and join in the fun," Manning added.

Music will be provided by Platinum Sound, Inc., a local disc jockey.
