Library Acquires Reference Books

The APSC library has acquired five new reference books that will give invaluable aid to any student no matter what his major.

Musical Instruments Through The Ages deals with the various instruments, their derivations, their origin; Webster's Geographical Dictionary is, of course, concerned with the geography, history, location, and pronunciation of countries, cities, towns, and counties. There are also many detailed maps; The Standard Handbook For Electrical Engineers pertains chiefly to the math people; Bibliography of American Literature, describes the work of certain American authors and also contains the native literature of America in book form; Finally The Focal Encyclopedia of Photography covers generally the entire area of photography. Brief data is given concerning exposures for different months of the year.

The books may be found on the shelves but may not be checked out because of the limited amount. Since they are books to consult they are not necessarily meant to be read from cover to cover. Miss Givens, head librarian, asks that students take care of the books and to not take them from the library since it would deprive others the use of them.

Collegians to Present Program

The Austin Peay Collegians will present a program of varied music in the assembly program at Clarksville High School on March 4.

The 35 minute program will also include the male chorus, combo, and vocals by Larry Womack.

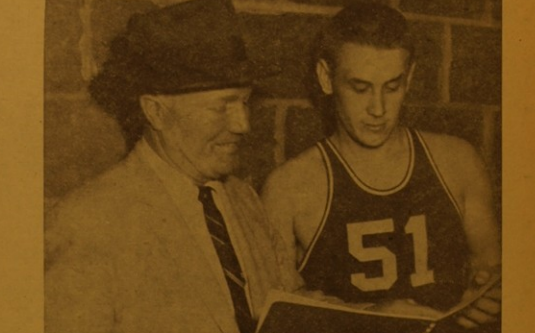

The Collegians have also played in assembly programs in Joelton and Goodlettsville high schools.

All State Staff Reorganized

The All State staff has been reorganized and reporters have been appointed to regular areas of campus news.

As members of the All State reporting staff is assigned to a beat on campus and is responsible for the happenings of that beat. Under this type organization the reporter will become better acquainted with the actual reporting of news and will be in a better position to keep up with newsworthy items.

The reporters and their beats are: Rube Meneses, Girls' Dorm; Celerita, Gordon Jackson; Mens' Dorm; Kenneth Poole, Science and Math Departments; Linda Bond, Agriculture and Industrial Arts Departments; Bobby McCord, Sports; Bobby Morrison, Assembly; Joe Warren, Administration; Pat Foust, Education; Don Alsop, Student Council; Carol McCall, Library; Carol Cardillo, Social Activities; Sheila Bowman, Features; Doug Stone, Health and P. E. Departments; Bill Cook, Science Editor; Marjorie Hawkins, Home Economics Department.

Coach Dave Aaron and award winning Tom Morgan check the books after Morgan's new scoring record.

Dr. Phillips To Make Film

Hollywood has come to the Austin Peay State College campus once again. This time it is centered in the science department. The biology division of the science department under the supervision of Dr. Haskell C. Phillips is in the process of making a film. As yet the film is unnamed but it is to cover the field of biology in general.

Its purpose is to make available to all the surrounding high schools a means by which the pupils may look inside the biology department of the college. It is hoped that this will stimulate interest in biology.

Again this year as in years past the biology department is offering a special course in genetics known as Biology 313. The class will meet with Mr. William Ellis at 11 o'clock each day.

AP Goes Rock-a-billy

The student body of Austin Peay heard music from the different veins, country and popular, Wednesday in assembly.

This assembly was made up of student talent only. The first half was in type country music vein. It was patterned after the fashion of the famed Grande Ole Opry. It was tape recorded for radio broadcast at a later date.

The students providing the music for this part of the program (which was known as the Austin Peay Hoedown) were: A. D. Caldwell, Bob Henson, Sheridan Cliff, Jesse Boone, Roy Woodward, and Sid Burton. Don Alsop acted as master of ceremonies.

The second half was provided by the Cool Sounds, a dance and jazz band organized and led by Larry Womack. They have been organized for about one month and play for dances and parties.

The members are: Jim Brinary, Bobby Smith, Dick Strickler, Sid Burton and Larry Womack. The majority of the student body rated this program as "The most entertaining program of the year."

Math Award To Be Given

In the mathematics department an announcement has been made which will probably be of interest especially to freshmen students in mathematics.

According to Mr. Slick, the department head, a book of formulae inscribed with the student's name will be given to the best freshman student in mathematics this year.

Open House at McReynolds Hall

McReynolds Hall was the scene of an Open House on the evening of February 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Suttin, resident heads, and members of the Dorm Council were hosts for the occasion.

The guests toured the building and were served refreshments by the Home Economics Department. There were approximately

Boswell Completes Fourth Book

Dr. George Boswell, professor of English, has written a textbook, "A Study of the Bible as Literature," for Austin Peay's and other literature of the Bible courses.

This is the fourth book Dr. Boswell has written and the second book he has completed in two years. He has worked on it for eighteen months. The book has 772 pages.

One main part traces the writing of the Biblical books from the beginning (ca. 1200 B.C.) to the conclusion (ca. 150 A.D.). The other part discusses the books by types of literature such as poems, history, and letters. The bibliography is 200 items.

Dr. Boswell's book is designed for easy reading by anyone who is interested in the subject and not just the students enrolled in the classes.

Govs Victors In Tourney

Austin Peay State College took Union College 86-76 Saturday night to win the annual Volunteer State Athletic Conference basketball tournament held in David Lipscomb's gymnasium in Nashville.

The Governors had to play three games to take the championship. A. P. opened with a 61-56 victory over University of Tennessee Martin Branch on Thursday night, came back to take David Lipscomb 89-77 the next night, and set the stage for the final game with Union.

Union stayed with the Goves from Clarksville for a half but couldn't match the pace of Austin Peay the last half. The score was tied 43 all at the half. The win marked the third time Austin Peay has won the U.S.A.C. tournament, winning in 1949 and again in 1951.

After the championship game everyone settled down for the presentation of trophies. Austin Peay again took the spotlight by walking of with three of the awards. Captain Tom Morgan and the Austin Peay Squad was called out to receive the first place prize.

Morgan did not get to leave for quite some time as the coaches voted him the most valuable player in the conference, based on season play. Morgan again was chosen most valuable player in the tournament by the coaches and received his second prize. In 1957 Morgan had also won the award as most valuable during the season. No other player has ever won both award the same year.

Tom had already set a new four year scoring record for A. P. by breaking James "Bohseed" Stone's record of 1,754 points. Morgan broke the record during the first half of the Martin game, while the Austin Peay kept control. He went on to score 25, 14, and 23 in the Governors three games to bring his career total to 1,807 points. This score may never be topped since the policy at Austin Peay is not to play freshmen on the varsity. Standing next to Tom Morgan in the coaches balloting for most valuable was his teammate, Kenny Gerardo. Kenny won the A. P. (Continued on Page 8, Col. 2)

Our Champs

Austin Peay Students have been wearing a great big smile around for the past week and they have reason for it: the Governors came out on top in the VSAC tournament in Nashville. Not only were they the tournament champs, but also the conference champs. After the victory, AP stayed in the spotlight to bring home more "goodies." Tom Morgan, senior basketball player was named most valuable player of both the tournament and the conference. In addition, Tom and Kenny Gerals, senior guard, were named to the all-tournament team. This was enough to put a smile on a student body and a feather in our basketball team's cap.

We saw, at the tournament, one of the best displays of school spirit seen in a long time. There was a good crowd each night and a spirited crowd. The pep band worked almost as hard as the players did and with the cheerleaders kept the cheering section ahead of all others. The good spirit and enthusiasm shown by the student body was the best thing that has happened on campus in a long time. We do want to say how proud we are of Coach Aaron and a fine team of boys who brought honor and prestige to Austin Peay State College in the VSAC tournament.

Girls Dorm

The girls in Harned Hall now have a recreation room for the first time in years. President Harvill had one of the rooms in the basement painted and remodeled and a new 21-inch television set moved in. This room is to be used only by the girls in Harned Hall and no visitors will be allowed. Folding chairs will be put in the room until the new furniture is put in.

The room will be under the direction of the House Council and the rules for the operation of the room will be set up by them. This will give the Council the needed responsibility of such an organization. The room will also have coke and milk machines and card tables that Harned Hall both as a recreation area and as a function of the House Council.

Trophy

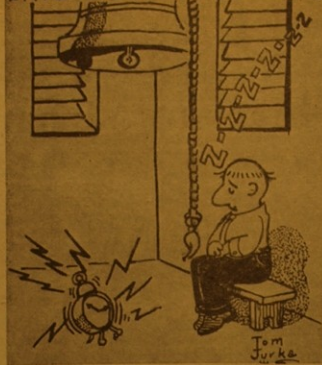

The All State is planning to give a trophy to the club on campus that contributes the most to campus life as a whole. This will start next year, and the trophy will be passed on to the new winner each year.

We are not sure if this will stir up any vast amount of creative work, but there is a hope that it will sharpen the competition among the clubs on campus. We realize that this will be a difficult contest to set up, but we believe with a little work, a serviceable set of rules can be established.

Clubs without purposes are not clubs, but mere social meetings of a group of people who had probably rather be doing something else. And if there are many meetings such as this, they will be doing something else. A club can get off awfully easily—the party is over, the page in the annual is paid, still enough money from dues to get by. This sort of thing has no professional meaning at all. It is merely an outline of what could be done. The fault of such uselessness lies not in the club's name or position in the annual, but of the members and officers of the organizations.

We realize that this trophy is not the answer to the question, but maybe it will be one in a series of steps to be taken to get more interest in clubs doing some work and benefit to the campus.

THIS MAY SOLVE THAT LATE BELL PROBLEM!

In Spring

Luke Andres, a short stocky man who had reached his present position of man about town only by hard and unremitting labor was not one who would be balked by such a trivial obstacle as this. After all even the best of us reach a point where we want to settle down and lead what is called the good life. Luke couldn't really comprehend what the good life consisted of but he knew he wanted to lead it and he was determined with the same streak of stubbornness which had gained him his present social position to prove that he could do it. The outstanding demand of leading the good life was to be a good provider to one's wife. Luke was sure of himself here. All he was lacking was a wife. The solution to the dilemma was absurdly simple: get a wife.

When Luke awoke that morning he already had a plan of action mapped out with some amount of clarity and of course his usual attention to detail that can come those of the upper half of society. He had realized the need for tactics and felt sure a wife belief that getting a wife would be the easiest life. He already knew who he part of his effort to lead the good wanted to marry, so it would only be a matter of making her want to be his wife.

The town was busily engaged in the endless cycle of buying and selling by the time he finished breakfast at one of the more fashionable cafes. Martha wouldn't be in town for another hour and he decided to waste his time looking around the stores, window shopping. He did feel a slight tension at the thought of talking to Martha. Her daughter was a school-teacher at the high school and it was her that he was to talk about to Martha. Yes, Martha had a fine girl there and he felt that Martha would be pleased with his offer. Of course it would require a great amount of tact but he knew he would rise to meet the occasion. He always had before.

He found himself looking at the furniture stores with more than his usual interest and was pleased with himself even more. Yes the good life was going to be very good. He had stopped before a heavy and was staring with rapid attention at the motions of the girl within who was expertly flipping hotcakes and frying eggs at the same time. What grace he thought. She does it without even thinking. And now, aware that there was something attached to the arms which worked this magic with food, he discovered a pretty face and even more inviting figure. Humm, he thought, I haven't thought about that before. I doubt if Martha's girl has anything to compare with this vision here. Oh I don't doubt that she's smart, but then intelligence isn't all there is in life. After all a teacher is only expected to be an expert in her own field and this girl expresses qualities which are very desirable. His thoughts ran thusly for a while, but he couldn't really be sure of himself. He would have to talk with Martha and then he would decide.

He met Martha for lunch and they talked about various subjects none of which they were interested in.

There is one thing, he said, which I have to know. A man such as I doesn't jump into marriage lightly. I must have reassurances that the union will succeed. Since you have told me that you favor the union and Molly hasn't been spoken for I feel a weight has gone. But there is one thing which I must know, can Molly cook?

Martha looked puzzled then replied, Why no, Luke, why should she have to know how to cook? You can afford servants can't you?

Yes, he replied, but I insist upon having a woman who is a woman and cooking is one of the fine womanly arts which a woman should know.

He rose from the table and paying the bill, left the restaurant, and strolled walking determinedly toward the little beauty seven blocks away. Behind him was the outraged figure of Martha, making a pathetic attempt to stop him.

By BILL CONTE

Seven years ago if you had taken the time to go down into the section we call sidewalk, under the shadow of the elevated, where the flop houses were thickest and the bars the filthiest you might have encountered a singularly arresting sight. An old man, nearly seventy, with a bedraggled grey beard and dark, almost totally bald head, served as desk clerk for one of the less prominent flop joints. His face was lined heavily with his years and his back was bent as if he were becoming extremely tired of his burdens. His hands shook visibly and even though he wore thick lensed glasses he still squinted in order to see. He was perhaps one of the most insignificant persons on the earth. They called him Old Sam, and Old Sam, realizing his own unimportance was glad that they thought enough of him to give him a name.

Old Sam had nothing to do with it. In fact, no one had anything to do with it. Old Sam was simply and irretrievably a chronic failure. He had been doomed from birth to forever be the last soul on earth to achieve happiness. Through the years he had lowered his goals as one after the other proved itself to be unattainable. At one time he had contemplated taking his own life, without success. The rope he used was rotten and broke on him. After the grisly experience he didn't have enough nerve to try it a second time. He had taken to drinking, but after a month being he woke up sober and remained sober until the day he died.

Without a doubt, in the ways we measure success, Sam was a failure. He accepted this and it did not bother him. But he had invented a story of a moment in his life when he was admired, and receiving the adulation of the fickle crowd, a success. When the pains of his age were worse than usual or the day especially trying he would ease his aching body into the world of sleep by telling himself his own fairy-tale.

In the early part of his life he had chafed at being continually passed over in favor of someone else. He had not accepted his destiny, but had applied himself industriously. After many years of knocking his head against this wall, he lost his interest in the fight which could never be won and became a hobo. The life suited him but he did not like to admit it.

He wandered about the land, and a war came, and he joined the army, not caring about the causes or ideals over which the war was supposedly being fought. All he knew was that life was no more or less uncertain than before. The war ended, as all wars must, and Old Sam set out wandering. He would work whenever the opportunity presented itself but he found himself losing most of the jobs he had and quitting the rest. He would take his job, reduce it to a deadly simplicity, and then tire of it.

Once he stayed too long in a town and almost became a citizen but the monotony soon came back and he left. Once he was married, but his wife could not keep her interest and he left after six months. He preferred the girls in the bawdy houses and never once worried about the possible moral or economic consequences.

Toward the end of his life he returned to city of his birth, to find employment in a third class flop-house. He was never understood why he liked it here, but something unfulfilled called to him, though he never knew it. Though he hated the monotony of his job he stuck at it, proving something he knew not what. Life went on and he went with it, un-caring.

He had a mind which he never used for any of the things his more sophisticated brethren indulged in. He had no use for abstract terms or high sounding words. He had no use for life. He died as the result of a kidney disease. But death did not frighten him, he accepted it with a peaceful sleep as he went to bed and did not fight it. He had been asking for death most of his life, the thing he regretted was its not coming sooner. He died and was buried by the city, he had no relatives, like the piece of dead meat he was. He was given a no marker, which was but fitting and the world prepared to make another revolution about its own axis.

Attention! Job Seeker

Interested in a good job? How about library work? It offers security, room for growth, and the opportunity for you to help others. There is a place for you in the city, in the town, or if you have a bit of adventure in your blood, in the bookmobile. You can bring culture, learning, and just plain entertainment to people if you are interested.

Interested in good training? This year four scholarships are being offered to graduating seniors who plan to go into library work as a profession. The Special Libraries Association offers two one-year scholarships (value $1000 each) to be used for study in librarianship leading to a degree at any accredited library school. A $1000 scholarship is also being offered by the Library Binding Institute. If you plan to enter Peabody Library School for the M.A.L.S., the Tennessee Library Association is offering a tuition scholarship.

Interested in finding out more about opportunities in library study and work? Stop by the library and talk with Miss Joanne Givens. And if you are not a senior, remember this: These scholarships are not only for the 1958-1959 school year; they are offered annually.

Austin Peay State College won its twelfth game of the 1957-58 basketball season by defeating East Tennessee State 74 to 41 in Austin Peay's Memorial Gym.

East Tennessee had some of the coldest shooting ever seen at Austin Peay, hitting only 21% of their shots. East Tennessee scored only 15 field goals during the game, thanks to a zone defense thrown up by the Goves.

The Governors had a 30 to 20 half time lead and busted the hoop on 41% of their field goal attempts.

Austin Peay guard, Kenny Gerald, scored 23 points to lead all scorers. Tom Morgan followed with 18. Hartwell led East Tennessee with 9. Austin Peay coach Dave Aaron's club now has a 12 and 7 win-loss record.

Govs Victors

(Continued from Page 1, Col. 3) Went last year as the tournament's most valuable player. The hard working A. P. guard pumped in 41 points during the tournament to top all scorers except Vradenburg of Belmont who had 97. Gerald's was the big gun for Austin Peay in the final game, as he threw in 36 points to come within two points of tying the all time record for points scored in one game by A. Austin Peay player. Tom Morgan also holds that record, scoring 38 against Union in 1957. Gerald scored 27 against Lipscomb and 18 against U.T.M.B. to reach his total of 81 points.

The coaches chose the annual all-tournament team and also chose ten men to compose this group. Making the squad along with Gerald's and Morgan were John Orr, Jerry Moore, and Jerry Forsythe of runner-up Union; Ken Metcalf and Jerry Brunson of David Lipscomb; Jerry Vradenburg, Belmont; Charles Smith, Milligan College; and Bill Lucy, Bethel. This was the second straight year the two A. P. stars had been placed on the all tournament team.

The Nashville Tennessean sponsored the tournament and Raymond Johnson, noted Tennessee sports writer, made the presentations of the trophies. Belmont took the third place trophy by dropping Lipscomb 67-64 in the consolation game. Milligan College was awarded the sportsmanship trophy.

This was the fourth year the meet has been held in Nashville and if Austin Peay joins the Ohio Valley Conference, it will be their last in the meet.

The Governors now go to Evansville, Indiana, to compete in the annual college division of the N.C.A.A.

Is it ever Ivy? Why, Coke is the most correct beverage you can possibly order on campus. Just look around you. What are the college social leaders going for? Coca-Cola! So take a least out of their Ivy League book and do the same! Enjoy the good taste of Coke!

Only One Thing Wrong

The statistics for the top four scorers on the Austin Peay State College basketball team of 1957-58 appear below and show Kenzy Gerald and Tom Morgan running neck and neck for the top spot.

These figures do not include the Volunteer State Athletic Conference tournament held in Nashville February 20 to February 22.

	F.G.	F.T.	T.P.	A.P.G.
Geralds	136	65	357	17.
Morgan	136	76	342	16.5
Mason	100	27	239	11.0
Garrett	65	22	152	7.0

The only thing wrong with these four names is that they belong to boys who are stepping down after four years at Austin Peay. These seniors receive their degrees in June.

They have scored 1,006 points

this year. During their stay at A. P. the Governors, with these boys leading the way, have been conference champs twice and runners up once. Tom Morgan has been all conference three times and Kenzy Gerald twice. Kenzy was voted most valuable player in the VSAC tournament last year. Behind these boys Coach Aaron took his club to the National Association Intercollegiate Athletics play off at Kansas City last year and will probably go back this year. There is no way of measuring the amount of good publicity these men have brought to Austin Peay during their careers here. They have been gentlemen both off and on the court.

Overstreet Trails

Leroy Overstreet, Austin Peay's contribution to the National Golden Gloves tournament in Chicago, won his division championship in Nashville and the Southern elimination fights. Leroy took a record of 14 wins and one loss to Chicago.

Overstreet worked out in the Austin Peay gym in preparation for his fight in Chicago. He will probably get back in time to take part in the first week of Spring football practice which should start as soon as the weather clears. Leroy plays halfback on the Gers football squad.

Sticklers!

Don't just stand there...
STICKLE! MAKE $25

Sticklers are simple riddles with two-word rhyming answers. Both words must have the same number of syllables. (No drawings, please!) We'll shell out $25 for all we use—and for hundreds that never see print. So send stacks of 'em with your name, address, college and class to Happy-Joe-Lucky, Box 67A, Mount Vernon, New York.

(SEE PARAGRAPH BELOW)

NEAT FEAT? No! Slick Trick? A thousand times no! When a magician makes a pack of Luckies vanish, it's a plain case of Tragic Magic! Connoisseurs claim there's one approved way to make Luckies disappear. That's to smoke (Yum!) every last one of 'em! That way, you get the wonderful taste of Luckies' fine tobacco... light, good-tasting tobacco that's toasted to taste even better. So, Ladeez-ann-Gentlemen, observe a pack of Luckies closely. Then carefully remove one (1) cigarette and light up. Presto! You're puffing on the best-tasting cigarette you ever smoked!
