Anything's Possible

As we near the end of the quarter system, we begin a restructuring. Those of us who leave with the quarter system understand that changes must come, but hope that those coming in our stead remember that Anything's Possible at the Peay. We made headlines in debate, basketball, nursing, professional athletics, test scores and artistic accomplishments. Our athletes outshone other schools' best, not only in the playing area. Our new president brought with him many changes. Our Centers of Excellence brought in nationally acclaimed writers, playwrights, and actors. Many times over, we have proven that Anything's Possible at the Peay!

CAMPUS LIFE

Another year has gone by, and a lot of changes have occurred. The old Pike house is not there anymore. Everything that was in the Browning Building is now in Ellington. Familiar faces are no longer here.

However, some things will always be the same. For instance, it will always be too hot in the library in the winter. Cafeteria food will never improve. There will never be enough parking spaces.

This year's book is hopefully going to show the "same old stuff" in a new and creative way. Maybe we'll even convince you that anything's possible at the Peay.

AP fans surround their Govs on their return from Birmingham. Why did they come in on a red fire engine? Photo by Marilyn Moore.

When the going gets tough the tough Go Peay

They didn't have what it took. The 1986-1987 Govs basketball team just couldn't get their act together — so some people thought.

But "Next Year's" team ... well, that was a different story. They were going places. They might even be in the top four.

Everything was going as planned. The 1987 team started its season on a sour note, so everyone began to count on "Next Year's" team.

Something went wrong. The '87 team refused to lie down and die. After their sixth straight victory, even the coldest Peay people began to take notice.

Suddenly, we were playing in the first game of the OVC tournament, and were down by 22 with six minutes left. Miracle of miracles, we won that game and went on to play MTSU.

The OVC tournament game rolled around and a huge crowd turned out to watch MTSU play Eastern Kentucky. Wait a minute, that isn't Middle-

That's APSU out there. Everyone, except AP fans, was sure it was a fluke. There was no way APSU could be OVC champions, but that's exactly what they were.

So we moved on down the road to play Illinois at Birmingham. The news media said we couldn't win. But by now Peay fans weren't so sure.

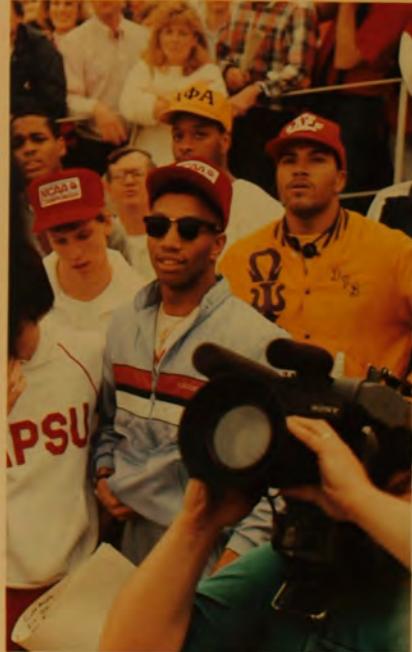

Then word came back. Austin Peay had beaten Illinois! Pandemonium reigned. APSU was no longer a nothing school, and the '87 team was no longer a nothing team. The nation found out what people with "no chance" could do.

The Govs took on Providence, so naturally Clarksville moved down to Birmingham to watch. Due to a faulty call, the game was lost. The disappointed Govs came home to a welcome that was just too awesome for me to describe.

It doesn't matter that they lost. They put APSU on the map. They showed Peay people and the nation what a group of determined guys can do.

The normally apathetic campus heated up this year as a debate over the Martin Luther King, Jr. holiday wore on. The controversy began as an alumnus compared MLK day to Veterans Day in a letter to the editor appearing in the Nov. 11, 1987 issue of the All-State. This alumnus asked why honor one man instead of the masses who have died for our country?

Marsha Thurmond responded by saying that the black race fought for their right to have the holiday. She went on to say that many veterans were dead but then so was Dr. King. "It was not a question of which is more important, but of who fought the longest and hardest for the day."

Dagne Moore also responded in the All-State to "APSU Alumnus." She said that APSU wasn't thinking of the interest of black students. Instead, the holiday is a "ploy to keep the NAACP off their backs." She went on to tell "APSU Alumnus" to "lay off Dr. King. The brother died fighting a war, just like those veterans did except that war is over and I'm still fighting."

This issue died down only to fire up again after Lee

Elder's editorial appearing in the Jan. 20, 1988 issue of the All-State. Elder's article made a few points in that there are no blacks serving in state-wide office, there are over 200 white supremacist groups in America, and most white attitude changes toward blacks are cosmetic.

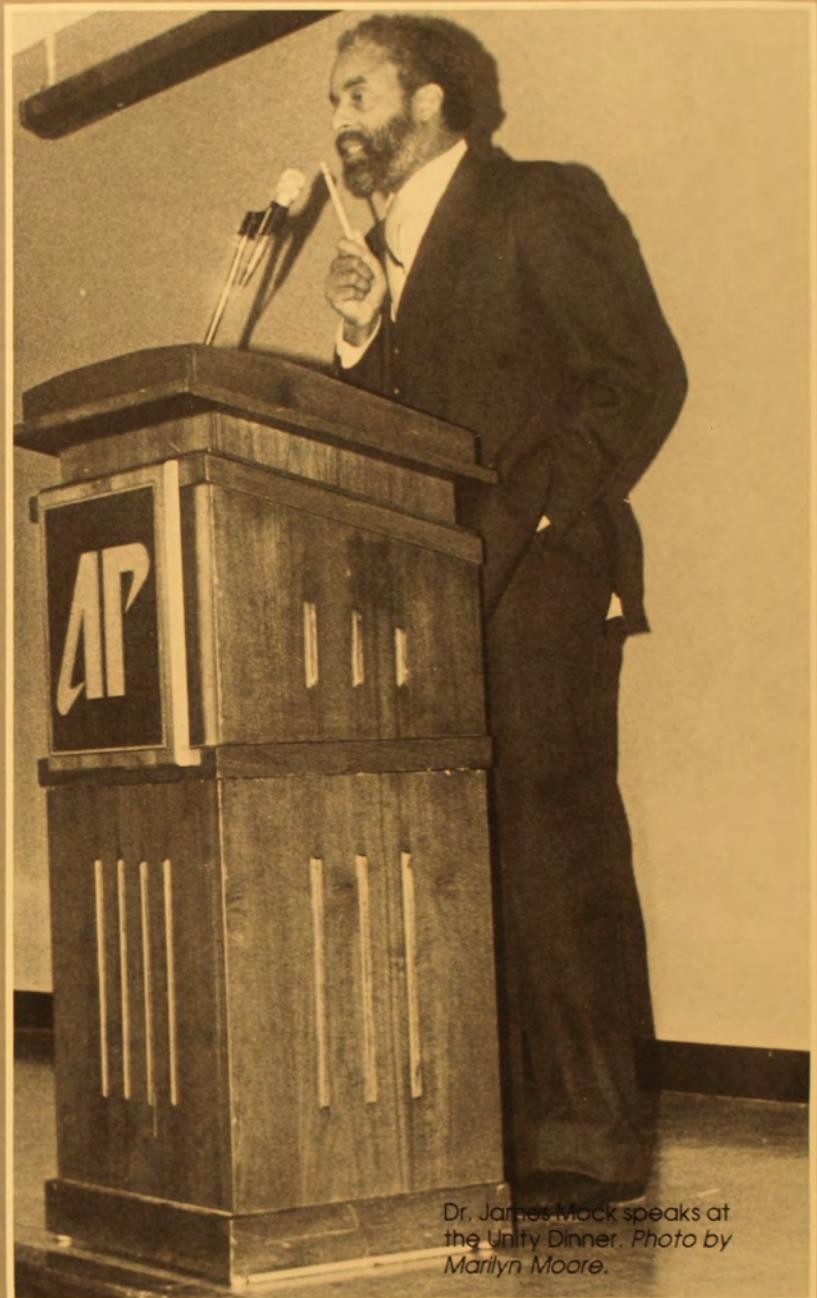

Elder's editorial went on to call Jesse Jackson a self-serving opportunist, to say that blacks must be ideologically in line with the mainstream of the American thought, and to call the establishment of MLK day "one of the biggest political travesties of the Reagan administration."

Both blacks and whites responded to Elder's editorial; some in agreement, the majority in heated opposition. A "Disappointed in Clarksville" wondered why MLK got his own holiday when other supporters of peace, Ghandi and John Lennon, didn't. Disappointed answered his own question by saying, "they didn't get their birthdays recognized because they didn't have what Dr. King had: color and a bunch of people with that same color to rally and scream oppression and prejudice for not recognizing their hero with a national holiday."

Even though "Disappointed" agreed with Elder, many more disagreed and were very willing to express their opinions. Robert O'Brien said that MLK day is undergoing discrimination and prejudice. He explains that Dr. King died not just arguing for blacks, "But everyone — male or female, black or white — who was struggling against any injustice as he envisioned a colorless society in America."

The most eloquent response to Elder came from Michael Turner and appeared in the Feb. 3, 1988 All-State. First, he attacked Elder's statement that blacks must be ideologically in line with white America. He said "Exactly what is the mainstream of thought of the American public? And why do blacks, or anyone else, have to agree with it?" Turner went on to ask why King doesn't deserve a federal holiday. "Instead of proposing that blacks smash the heads of whites, he preached social resistance with sit-ins and marches. He was a man who believed love and the word of God could achieve more than uncontrolled hatred and random violence." by Marilyn Moore.

the HAVES the HAVE NOTS

the CAN'T FINDS?

Once upon a time there were three college students; a have, a have not, and a can't find. The have had; the have not didn't, and the can't find, well he went to Austin Peay.

The Have —

"... You see Mr. university president, I'm having trouble getting in this class. They say it's full . . ."
"... You'll give me an override for being such a model student. Well lawsy daisy, I wasn't expecting that . . ."
"... You'll even see that I can pay fees early so I won't have to wait in a long line . . ."
"... Well I sure do appreciate it . . ."

The Have Not —

"... Mr. Advisor, I've looked all through the class schedule and there isn't a 412 Curricular Research anywhere . . ."
"... You say it's only offered once every ten years, but I graduate this spring, What do I . . ."
"... You'll let me substitute 554 Curricular Statistical Research . . ."
"... But that class meets for four hours every day of the week . . ."
"... Can't we make a deal? I have .24¢

The Can't Find —

"... They told me this was the line for financial aid . . ."
"... wrong line. Which one is . . ."
"... But that line ends outside the Dunn Center . . ."
"... It's ten degrees outside . . ."
"... You say I need a form before I get my financial aid. Where do I get it? . . ."
"... Another line but they told me this was the right line . . ."

"... I need a financial aid form.
Are they here? . . ."
"... Great! Now I can . . ."
"... You want me to do what? "
"... But, I came from that line . . ."

Applause thundered through the Jackson Civic Center auditorium. The sound was punctuated by approving shouts and whistles from the audience. Reggie Athnos had just been named Miss Tennessee.

When the Miss Tennessee title was bestowed upon Miss Athnos, it was not just the "crowning touch" or culmination of events which Fate had decreed would occur. Rather, it was the result of one young ladies determination to prove that "anything's possible if you work hard and believe in yourself."

According to Miss Athnos, you can't let circumstances limit you. "We all have an image of what we would like to be. And we all have the potential to become that person," she said. "But you do have to work at it. I've had some well-meaning friends who have tried to discourage me from pursuing my dreams. Maybe they're trying to protect me from possible hurts and disappointments, but I've learned to believe in myself."

She continued, "When I stood on the stage being crowned Miss Tennessee, I wanted people to look at me but see themselves. Maybe not as Miss Tennessee, but as whatever they hoped to be. I want people to know that truly anything is possible. It's not always easy but it is possible." by Lydia Leding.

Rules Of Peay

When walking on this campus, you only go uphill. Nobody walks through the bowl in front of Harvill Hall.

If you have a choice between walking on the sidewalk or in the street, always choose the street. If the person in front of you in any line is too slow, go around.

Never read or follow directions.

Do not park your car on campus, you will get a ticket.

Never be on time to a meeting.

If you check your p. o. box and there is paper inside, throw it on the floor.

WE BE JAMMIN'

JAMS! They are exciting and can be found everywhere. These new and trendy shorts are known for being casual and comfortable. Students wear them anywhere. It makes no difference if they are going out for a bite to eat or going to play tennis.

Jams have styles for everyone. Whether you like stripes, dots, loud, calm, short, or long shorts, there is a pair to fit your need and personality.

Jams are ideal for all. People can move in them and people can groove in them. They are for being on the go, or just for taking things slow.

OF AUSTIN PEAY PRIDE

Wow! What a college experience! Homecoming is colorful, exciting, and full of spirit. Color Wars promoted enthusiasm among the students and faculty. Competition between the groups filled the air. But, on the whole, the Homecoming spirit brought everyone together.

Coach Emory Hale expressed the true meaning of Homecoming by saying "Homecoming is a time for people to be together, the old with the old, the new celebrating the old coming back, remembering tradition and supporting the school." It is filled with fun, challenges, pretty girls, special dates, parties, the Greeks, flowers, a nice autumn day, parades, bonfires, and, of course, the football game.

During Homecoming the University puts its best foot forward, opening itself up to the community and the school's supporters. Parents come to visit their children and alumni come to visit their alma mater.

Although the football game was a little disappointing, the Homecoming experience was a tremendous success. Feelings of excitement spread throughout the campus — especially through the Homecoming Court. "It was tremendously exciting. It was so neat to look up in the stands and see so much red. The cheerleaders really do embody the school in spirit," stated Homecoming Queen Beth Lindsey, with a smile from ear to ear.

The bonfire, parade, and color wars just created the mood. The weather could not have been better for the occasion. It all promoted the atmosphere. Homecoming is an opportunity. It is an opportunity to show off the school, the spirit, and the pride. By Lauri Ingram.

Personality

Why do students come to Austin Peay?

"It was cheap."

"I got a scholarship."

"I wanted to play football."

"I had to go somewhere."

People choose the Peay for various reasons, but what makes them stay? I've been here four years now and have watched the people come and go, some leaving after one quarter, some staying on to graduate.

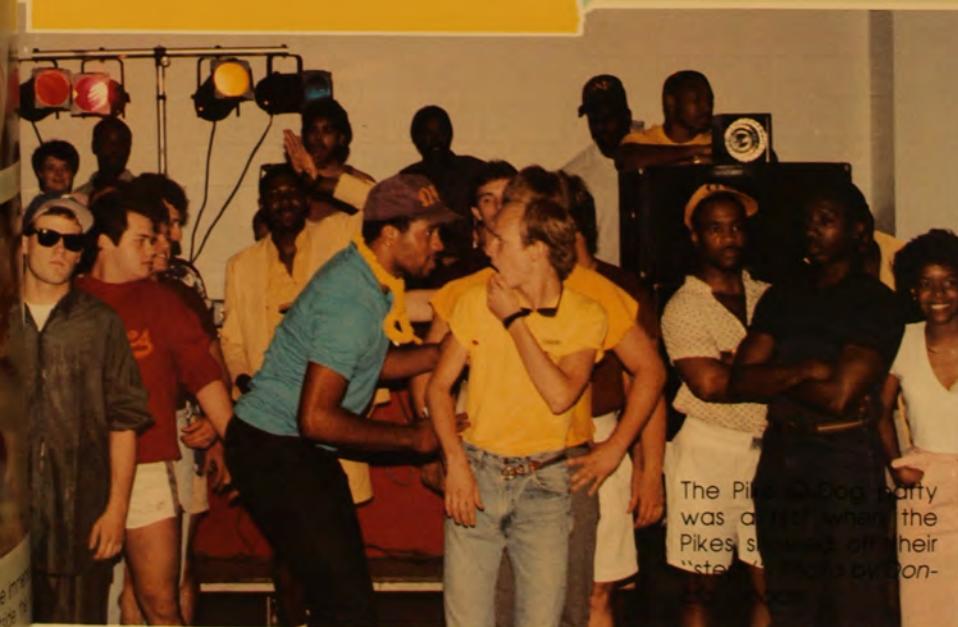

The ones that stay face the ultimate question of WHY? "Why stay here that long? How could you stand it?"

The poor victim of this question frantically searches his mind for an answer. How can he logically explain to a non-Peay person the attraction of Austin Peay? His eyes glaze over. His mouth opens and closes sporadically. He searches for some logical reason for liking AP. He thinks of the personality of the school, the differences, the aspects that set it apart from everything else. But how can he explain that to an outsider?

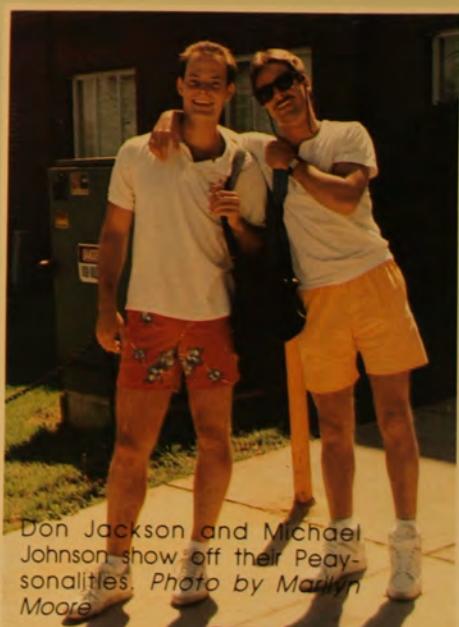

"Uh, well, uh . . . why Austin Peay . . . because, well, uh . . . I like it, that's all, I just like it." By Marilyn Moore.

Ode To

Listen my children, and you shall hear,
The tale of a senior with just one more year.

Once I fell prey to freshman vice,
So carefully listen to this senior's advice.

Go to parties, you only live once.
Drink if you want, but not if you must.

Go to class always, else you fail in the end.
Stay here on weekends, make lots of friends.

Get plenty of sleep, but study for tests.
When papers are due, don't think about rest.

Eat green veggies, just like Mom said.
Wear a seat belt or you'll wind up dead.

Go see at least one football game.
If you meet gorgeous men, remember the names.

Go to a concert or go to a play.
But don't look for mail in your box every day.

Whenever you can, take upper level.
'Cause later those buggers will give you the devil.

Don't be a wise ass, and don't be a bore.
Get involved on campus in clubs, frats and more.

A senior can tell you whose class not to take,
So please heed their warning — don't repeat their mistake.

So be proud you're a Peay, and not a Blue Raider,
And particularly not a BIG ORANGE tomater.

Peter Pan Syndrome

College students never grow up, at least while they remain on campus. Anything and everything is done to look young, act young, and think young. Psychology majors have termed this as the Peter Pan Syndrome.

The Peter Pan bug hits students the first day of their freshman year. The first symptoms include excessive laughter, all night parties, cutting classes, multi hours in the game room, drinking anything but anti-freeze, becoming Red Barn junkies, listening to loud music, and mammoth phone bills.

By your sophomore year, the syndrome has progressed to exclude hours in the game room and loud music.

Entering your junior year, you no longer laugh, are no longer a Red Barn junkie, and no longer have mammoth phone bills.

By your senior year, all you can do is party. After graduation, you grow up. You're too tired for anything else. Peter Pan struck. by Marilyn Moore and Jeff Hardin.

catch the BEAT

Music, exciting people, and exuberant crowds can all be provided at just about any concert you go to. Our last concert may not have interested everyone on campus, or generated a huge crowd, but it wasn't that bad.

I will admit I wasn't too thrilled about having to watch Marie Osmond and Eddie Rabbit in concert. It got worse when I realized I had to sit through Paite McIntryre (Reba's brother).

The lights came on, Paite walked on stage, and I thought, "Oh my God!" Well, I took a few pictures and tried not to listen. I got really scared when I caught myself listening and when my foot started tapping, I went into panic mode.

Marie came on and then Eddie. The small crowd showed what it could do by providing enough noise to fill the Dunn Center. Excitement passed from person to person like an electric current. Hands were clappin! Feet were tappin'. And by the concert's end, everyone was ready to groove. By Marilyn Moore.

THE EYE OF THE STORM

You're about to enter the best years of your life, or so you've been told. Four or five years of college life are yours for the taking.

As college students, many of us have all the freedom but few responsibilities. We're sheltered from the "real world." We're constantly surrounded by our friends, and we usually have our parents to fall back on for support.

The college years can be your most laid-back care-free years. They are the "eye of the storm." by Marilyn Moore.

Enchanted vening

"And the new Miss APSU is . . ."

Ten of our finest young women awaited in suspense along with the audience as the emcee read out the winners name.

This year's pageant, considered both highly successful and very exciting, was held Nov. 20, 1987. The audience cheered and encouraged each contestant through the evening gown, swimwear and talent competition.

Everyone was glad when the judges reached their final decision. Christy Ruth Corley was fourth runner up, third runner up was Cindy Lea Puckett, second runner up was Elizabeth Domico, Lee Ellen Ferguson was named first runner up, and the title of Miss APSU 1988 went to Nicole Sykes.

Being nervous and tense were just a few things these young women went through during their pageant experience. The girls devoted their time, talent and energy to make the pageant a success. And, in the end, they succeeded in dazzling all with an "Enchanted Evening."

The Tradition Continues

Fifty years ago there was no Austin Peay as we know it today. Instead, Austin Peay Normal School existed and with it grew many of the ideas and traditions we take for granted.

On June 25, 1987, the Alumni Association, headed by Doug Barber, hosted a fifty year reunion for the 1930's graduates of Austin Peay.

Among those returning to their alma mater was Mary Matlock, the first student to enroll at the new school. After her graduation from AP Normal, she returned each year to light the candles at the Farewell and Hail ceremony, a symbolic ceremony in which participating students light candles to honor their accomplishments and Austin Peay.

"In the dormitories, room rent is only $5.00 a month. Young women are required to live in the dormitory or in rooms approved by the dean. Tuition is free to students residing in Tennessee. Students from other states pay $20.00 a quarter." (Excerpt from AP Normal Student Bulletin)

Farewell To Graduates And Hail To The Future.

The graduates, ranging in age from 70 to 85, came bringing their separate and distinct memories of what college was like fifty years ago.

From the Farewell & Hail ceremony: "Symbolically with these lights, we pass on to the students of Austin Peay our good hopes, our best wishes, and, if they but hearken to it, a measure of our acquired wisdom." By Marilyn Moore

Anything's Possible In Small Pieces

It takes a lot of time and patience to be number one. Many hours of study, practice and rehearsal go into becoming what you want. Plus, probably the most difficult aspect of being the best is never seeing immediate results. Being number one comes in spurts.

On campus we have students whose hard work is making their school number one in nearly every aspect of college life. Not only do our students look good, but our departments look good.

In the next few pages we want to show you just what is possible with a few dedicated individuals.

Governors' Pride

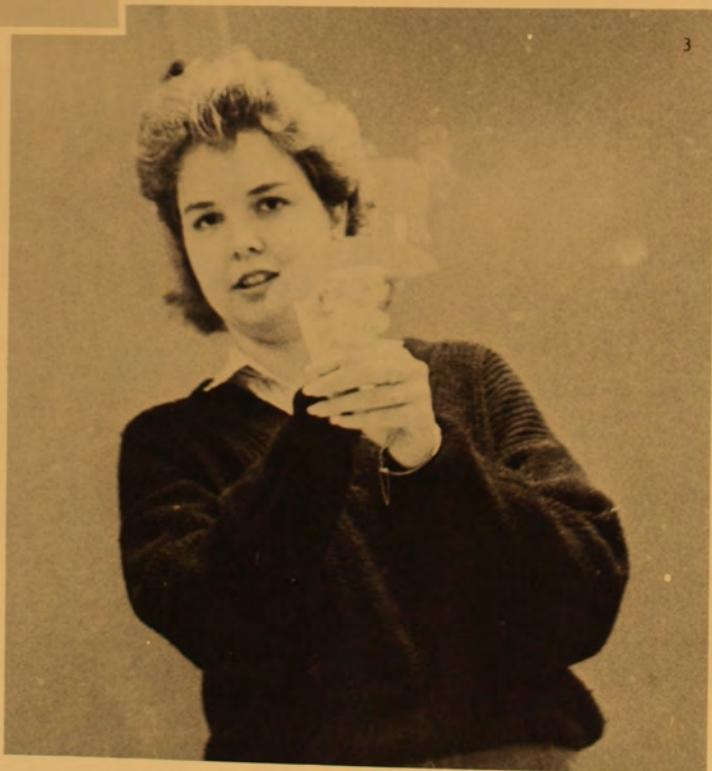

Debate means many things to many people such as arguing, stating points, or voicing opinions. But, to our debate team, it means winning.

Last year our debate team was regional and state champions and ranked tenth nationally. According to Rory Davis, two-year debate member, it was a scary feeling to rank nationally. "I went through culture shock. Here I was from this unknown school, and suddenly everyone knew us," he said.

Being from a nationally ranked school brings a lot of responsibility. "All of a sudden, we were debate leaders," Davis said. "Instead of being unknown, we commanded respect. People heard of us and knew we were good."

Last year's team managed to win with a vast assortment of experienced and not so experienced teams. "We went into the state championships with only one experienced team. We had a small group of debaters last year, but we proved we could compete," Davis said.

This year looks promising for the debate/forensics team. "We're highly competitive this year. We have more people with more commitment," Davis said. "Right now planning to win the nationals is too high of a goal. CEDA nationals are so elite, just the opportunity to return would be an accomplishment." by Marilyn Moore.

Memo: Education Department

Can you imagine having the task of teaching the world's leaders for generations to come? Not everyone is cut out for it, but the chosen few are doing quite a job and enjoying every minute of it. Dr. Dolores A. Gore explains, "We teach others to teach. We teach our students how to work with individuals."

It sounds like a lot of work and dedication. What keeps the fire burning? "The students are motivated," stated Dr. Don Lambert. "We just need to have more. There will be a great demand for them in the future."

Dr. Ron Groseclose feels our campus is ideal. "It is a manageable-sized university but small enough for the personal touch. The location is wonderful."

New programs are being tested, planned, and altered. Early childhood education is often stressed. The education department and Head Start program are working together for new opportunities. The children from the Head Start program are bused to Austin Peay for students to teach.

"This gives hands-on experience that can't be taught," Gore said. "Also," Gore continued, "plans are being made for language arts and social studies teachers to cooperate and find methods to intergrate skills across the subject lines."

Groseclose would like to see the major develop into a five year study program. "It would be nice if our students could student teach for an additional year instead of just one quarter, and give them a chance to put theory into practice for a longer internship."

Many honors have been awarded to the students and faculty. Some teaching majors here at Austin Peay have gone on to be finalists in the Nationwide Student Competition, as well as the state. Many hold offices in the National Education Association. Recently, the Top Early Childhood Education Student Award in Tennessee went to an Austin Peay student, Allan Anderson. The professors in this program are doing well also. Dr. Gore has been given the Distinguished Professor of the Year Award, and the Outstanding Volunteer Service Award from Head Start. by Lauri Ingram.

Memo: Two Centers of Excellence

Growing and changing is the name of the game as Tennessee colleges compete for students. Our school is definitely doing some growing with two Centers of Excellence, one in the creative arts and one in field biology.

The Center for the Creative Arts provides and promotes different kinds of concerts, music recitals, art exhibitions, creative writing and theatre productions throughout the year. Many well-known artists are brought in by the center to share their skills and trades with students. The four departments of the center are music, art, creative writing and theatre. We have the privilege of having the only center of excellence in the creative arts.

In addition to the center, we also house the field biology area of LBL projects. Graduate students work in five basic research areas: aquatic macro-invertebrates, vascular plants, forest communities, herpetological research, and small community studies of small vertebrates. This is done in an area between Lake Barkley and Kentucky Lake. Long term research and the opportunity for gathering ecological data are found at LBL.

So, sit down and take a look at what's going on around you. Look at our accomplishments in our educational programs. Take part in these activities and watch as they grow. by Lauri Ingram.

Memo: Nursing Students

The nursing students have proven to APSU and to the rest of the nation that they are a different breed of people.

In 1987, the graduating senior nurses received the highest mean score on the ACT-Comp test in the nation. AP's nursing program is ranked in the top 2 percent of nursing programs in Tennessee. Plus, the program was recognized in IMPRINT, national Student Nurses Association magazine, as one of the top 20 nursing schools in the nation. In 1985 we had the highest state score on board tests and the second highest class average in Tennessee.

According to Jackie Harris, former SNA president, nursing is "not just getting a degree. It's a way of life."

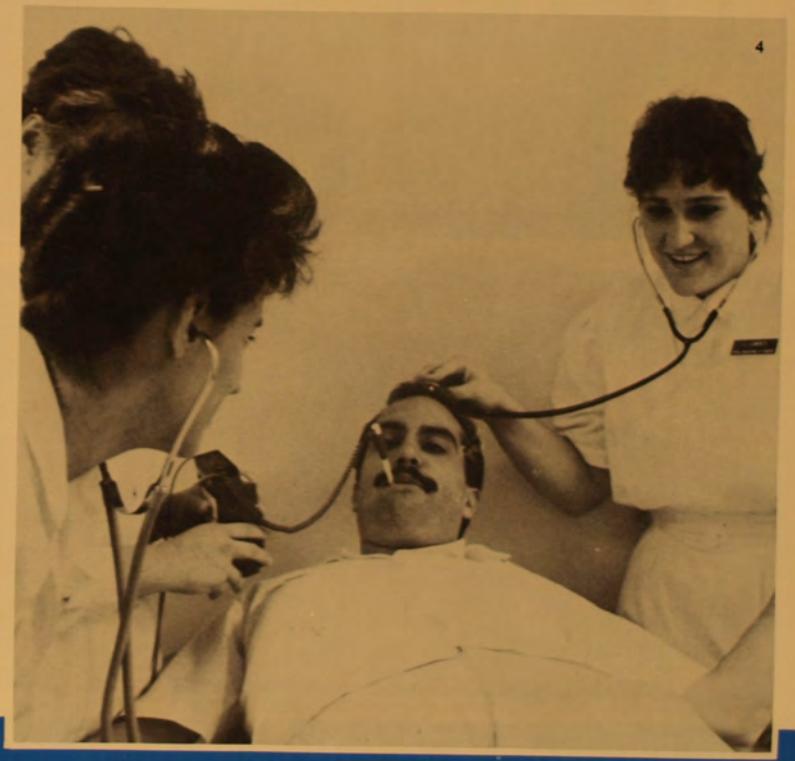

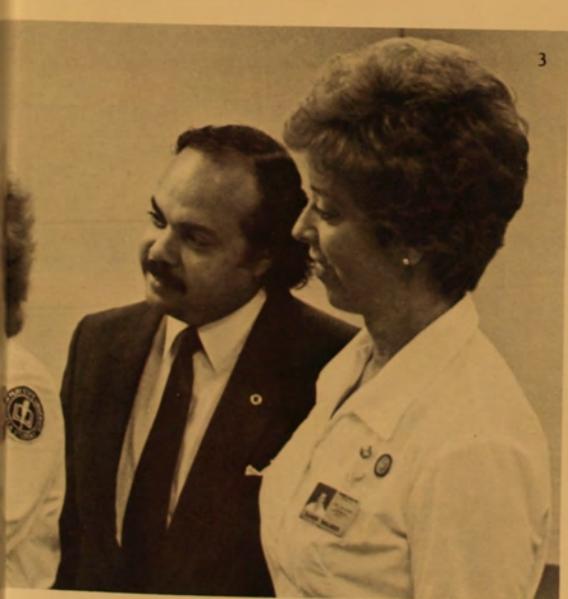

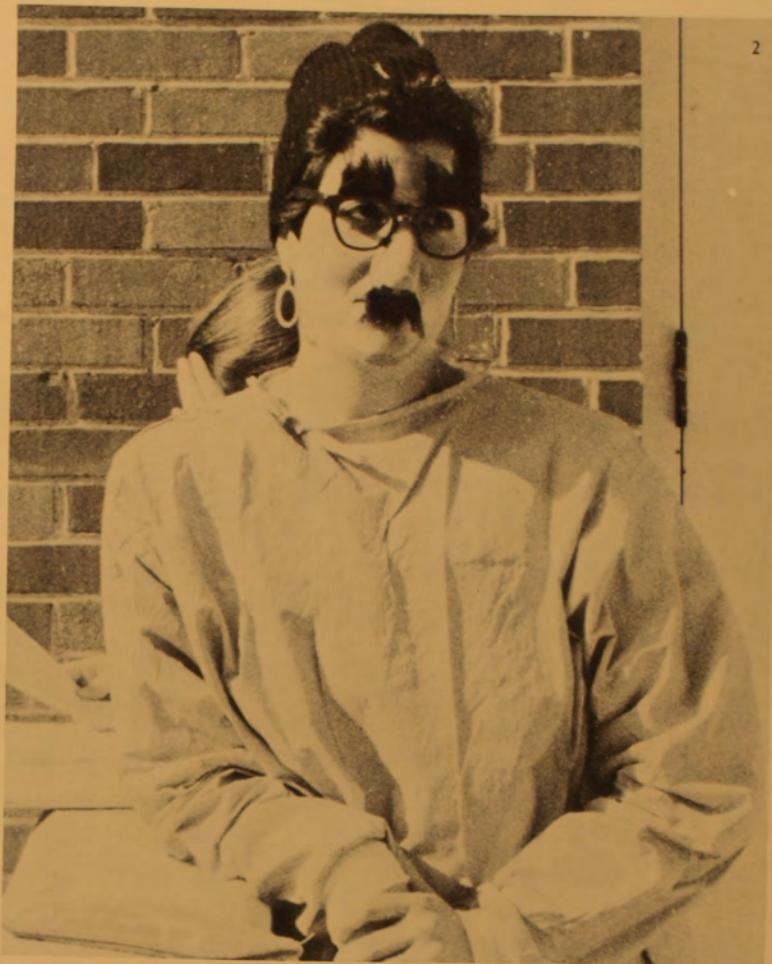

Nursing students are usually in class from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. They also put in anywhere from 8 to 12 hours weekly in a clinical setting. "We have a strenuous role," Ms. Harris said. "It's good to be in an environment of intensely dedicated students."

Spending so much time with a small group naturally leads to close friendships. "A strong cohesiveness develops among the students as well as a strong rapport with the teachers. We're going through the same struggle, experiencing the same frustration, and holding our breath while we wait to see the results of our struggle," Harris said. by Marilyn Moore.

SUBJECT: ARTS COMPLEX BUILDING

The excitement of the new $9.5 million Arts Complex does not merely affect music students.

The new Arts Complex will be more than half the size of the Dunn Center and will be the second largest building on campus. It will house not only the music department, but also, for the first time, group the entire mass communications department.

Scheduled to be finished in less than two years, students are already excited. Dr. George Mabry, Director of the Center for Creative Arts, said music students, especially freshman, are looking forward to the move.

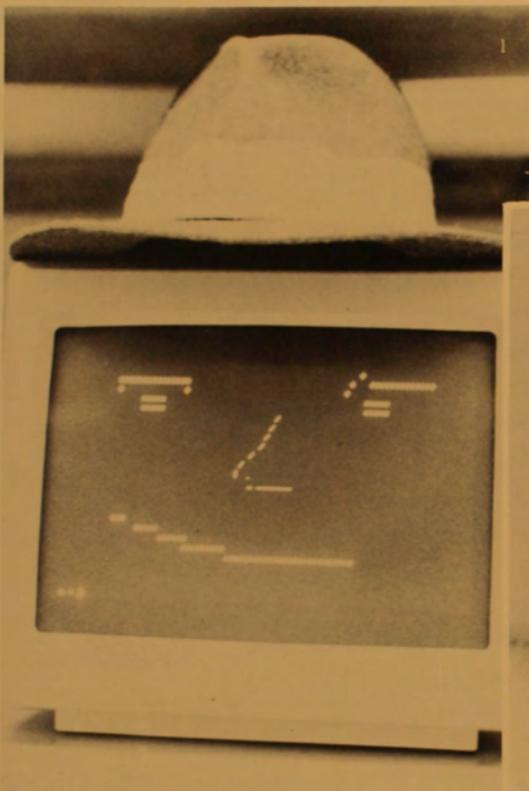

The building will have a 590 seat concert hall with a 3,125 square foot stage. A choral rehearsal hall will have a 250 person capacity; a far cry from the basement of Clement.

Let us not forget that the new Arts Complex will also unite the mass communications programs. Dr. Reese Elliot, speech department chairman, said this will help the department's growth. He added, "The new building will unify the audio and video segments of mass communications as well as develop the journalistic skills required of the major."

WAPX-FM, campus radio station, will also be placed in the building. David von Palko, the station's general manager, said, "The architects did an excellent job in developing the concept of the building. The design will help insulate the radio station from other music." by Lori Martin.

Two Governors Ambassadors, Shea Rollins and Jay Albertia, served on the welcoming committee for Gov. McWherter and others attending the ceremony.

Zone 3? Where is that? Upstairs in Clement. It sounds like a circle on a map at the post office. You're close. It's a wavy area on the map on the back of seedpackets. You have to know what zone you're in to know when to plant things in your garden.

So it's a club in the Ag Department? No. It's a literary magazine in Languages and Literature, and it's sponsored by the Center for the Creative Arts. But why call it Zone 3? You know poets; they're weird anyway. But I heard that there was another reason. What's that? Zone 3 is a magazine that encourages poets to flourish, kind of like in a garden. Anybody who spends a lot of time writing a poem — or cultivating a giant pumpkin, or restoring a 1936 Plymouth Coupe — needs to let folks see the fruits (uh, pardon me) of his or her labor. So we have county fairs and antique car shows and poetry magazines.

How come I never heard of it? Beats me. It's getting a terrific reputation across the nation, and rave reviews praising the quality of the poems and the production are coming in from New York, LA, Chicago, Pahokee, and Sante Fe. No kidding. It's strictly big league. But maybe people around here haven't heard of it because it's hard to be a prophet in your own town, or county, or zone.

Well, who's behind this new publication? Actually, Colleen Watt; she's a graduate student who manages the operation. But the editing and such is done by David Till and Malcolm Glass, the poets on the third floor of Clement. They are the ones who decide which 35 poems out of the 1,800 or so submitted for each issue will actually get into print. They stay pretty busy weeding out all the not-so-great stuff so that what you see in the magazine are the best pumpkins from all around the world.

I gotta see this. You'll find copies in a rack outside the Zone 3 office. Go give it a read some time. by Malcolm Glass

ACADEMICS

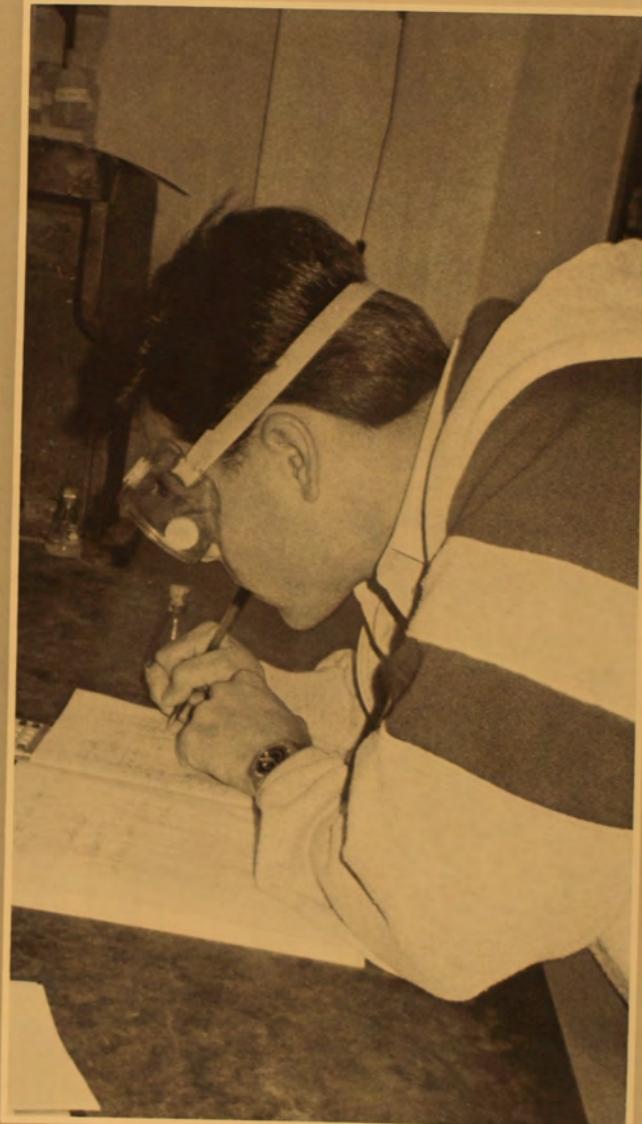

When most people think of academics, they think of hard classes, not studying, and perhaps flunking out of college. But there is more to academics than late nights spent not studying at the library.

All students have their own concepts of academics. They know exactly what it's not, but no one can quite say just what it is.

Academics could relate entirely to the faculty, but it doesn't.
It could relate to late nights studying, but it doesn't.
It could relate to hard classes, but it doesn't.

So, just what is academics? No one knows. But, in the next few pages, maybe we can tell you about a few things that relate to the puzzling subject of academics.

Turning A New Page

With the bitter cold of winter came a bit of spring, breathing new life into Austin Peay.

Dr. Oscar Page succeeded former president Robert O. Riggs early in the new year. Page, a Kentucky native, came from Lander College in Greenwood, S.C., where he served as Vice-President for Academic Affairs, Acting President and Provost.

With plans to increase faculty salaries, improve general name recognition, and leadership programs, Page believes that our finest quality is the school's size.

"It is a university," said Page, "but it's a small enough university that the students have an opportunity to interact with each other and interact with faculty; interact with full professors in freshman level classes. That's unique to the system." by Lori Martin.

GOOD HANDS PEAYPLE

The renovation of Ellington Hall was an eagerly awaited event by students, faculty and administration. The new spit-and-polished interior excellently complements the familiar exterior of Ellington.

These comfortable surroundings function to help the student. With the Dean of Students, Financial Aid, Admissions and Records, Counseling and Testing, Minority Affairs, AND Health Services under one roof, students can work out problems easily.

Austin Peay sororities are especially pleased with the regained use of the third floor. According to Barbara Phillips, Associate Dean of Students, last year's loss of the suites created an incredible communication problem within sororities. Phillips added, "They're delighted to be back in the suites." And Austin Peay is glad to have the building back. by Lori Marhn.

a “prof”itable choice

Professors are real people too. If you don't believe it, just go up to one sometime and pinch him or her. You'll find out it's no dream. We as students tend to set professors apart from ourselves, view them as sort of demi-gods (and, of course, they are), and seldom think of them existing outside the classroom. That's like the tree in the forest fable. Just because you're not there doesn't mean there's no sound. Likewise, professors do exist when absent from our presence. The harsh reality is that we are not, individually, the centers of the universe. I know it's hard to grasp, but like finals, it can be contained.

The thing for us to do is to treat our professors as friends, yet respect them as mentors. Believe it or not, friendships can develop between you and your professor. Even though their seemingly great encompassing knowledge sometimes frightens and belittles us into thinking of ourselves as inferior beings in the presence of their almighty ness, keep in mind they once occupied our Reeboks and Nikes, trembling just as we. As I've always viewed it: A person's wisdom doesn't frighten me in the least. It only makes me more eager to learn from them.

Let's Get Physical

Getting physical. The idea conjured up by this simple phrase is different for each person. But for the health and physical education department, it's a way of life. A way for a healthier life, that is. From "PE" classes to physical education courses on exercise physiology, the health and physical education department works to provide students a strong background in physical activity.

"PE" courses required for each student provide a release from the frustrations of History 446, Psychology 337 and all those other lecture classes. They also teach students proper ways to engage in physical activity.

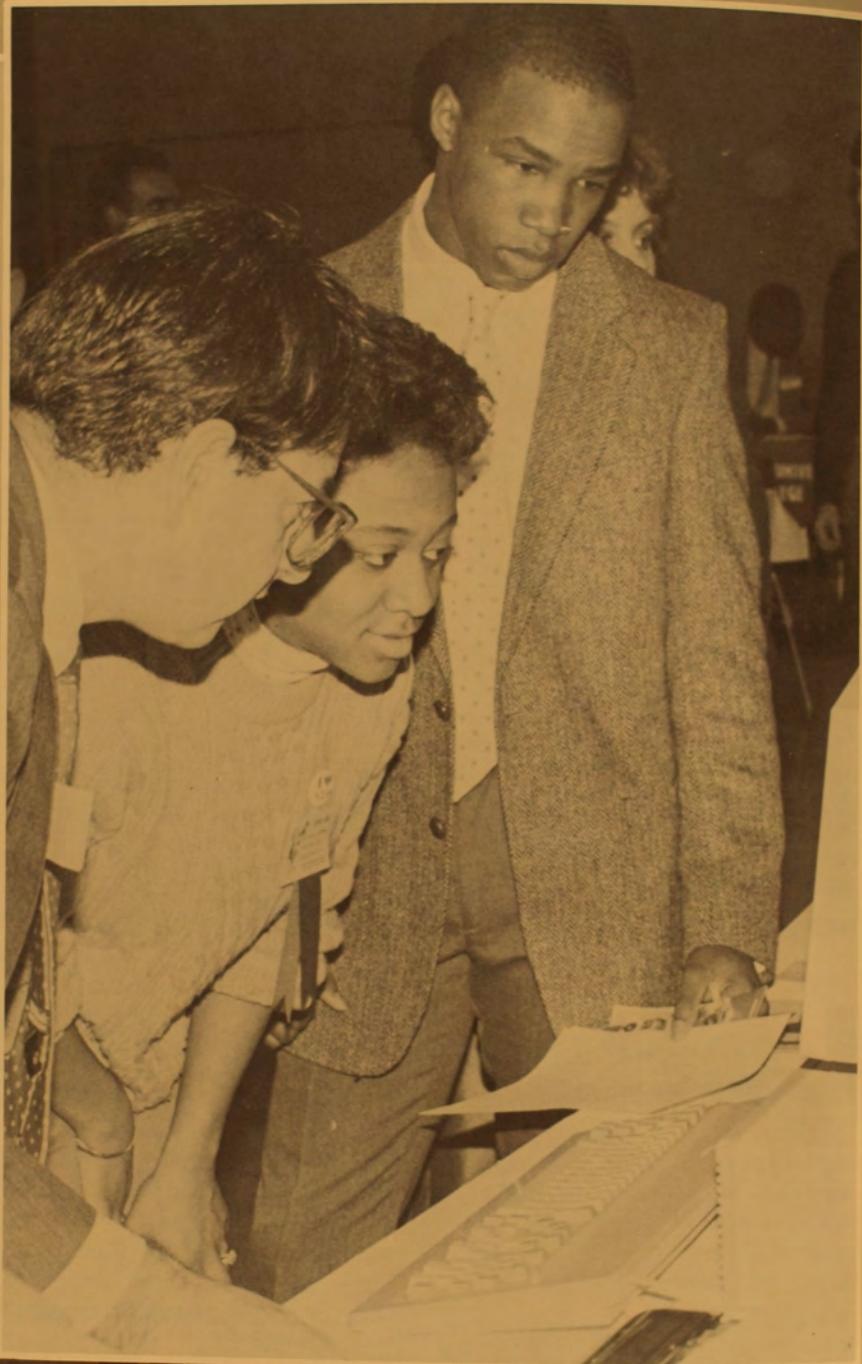

Physical education majors also take classes teaching them about the cardiovascular system, the muscular system, how to teach others about sports, and various other topics. This is not for a person looking for an easy way out. The health and physical education department is for those who want to lead an active life healthfully and help others do the same. by Suzanne Alexander.

The week-long program of career-planning events sponsored by the Placement Office emphasized the growing advantage of high tech skills. Representatives from medical employers talked to graduating nurses and med tech students. Jim Johnson of South Central Bell presented the keynote speech.

The third day of Career Fair featured representatives from regional businesses, state government and graduate schools. Some of those at the fair return each year, interviewing on campus. Career Preparation Seminars focused on various aspects of job seeking and preparation skills. Bob Thomas and Ted White returned to campus to speak on "Minorities in the Workplace."

Angela Holcomb and Tim Williams addressed appearance in "Presenting a Professional Image: First Priority." Carlette Hardin and Barbara Phillips guided non-traditional students to a professional resume, while Gary Hightshoe spoke on successful interviewing skills.

In addition to presenting the Career Fair each year, the placement office has a computerized resume service, available to students for a minimal fee, and maintains placement files on students and graduates. Advisors: Fact or Fallacy or Fact

"I've been here four years and had a different advisor every quarter."

"My advisor's a dipshit."

"What pisses me off is him telling me what to take."

"My advisor never tells me anything."

"I've been switched around so many times, I don't even know who my advisor is."

"I've never spoken to my advisor. Nobody's ever said anything."

Advisors, you can't live with 'em, and you can't register without 'em. These busy professors vary in teaching methods, grading, curriculum, and level of social graces; it seems perfectly normal that their range of advisement should also run to the extremes.

The common student is unable to find a happy medium. They don't want to be told what to do or be left on their own. They need someone to explain what they need to graduate, to transfer, or to pass. C & C Crisis And Conflict

Our Counseling and Testing Center deals with crisis and conflict.

Individual counseling is provided for students who need help identifying concerns, developing alternatives and making decisions.

A major area of emphasis in career development — SIGI PLUS, a computer based system — helps students find out more about themselves and their careers. According to director Ron Oakland, SIGI helps make sure students' values correspond with their prospective career choice.

Many non-traditional students use the counseling and testing center during transition periods in their lives. Oakland said, "These students may have years of experience at jobs they don't like. We are here to help them decide on the career that's right for them."

The Career Planning Resources Library is ideal for students. It provides updated occupational information as well as guides on how to find a job.

Many workshops are provided by the center to help students deal with various problems. Workshops deal with intellectual, emotional, social and occupational wellness. According to Oakland, the number of students attending these workshops is growing.

The center is closely affiliated with the Placement Office, Developmental Studies and Special Services. by Marilyn Moore.

GREEKS

The Greeks system plays an important role in the college lives of some students. It provides a unity of brotherhood and sisterhood that has proven to be positive, entertaining, challenging, and special for all students involved.

Members of sororities and fraternities have proven to be campus leaders. They develop leadership abilities, organizational skills and responsibility. It also prepares them for the years to come and sends them off with fond memories and eternal friends.

The Greek organizations are active and can be found in numerous areas of campus life. They have fund raisers for their philanthropies and participate in intramurals, homecoming activities, formals, Greek Follies, Derby Days, chapter meetings and retreats, as well as scholarship programs. The organizations also promote high academic achievements.

SPORTS

Those athletes sure are lucky. They get scholarships to come to school. Some of them get free food. When they travel, they get excused from class. They've got it made.

The traditional concept of the athlete is that they have everything handed to them on a silver platter, but that's usually not the case. Most athletes put in long, grueling hours perfecting their sport.

They practice just about every day. When they aren't practicing, they are usually discussing their sport with whoever is willing to listen.

Sports isn't just winning or losing. The teams are made up of people who care about what they do and who do what they have to in order to be the best.

Athletes Anonymous

I imagine most of us would fall under the category of "Athletes Anonymous." Although we may fail in being recognized as athletes in the traditional sense, there are some of our activities that could be considered as athletic. Take for instance: Book Juggling. We've all participated in this sport at some time or another, usually in front of a crowd in the Gov's Grill or in the UC.

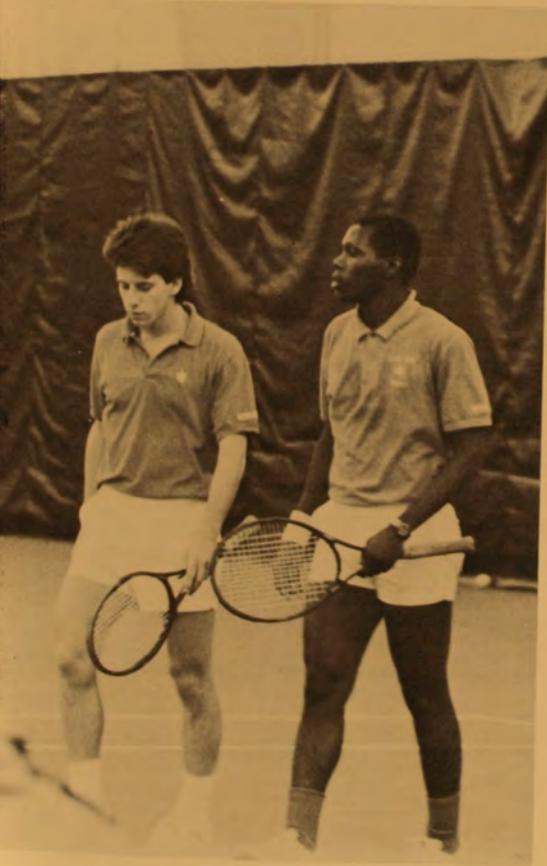

Then there's always ice-walking. The object behind this sport is to suspend that moment of limbo between gaining balance and adhering to gravity for a prolonged length of time, usually ten seconds. Professionals in this sport are elect and few, due to the physical dangers and psychological afflictions.

One of the more bozo sports, undertaken primarily by those leary of physical movement, is the sport of spitting ice into a trash can. Without the ice machine in the Killebrew Hall lobby, this sport would cease to exist.

Also, one of the more subtle sports, stars remaining relatively unknown throughout their careers, is that of flaking away paint on public walls. This sport requires adept peripheral vision, quick reflexes, and the use of a sharp object (the easiest and most accessible being that of the fingernail).

I guess one of the more "underground" sports, developing a cult following in recent years, is that of littering post office floors. Everyone seems to be involved in this one. Although it has yet to reach beyond that of university post offices, predictions have been made that an increasing popularity of this sport will arise, eventually reaching into public post offices everywhere. Diamonds A Girls' Best Friend

Cheri Kempf, a Missouri Western State College graduate, is in her first year as the lady Govs' softball coach. Although there is little age difference between Kempf and her players, she uses the lack of age difference to her advantage by relating more easily with her players.

Kempf hopes her players will be explosive on the field with no injuries. Strength will come from the pitchers, particularly Carol Gray, Missy Sapp, and Julee Stone. Since the team is mostly made up of juniors and seniors with only five freshmen, the team possesses the experience needed to dominate on the field.

The only OVC competition is against Tennessee Tech and Morehead State.

All Benched Up

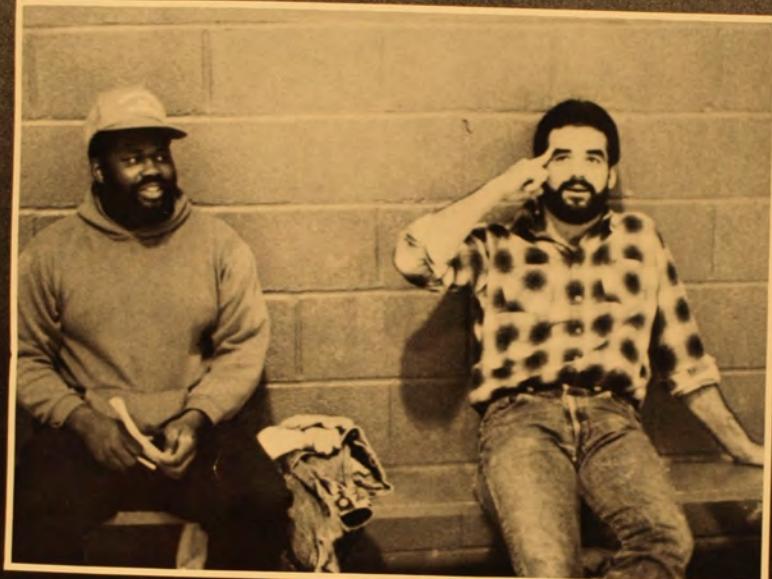

Benchwarmer. What does this term mean? Some of us know — by experience — more than others. So come along boys and girls: don't be shy. Let's investigate what it means to be a benchwarmer. The true essence, the very heart, of what a benchwarmer is experiencing. Could it be fatigue?

Do you know what fatigue means? Have you seen these jocks and these other people who imitate being athletic in the Red Barn? You know, how when they get through playing B-ball, how they come over toward the bench, destitute pulps of pulsating sweat, and splash down beside you? Boys and girls, this is called fatigue.

What's another reason for benchwarming? What about spectating? Do you know the word: spectating.

No, it's not one of Rich Hall's sniglets. It means to be an onlooker. Don't that sound boring. Makes your bottom-side very uncomfortable like when you're in history class. But, you know the main reason for benchwarming? It's because, boys and girls, everybody wants to leave some kind of impression, some kind of proof of their existence. It's that simple. Yep. That simple. by Jeff Hardin.

A New Twist

The annual Red and White football game came up with a new twist for 1987. Alumni were invited to come play against the varsity team, giving old players a chance to be on the turf once again. The white alumni team showed they still could play, giving the red varsity team cold chills with only a 21-15 win over the alumni.

Among the returning alums were Hal Adkins, Tommy Michael, 1980 OVC "Player of the Year" Sonny Defilippis, Victor Leavell, Ondra Woods, and current tight end coach Sid Fritts.

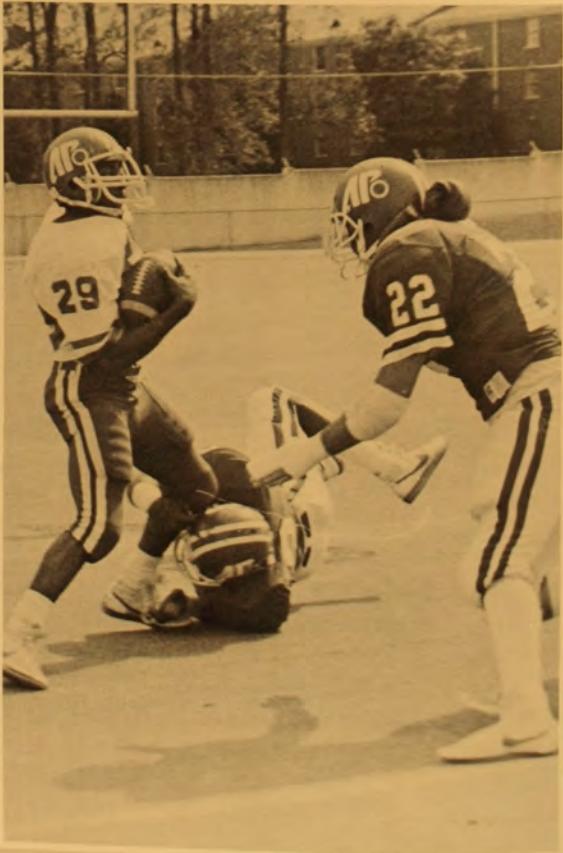

The Red and White game gave some varsity players the chance to shine also. Joe Langham recorded three quarterback sacks, playing his first game at a new position. Anthony "Juice" Simmons and Joe "Jo Jo" Warren had the distinction of being the only two varsity players to put numbers on the scoreboard. Mike Lewis and Kevin Prevost both had strong rushing games, while Calvin Johnson led in tackles and Byron Tolbert recovered one fumble and intercepted a pass.

At halftime, Kevin Prevost was announced the recipient of the Rodney Long Memorial Scholarship. Established in 1983, the scholarship is given to the walk-on athlete who best exemplifies Long's characteristics of dedication and hard work. Long is a former football player who was killed in 1982 after he was kidnapped. Players receiving the scholarship in the past are Mike Salis, Mark Southall, Rico Ransom, Lawrence "Disco" Godfrey, and Greer Hinson.

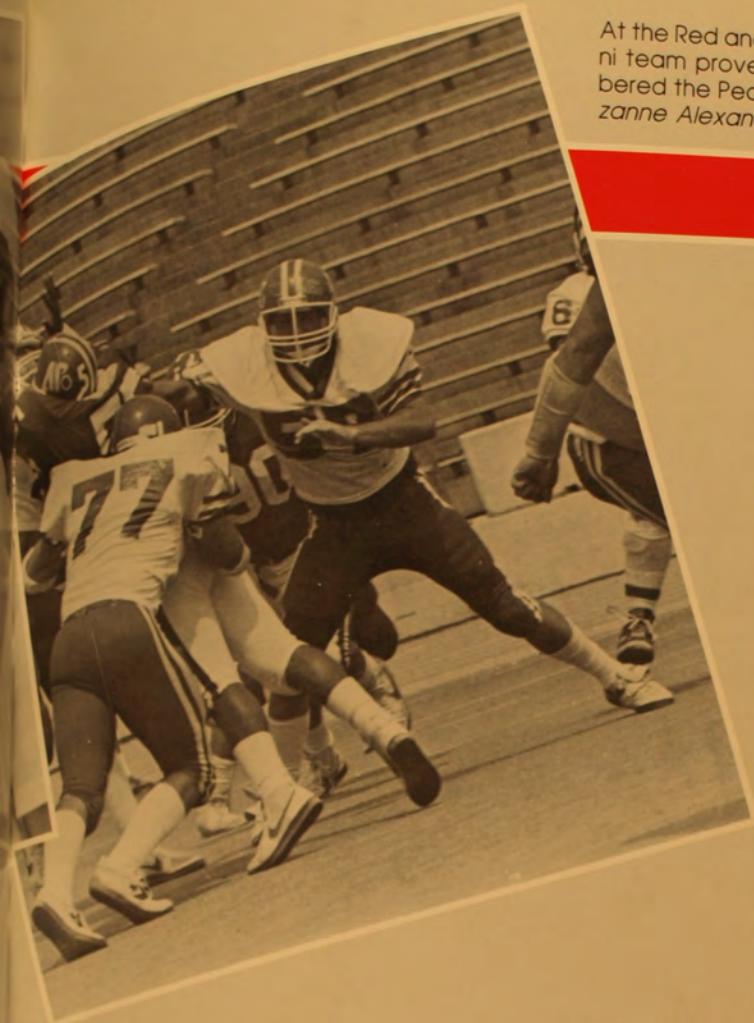

Former coach John Bowers said the game "gives the guys a chance to show everybody what they can do. This year was especially good because it gave the older guys a chance to get together again and brought them back in touch with our program." by Suzanne Alexander

Work Out Blues

Exercise, the dirtiest, crudest, most horrible word God ever invented. Females plan to exercise right before the spring months. Men plan to "work out" and build muscles.

Planning is the easy part. But the hard part is getting that body in some motion other than going from the chair to the refrigerator and back. So, you finally get motivated to . . . exercise. And you go and put your body through the most unbelievable forms of torture, for what? You never realized you could get your body in all those positions.

Boy, are you proud of yourself. You went and exercised for an hour for the first time in five years and you're feeling better than you ever felt. So, you begin making resolutions: no more sugar, no more cokes, only health food for you. You plan to exercise three times a day and in no time you'll look like Vanna White or Eric Dickerson.

You get home and you sit. And, all of sudden, it hits like a tidal wave. The worst, most excruciating pain you've ever felt in your whole life. Muscles you didn't know you had ache. Your body feels like its been run over by a mack truck and you wish it had been.

You wonder if it was worth it. Your roommate comes in and asks how your exercise session went because she's thinking of trying it. You laugh to yourself and tell her it made you feel like you've never felt before. by Marilyn Moore.

The women's golf team hopes to keep the Austin Peay winning tradition alive as it continues to improve year after year. This year is no exception. The Lady Govs are 3-2 so far this year with hopes of winning their next three matches.

They are led by senior member, Karen Stokes, who shows team leadership ability by playing three years. Sherri Lamb and Carol Gray are returning players with Gray playing on the softball team as well. Rounding out the squad is Terrie Lamb (sister of Sherrie), Carrie Tuttle, and Sherry Sullins.

What Can You Call A Football Season With A 2-9 Record Except A Big Letdown

The 1987 Governors got off to a good start with a major win against Kansas State. But, after the big loss against UT Martin, things went downhill.

According to linebacker Joe Langham, Dale Edwards' injury had a lot to do with team morale. "He knew the system and had the necessary experience. He'd take the plays the coaches sent in and adapt them, and make them work," Langham said. "It was a big letdown when he got hurt. The offensive line wasn't ready for a change. They didn't block Sammy Gholston like they did Dale."

Teamwork is essential in any ball game. Langham said, "We just couldn't play together. We couldn't get it moving." He continued, "Last year, the guys were into it. They played hard and wanted to win. After we lost to Martin and lost in two really close games, we just didn't try. With the way the season went, we just didn't care anymore." by Marilyn Moore.

Playing With The Strings Of Love

International sports has been the topic of 1988. The Olympic spirit of international peace through athletics has a special place at Austin Peay, namely our Men's Tennis Team.

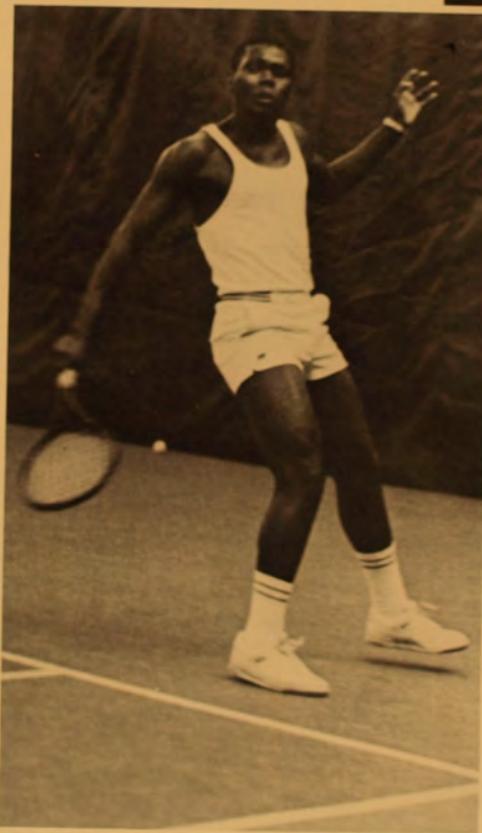

The six man team, coached by A.W. Speake, represents six countries. However, these men form a bond of cooperation and teamwork and are establishing Austin Peay as an OVC contender.

"I think we've made excellent progress. I think that if we're ever going to win the OVC, this is the year," said Coach Speake. "There is no substitute for experience and maturity."

"This year we have the horses, and we can win the OVC." by Lori Martin.

On the Right Track

The 1987-88 Cross-Country Team was headed by new coach, Doc Podurgal. Coach Podurgal brought in several area high school runners. This year is considered a rebuilding year for the Govs. The team lost every runner from last year's championship team except senior captain Barry Phelps, who placed 5th in the Championship and made first team All-OVC. The mens and womens team placed 6th in the OVC Championship at Eastern Kentucky.

Doug Beall placed 18th, while the women were paced by Suzanne Perry, Sally Clark, and Jane Goodson. Next year's team should be much improved with the recruiting of several runners from Ft. Campbell and surrounding high schools. The Cross-Country Team continues its competition, through indoor and outdoor tracks, to prepare for next year's Cross-Country season. By Barry Phelps

What it takes to be a LADY GOV!

It's a tough job, but somebody's got to do it.

Lady Gov's face more than just hard work, time consumption, and grueling practices; they face low campus and community support.

Although many do inquire as to the status of the Women's Softball, Basketball, Volleyball, Tennis, Cross-country, and Golf teams; the main support of Austin Peay remains behind the men.

Still, these women give up their time and effort, suffer injuries, and stay faithful to their teams. They deserve a pat on the back and a round of applause. by Lori Martin.

No Love Lost Here

Coaching her second year at Austin Peay, Charlotte Tennant is very pleased with the Lady Govs tennis team's performance and attitudes.

"The girls get along really well. For the first time there's a sense of team unity. Instead of playing like individuals, they're rooting for each other and staying together," Tennant said.

Tennant hopes in the spring, the girls will be good enough for serious Ohio Valley Conference competition.

The only area that needs improvement is the mental side of the game. If the girls concentrate on the game and play with a purpose, Tennant says they will have accomplished their major goal.

One interesting aspect of the team's unity is the origin of the players; Sally Clark from Australia, Monica Silenzi, a transfer from Texas, Paula Barg from Canada, Cindy Seymour from Cleveland Tennessee, and Heidi Burris and Diana Mead, both transfers from Roane State. Yet, despite different backgrounds and nationalities, the girls maintain comradeship while winning as a team.

Shining the DIAMOND

With a Spring '87 record of 33-15, and a Fall '87 record of 9-5, our baseball team is working toward a positive future. Billy Merkel, formerly head coach, resigned in the middle of fall quarter. Assistant Coach Gary McClure took over in mid-stream. Rich Ward, who played under Merkel, said "There's a lot more discipline now."

He believes the team will be a force to be reckoned with this year. "We're solid in every position, even backups," Ward said. This year's schedule will be no spring breeze, as we play several SEC ball teams.

Beginning with the opening series in Alabama, the team plays 65 games. The season lasts until mid-May. "We hope this year is a more successful year than we've had recently," Ward said.

Gimme A Peay!

Cheerleading at Austin Peay is serious business. Aside from the necessity of being at games, literally jumping hand over foot to motivate the crowd and players, and occasionally yelling yourself hoarse, there are long practices, and cheerleading camp in August.

This year, Austin Peay's squad came home from camp with one Superior trophy which is the highest trophy given, six Superior ribbons, and one excellent ribbon.

A typical practice can be strenuous and repetitious. However, the squad is enthusiastic about its job.

Troy Douglas, a junior majoring in communications, said the best thing about cheerleading at Austin Peay is the "outstanding Governor's Club and community support." Angie Jones, a sophomore majoring in education, said, "I like the close friendships that have developed within the squad, and also supporting the Govs."

Douglas did seem to feel that crowd support could be better. "Sometimes students seem to be 'afraid' to cheer when the teams need them most," Douglas said.

Douglas said the most frequently asked question to a male cheerleader is: "Do you look up their skirts?" Douglas says the answer is "No!"

1987-88 was a disappointing year overall for the Lady Govs basketball team. With a 6-17 overall record and an OVC record of 3-11, it seems almost devastating. If you dig a little deeper, you'll find a set of prettier numbers hiding behind those terrifying stats. Our offense was ranked tenth in the nation. For a time, two nationally ranked and one OVC ranked individuals boasted Lady Govs jerseys. Shandra Maxwell was the nation's top scorer, and Melissa Heatherly was the number one 3-point shooter. Rachel Hyatt led the OVC in assists and steals. Other highlights included a 109-95 win over Eastern Kentucky in which Shandra Maxwell had 41 points, Ingrid Hill had 19, Kim Markus had 13, and Melissa Heatherly hit two 3-pointers to give herself a total of 14. However, EKU found revenge hard to come by with a hard-fought win over the Lady Govs (81-71). Other close games lost by the Lady Govs included MTSU, Youngstown State and UTC. by Suzanne Alexander.

ATHLETIC ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Working hard pays off in the end as several APSU athletes have found out this year. Our athletes have received rewards and honors not only here, but in their divisions and in the nation.

Cheryl Holt was named OVC volleyball coach of the year.
Connie Caldwell was named OVC volleyball player of the year.
Shandra Maxwell was first in the nation in basketball scorers.
Tony Raye led the OVC in field goal percentages.

Roy Berkemeier made ALL-OVC in Governor football.

Barry Phelps made first team ALL-OVC in cross country.

Tennis player Sally Clark has a perfect G.P.A. as does April Leffler, ex-Lady Govs' basketball player.

Troy "Sky" Wade was men's open league champion in the intramural slam dunk contest. He has received this title for three years.

Ron Shegog and Kaelin Byrd are professional football players.

Pi Kappa Alpha were intramural softball champions during spring 1987.

Dan Austin has received the world champion weight lifting title three years in a row and has also set a new world record.

Rachel Hyatt led the OVC in basketball assists and steals.

Craig Rudolph, APSU golfer, is going pro after December.

Tracey Martin of the Lady Governors was named OVC Freshman of the week and was nominated for All-OVC.

Melissa Heatherly was ranked first in the nation in 3-point baskets.

A Power To Be Recognized

OVC championship proved to be a hard act to follow, but Lake Kelly's 1988 team gave it everything it had.

Peaymania was in full force as supportive, screaming crowds filled the Dave Aaron Arena in the Winfield Dunn Center. The entire community was behind the team — a fact that is not surprising considering last year's NCAA Standing. Even small-point losses to MTSU and Murray State could not stifle the enthusiasm.

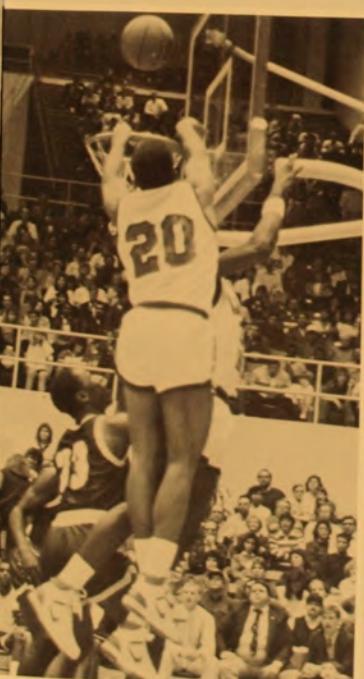

Recruiting hopefults abounded. Andre Harris transferred from Indiana University just to work under Coach Kelly. Austin Peay is now a talent and a power to be recognized. by Lori Martin.

IM N2 INTRAMURALS

The Intramural Recreation office provides competitive and informal recreational activities for students, faculty and staff.

The Director of Intramural Recreation is Drew Simmons who holds a Master of Education degree in Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety from MTSU. A certified Professional Recreation Sports Specialist, Drew is responsible for all aspects of IM programming.

The IM program is divided into two main segments: (1) Organized structured competitive intramurals featuring men's, women's, and co-rec divisions in softball, football, tennis, basketball, volleyball, etc. and (2) Self-directed facility usage with some clinics in specific areas. This aspect of program encourages individuals to use facilities and equipment made available during certain time periods. Facilities include indoor swimming pool and sunbathing area, racquetball courts, tennis courts, aerobics exercise and combative room, indoor jogging area and outdoor recreation fields.

REACHING FOR A STAR

The dream of becoming a professional athlete appeals to many. The number of those who realize that dream are few. Ron Shegog and Kaelin Byrd have touched a ray of that elusive star. Shegog offered some advice to those on their way up.

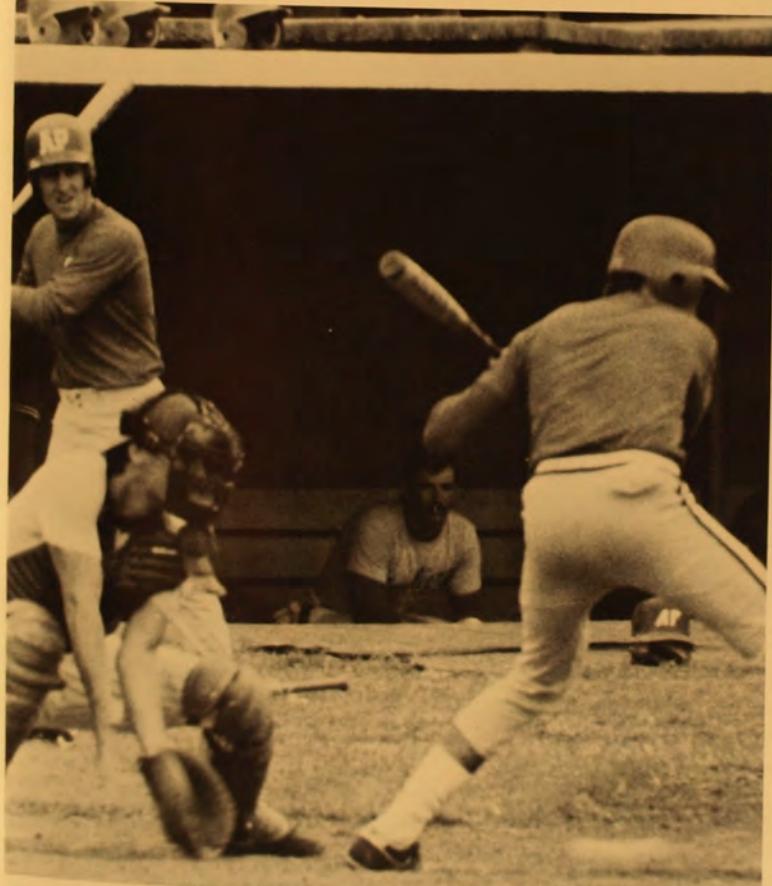

"Always stop and think about what will be there later and what's only for now. Have a Plan A and a Plan B. Think about your priorities and make some decisions before you do anything ...

"Talent is not what can be, it is what is. You must always do your best. Don't think that just because you're at a small school that you will go unnoticed. Somebody is always watching you. There might not be as much recognition, but you still have to do your best.

"Because when you become a professional, they're paying you a hundred thousand dollars to be your best. But, they don't make you. You do it on your own, or you get cut.

"You have to sit down and analyze your own playing ability and decide why they chose you, then go show them that you are best at that job. Coaching can only go so far. The actual playing is up to each team member. You have to positively influence a team to be on a team."

Gettin' Set

The 1987 volleyball team started off with a big advantage over last year's team. They had eight players this year instead of six, allowing them the chance to substitute. However, Carla Luke was injured early during the season, knocking out the chance to substitute setters. Luke did return to play before the season was completed.

With four returning players, the team came in strong, having leaders established on the court before the season started. Watching Connie Caldwell spike brought out the aggressiveness in the other players. Crowd support became a reality, spurring the team on whenever they seemed to be losing faith.

With the possibility of all but one player returning next year, this year was a year to build upon. After the excitement of this year's games, volleyball should become a wonderful spectator sport! by Suzanne Alexander.

FOUND A PEAYNUT

A PEAYNUT

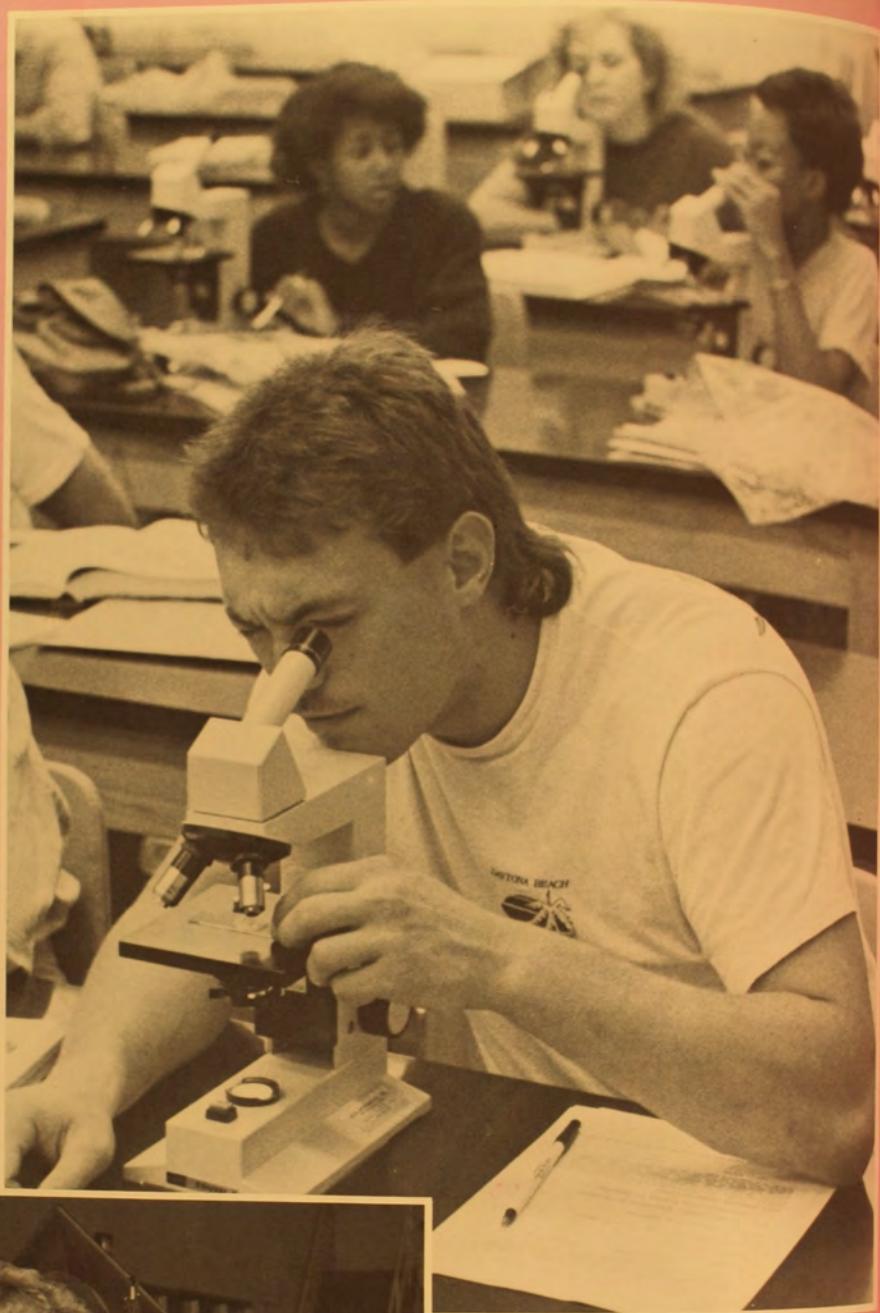

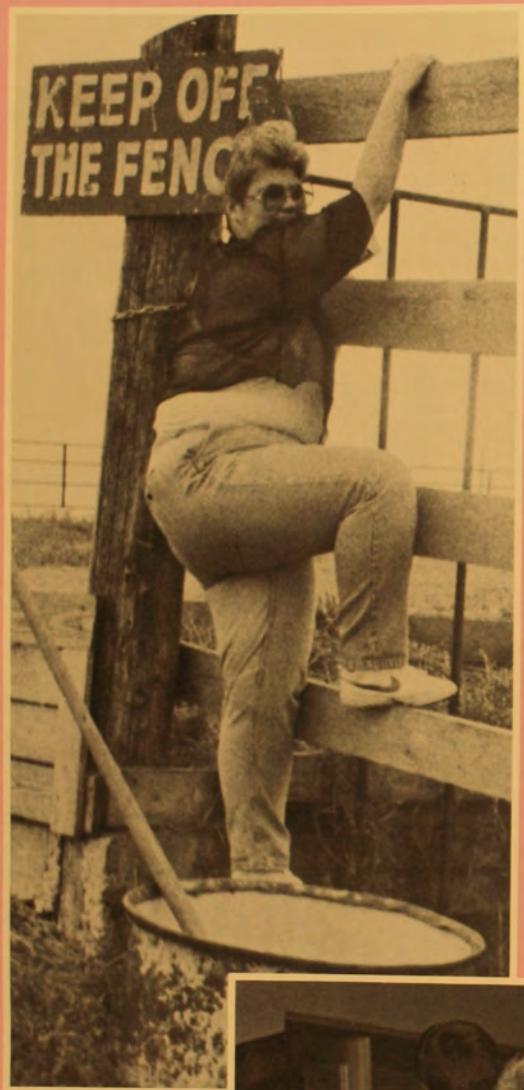

It's time for the return of the Peaynut Club! We promised last year to repeat the appearance of students who demonstrated the qualifications of being zany, witty, unusual, or otherwise out of the ordinary.

Each new crop of Peaynutes brings fresh ideas. They will attempt anything to join the ranks of those well-known faces who grace our campus for four years or so. For those attempting to join the Peaynutes, simply contact anyone on these two pages. I'm sure they will be glad to share some of their secrets.

INDIVIDUALS

"Anything's possible," even an "A 'Peay' C" dictionary. Individuals have their own way of defining their lives on and off campus. The following dictionary is just a small collection of "choice words" that the students and staff feel describe their very own school. Included are definitions to such words as cafeteria — the place brave people venture; dorms — primitive sleeping areas; and seniors — the lucky few. This is just a sample of many more original and not so original definitions to come.

All individuals have their own unique expressions and thoughts. This creative outlet could not have been possible if the brilliant minds of the Govs had been in neutral, which on occasion has been known to happen.

Home — 1) For most students this is a place they can only dream of because they haven't been there for months. 2) The place your letters are addressed to when you need "money".

Homecoming — 1) The social event of the season! 2) Event highlighted with Color Wars in which the campus is zoned off and assigned a color, supposed to encourage school pride.

Honors — Classes designed for very intelligent people who don't want to waste their time taking a 100 level course.

Horny — 1) Type of toad. 2) See Male House — (specifically speaking, Castle Heights) 1) Building shared by the All State and the Yearbook staff. 2) Place of origin for most of this humorous garbage.

Hug — A reassuring embrace one person gives to another in order to comfort or entice a person. See illustration.

Zero — A familiar grade on any test or quiz when a student is caught with wandering eyes or those small pieces of paper with answers on them.

Zones — If a student will consider the layout of the campus they will notice certain areas with a common relationship. An example of this is the McCord zone which includes all of the science classes.

The 1988 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges included the name of 48 students from Austin Peay.

The criteria used for selecting students as outstanding national campus leaders include academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential for continued success.

Students included in the selection process are from more than 1,400 institutions of higher learning in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign countries. The directory has honored students since 1934.

ORGANIZATIONS

Organizations, however diverse they may be in structure and membership, all share common goals: the enrichment of campus life and the preparation of its members for after-college life.

The organizations are comprised of departmental clubs and honorary/professional fraternities. These fraternities serve primarily to reward the student who excels in and has a desire to become more involved in its field of study. Fraternities increase their membership through invitation only. Generally, the clubs invite students who express an interest to join. Both enrich campus life by encouraging academic and social involvement.

Through various activities, the organizations prepare members for life after graduation. Community projects, sponsored by these groups, often provide students with ways of contributing to society now as well as after graduation.

Departmental clubs and honorary/professional fraternities emphasize developing both academic and social skills. Therefore, students who desire a truly comprehensive education should not overlook the opportunities provided by these organizations. by Thomas Locke.

ACM is a student chapter of the national Association for Computing Machinery, a professional organization founded in 1947 and dedicated to promoting the highest standards of professionalism in educational, business, and scientific applications of the Computing Sciences.

Our chapter of ACM seeks to promote an interest in Computer Science at APSU. We provide a number of speakers each quarter with topics of interest to members of our organization. Speakers have included Alumni of the Computer Science Department, APSU President Oscar Page, a representative of the organization on stress management, and others too numerous to mention.

As a service organization we make yearly contributions to the George Brotherton Memorial Scholarship Fund. Last year we contributed $750.00. A member usually holds an introductory workshop about the campus computer system for new Computer Science students each Fall.

Our social activities give students a chance to meet other students and faculty in a non-academic environment. We hold Fall Freeze and Spring Thaw Picnics annually and generally have two other parties per year. by Andrew Spiller.

Delta Tau Alpha

FOOT

Foot Frat is an organization which, according to Gary Gordon, "has a special unity that allows us to hold on to each other" for support during football season and off-season practices and workouts. Joe Langham said football players who "want to be a part of a group, to be active," usually join Foot Frat. After going through a pledge period of six to seven weeks, members help with Big Brother/Big Sister fund-raisers, Special Olympics, and United Way.

AP PLAYHOUSE

The AP Playhouse was founded in 1958 by Professor John Griffin and a band of loyal students. Originally plays were sponsored by the English department before the Playhouse was organized. There are about 25 to 28 active members. You don't have to be a theatre major or member to audition for plays. Playhouse supports theatrical productions at Austin Peay both on stage and behind the scenes. The organization's main goal is to foster interest both in AP's theatre as well as theatre in general. Meetings are every two weeks or more before a major production. The usual location is the "green room" in the Trahern building. Playhouse welcomes any interested students.

Alpha Psi Omega has been at Austin Peay since the early sixties. It is a national dramatics honor society. Members of the Mu Zeta Cast are awarded membership on the bases of points awarded for their participation in college theatrical productions. There are about 13 active members currently. Members meet several times each quarter to discuss fund raisers and plays and to socialize.

ROTC is many things to many people. Austin Peay has two types of programs in existence at the ROTC Department:

The two year plan is for junior college transfers, veterans, and current college students who have not been exposed to ROTC before.

The other plan is a four year program. This is for the high school graduate who desires a commission. He or she attends four years of military science and receives a commission when a college diploma is received.

You don't have to be a warmonger to admire a program best described as efficient, well-organized, and above all, high quality. ROTC — many things to many people.

SGA, also Student Government Association, is a body of persons interested in working with the governing processes of the University. Members help decide on policies affecting student activities and university regulations. They are active in the Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature, and most members are actively involved in several other campus organizations.

STOMP, The Society to Organize Minority Persons, is an organization that's purpose is to promote and improve the level of awareness for minority students; to assist persons at APSU and the surrounding community; and to create community programs and other projects which the organization deems beneficial to the area.

STOMP members pictured from left to right are: R1. Deborah Bell, Deidra Rose, Tangela White; R2. Jerome Morris, Carla Williams, Alice Delaney, Jeannette Ward; R3. All-State staff members pictured from left to right are: R1. Chris Jackson, Valerie Weichman, Sharon Bell; R2. Michelle Crane, Kevin McIver, R3. Eric Myklebost, and George Harris.

The All-State is the student newspaper. The students prepare weekly publications in which a lot of time and hard work are put. The students write, take pictures, and lay out the pages themselves.

Pride

Putting a yearbook together is no simple task. It takes a lot of hard work and dedication. Nothing, except the rules, are laid out with step by step instructions to follow. Every editor, has many Editor-In-Chief to a section editor, has many decisions to make. What pictures should I use? What page? What kind of designs should I use? What should I say in the copy?

So far it looks easy: 1) Look through the contact to find pictures you want and mark them to be printed; 2) Look through other yearbooks to find a design and pick it out; and 3) Assign the story to the copy editor and let her do it. That would be easy, but, that's not the way it's done.

At the beginning of the year, the Editor assigns a section to each of the section editors, such as individuals, organizations, Greeks, and some others. Each section editor then has to decide exactly what will go on each page. After that, it's up to the section editor to decide where they can be taken, the section page, find out when, where, and what goes on each page, and tell the photographer when, and tell the photographer where, everything has to be drawn on the page, all kinds of instructions are to be used. It doesn't end there. Everything has to be written on the page, all kinds of instructions must be written on the page, and typed on copybooks to be printed and cropped to fit on the page. The copy must be sent to the plant. When the page is finished, it must be placed in a page envelope and given to the Editor-In-Chief and approved before it can be sent to the plant. Hours are spent working on just one page and several people work together to get all the pages done.

As you can see, putting a yearbook together is a hard job, but, ANYTHING'S POSSIBLE!

Editor's Notes

from

Suzanne Alexander

For three of my four years here, I have worked on the yearbook staff. Each successive year has been harder, more classwork, more responsibility, more personal problems. I grew with the school, as did all my classmates. My yearbooking success was made possible in part by Kevin Beirne. He taught me the procedures of layout, design, and the difference between a good photo and an okay photo. At times, this quality had to be sacrificed for speed, but it always lingered in my subconscious.

Malcolm Glass provided interminable support, along with his wonderful wife, Anne. Marilyn Moore has been there for four years, like the mailman; she got it done rain, sleet or snow. And each year's staff has gotten the job done, eventually. God kicked me harder each year, making sure I at least tried to reach my potential. I, along with several hundred others, have reached my goal.
