

3 Give Resignations

By JAN AYLSWORTH

Two freshman senators, Mary Anne McIntosh and Jon Ireland, resigned from their Student Government Association positions Thursday night.

Emily Hickerson resigned as secretary of organizations, citing difficulty in working with the present administration as the reason. She will remain in the Senate as president of the graduate class.

Freshman Cathy Allsup was given the position of senator-at-large.

In new business, the constitution of the student chapter of the Council for Exceptional Children was passed by acclamation.

The Senate also amended seven rules pertaining to the SGA Constitution.

Two other resolutions were also passed by acclamation. One resolution was to open racquetball courts to students and faculty on weekdays from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Presently, the courts are open only to faculty during that time period.

Also approved was a resolution to name the University Center the Joe Morgan University Center in honor of the former APSU president.

A resolution to pay minimum wages to student workers at registration passed 20-3-6.

Paul Roberts, ROTC battalion commander, asked the Senate for support in a matter concerning small children in the weight room on campus. The Senate referred the issue to the General Welfare Committee.

ROTC To Sponsor Drill Competition

The Fifth Annual Jackson Invitational, Tennessee Classic Drill meet will be held March 25 at 8 a.m. in the Dunn Center at APSU.

The meet, a combination of two events, will constitute the only Ohio Valley Conference drill competition this year.

Participating in the competition will be Vanderbilt University, Navy ROTC, Tennessee Technological University, Fort Valley State College, Ga., the University of Chattanooga, Middle Tennessee State University.

Judging the meet will be non-commissioned officers from Fort Campbell, Ky. and Brig. Gen. Kastner, assistant division commander of the 101st Airborne Division is expected to attend.

Twenty-four trophies and 15 medals will be awarded to individuals and school drill teams. Members of the APSU Drill Team have been practicing on an average of three times per week in preparation for the competition.

Lt. Col. Fred DeBolt, professor of military science at APSU, expressed his expectations of the contest, "I am eager to have faculty and students of APSU and interested persons in the Clarkville area attend this drill meet to see the ROTC cadets in action."

Local businesses are being asked to give monetary contributions for the event to keep the cost minimal.

Tonight marks the opening performance of the AP Art Playhouse production of "The Amorous Flea," directed by Jim Elder, instructor of speech and theatre.

The play begins at 8 p.m. in the Margaret Forte Trapham Theatre. Reservations may be made by calling 648-7376, and ticket price is $1.50.

Brent Stoker, who portrays Arnolphe, alias La Souche, has musical experience from "Guys and Dolls," "South Pacific" and "Oklahoma!" A Nashvillian, he auditioned for the part of Alain, (one of Arnolphe's two servants) but to his surprise, he received the leading role.

Stoker sees Arnolphe as "rather foolish but harmless, vain old fool who was usually spoiled in his early years." And as Arnolphe, he must not only woo his bride to be, Agnes, but halt the invasion of his bride's fortress by an amorous flea, Horace. "As for the servants—I like them both. But they are, after all, servants and have to be treated as such."

Stoker intends to pursue acting as a profession. However, he has "no definite game plan." The charmingly innocent Agnes is characterized by Debby Dowlen. A member of "Who's Who" with awards in academics and athletics, Dowlen has also appeared in several musicals including "Fiddler on the Roof," "The Music Man" and "Oklahoma!"

To her, Agnes is "...an extremely ignorant child.

'AMOROUS FLEA'—Debby Dowlen as Agnes and Brent Stoker as Arnolphe give the play one last runthrough before opening night.

But I don't believe that she is stupid. If given the chance to learn, she could. She is given that chance as the play progresses and eventually becomes more educated."

Does Agnes' ignorance pose barriers in characterization for a person with awards in Latin and mathematics? "It does not affect me in any way. All that I must do to think like a child. Since I have two little sisters and have studied children in my education class, this is easy for me."

Dowlen chose to audition for "The Amorous Flea" for this reason, "I have been off stage for two and a half years and had a longing to return. I've thought about trying out several times. This time I did, and I'm glad."

Gary Broadrick is Horace, "a bristly and happy, hearty young man who is in love with life and being in love." A native of Greenbrier, Broadrick has previous stage experience from "Bye, Bye Birdie" and "The Skin of Our Teeth." Also, he has qualified for the national forensics tournament in duet interpretation and poetry interpretation.

"Horace's relationship with Agnes is love totally in love. But he's more in love with being in love than actually loving her. Yet, there is a feeling of fondness quite prevalent. As far as Arnolphe is concerned, Horace is totally dumb of anything concerning La Souche. Arnolphe plays the typical father-elder brother image to Horace."

In the future Broadrick plans to enter professional theatre in the field of make-up. Otherwise, he will teach theatre in college after earning his master's degree.

Performing in the supporting role of Enrique is sophomore Roy Buchanan who has won roles in such productions as "My Fair Lady" and "Dracula."

Junior voice major Randy McGee will make first AP Playhouse appearance as Orante. McGee's acting credentials include previous roles in "Antigone" and "Dirty Work at the Crossroads."

The role of Chrysalde is played by David Harris, who is a playhouse veteran having performed in "School for Scandal" and "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

Belinda Boyd, a newcomer to the Peay, is Georgette. Boyd, a freshman who graduated from Montgomery Central High School, directed and performed in the Black History Week presentation of "In Foca."

Alain, Arnolphe's bumbling servant will be characterized by Tommy Winters, who has appeared in "Camelot" and "The Skin of Our Teeth."

Community Advisory Council

Insurance Policy

APSU President Robert O. Riggs has established a Community Advisory Council designed to serve as "a strong and open channel of communication between Austin Peay State University and the community it serves," according to a letter sent to individuals in the Chamber of Commerce, civic organizations, local and state government, business, industry and public service groups.

In a breakfast held early Wednesday morning in the Harvill Cafeteria on campus, Riggs met with community leaders, establishing the council.

During a Friday afternoon interview, he said that although only some 30 persons out of 65 who had been invited could attend the breakfast, only two persons had declined to serve on the council. He was pleased.

The effectiveness or lack of it in the council will become apparent in the years to come, but for the present, conjecture is the only estimation available to predict the organization's eventual worth.

Hopefully, Austin Peay will not experience a crisis comparable to the instances occurring at other universities. But in the event that a coed would be raped on campus, an athletic team would meet with a serious accident or a dormitory would burn, such a body of individuals could give Riggs a workable method of giving and seeking comfort between the university and the community.

The council could be compared to an accident insurance policy. If no claim is filed, the university could certainly afford the price of a scrambled eggs and coffee when the council convenes once a quarter. If a disaster occurred the council could offer a token of sympathy, but the real worth of the council lies elsewhere.

Opening university issues to local citizens is a goodwill gesture on the part of the president, and Riggs is far from blind to the fact that he would do well to have certain influential individuals in his corner.

If the Citizen's Advisory Council does anything at all, it may indeed form some invisible but sturdy threads in the seam between APSU and the Clarksville community.

Politics is a complicated game, and the president of this university knows how to play.

Roberts Asks SGA For Backing In Rules Issue

ROTC Battalion Commander Paul Roberts had a complaint concerning a rule enforced at the weight room in the Memorial Health Gymnasium.

Recently Roberts' wife, Beth, and a friend of hers decided to use the facilities at the weight room and the two women took their infant children. After the pair had worked out for about 45 minutes they were informed that according to a new rule, children under 15 were not allowed in the weight room.

Roberts and his wife stated that they felt since small children could be under parents' close supervision that women should be allowed to take their babies into the weight room. He talked to Intramural Director Buddy Bumgarner about the rule, and Bumgarner referred him to Vice President for Student Affairs Charles Boehme.

At this point, Roberts decided that as one person, he would not make much progress in getting the rule amended, so he took a local but often overlooked measure.

He went before the Student Government Association and requested the organization's support. The SGA heard Roberts' complaint and then referred the action to the General Welfare Committee.

The significance of this action lies in the fact that a student has used the SGA for its intended purpose.

We must ask the question: Given a situation similar to Roberts', how many students would consider going to the SGA for support? Many students would not take such action, and that is too bad because the SGA exists for and is composed of the students.

If more students would display confidence in their SGA, the organization could better serve the students.

What the SGA decides to do in Roberts' situation remains to be seen, but we hope that it realizes the significance of Roberts' request and considers the matter to be one of importance.

'Well, whad 'ya think, boys?'

Music Majors Organize

Years of frustration among music students reached the boiling point Wednesday at noon as almost every music major and minor attended a meeting in the choir room of the Clement Building to air gripes to faculty.

Among the concerns presented were:

- Revision of curriculum requirements for specific majors with the eventual establishment of additional degrees such as a bachelor's in music performance.
- The acquisition of additional practice rooms with mirrors.
- New lockers for storage of music, books and instruments.
- Renovation of the student lounge.

At least one private instructor per instrument, specifically a full-time percussion instructor and a low brass instructor.

The students of the music department are to be commended for taking action instead of merely complaining. Faculty members were sympathetic and supportive of departmental needs, and committees to investigate specific problems were formed the following day.

These goals will be long range, but at least the work has started. Last week's action in this matter is indicative of what must be done to accomplish any type of major change in a bureaucracy whether it be a university or the "real world."

We hope that music majors and minors will be persistent in seeing their ideas implemented, and maybe students will realize that the university exists for them and they possess power of the masses if they are organized.

Letters To The Editor

Quote Raises Question

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in regard to the interview of Mrs. Riggs by Tim Miller. I feel that since Mr. Miller is a reporter and was asked to make the interview with Mrs. Riggs that he was very right to report the good and the bad.

One of the best qualities in a reporter should be that he's not one-sided. Everybody knows that nobody in this world is perfect as much as we all may want to be. We all make mistakes.

I feel that if Mrs. Riggs didn't want certain things revealed around her then she shouldn't have answered the questions Tim asked her.

I also feel you almost lost a very good reporter and that Tim Miller was very right to report everything he did.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The All State welcomes letters to the editor and gives the right of reply to those who present their views. However, in the interest of fairness to the editor, the letters to The All State are subject to editing. The editor reserves the right to edit letters for clarity and brevity. Letters should be typed, double-spaced, and include a return address. Letters should be sent to the editor of The All State, P.O. Box 8304, Clarksville, TN 37040.

Dear Editor:

Regardless of the quality of the reviews made by Mr. Jones or the fact that Mr. Fontes might have written an anonymous review, the editor of The All State made a grave mistake.

By revealing that a "writer cartoonist" requested his name be withheld, Ms. Aylsworth revealed a confidence, and by doing so destroyed her credibility in the field of journalism.

Even four years after Watergate, Bob Woodward will not discuss the identity of his prime source, Deep Throat. And several years after I wrote some articles critical of certain aspects of Austin Payer and a pseudonym, my editor has never let it be known.

Sometimes in order to press continued open access to sources, it is necessary to remain unknown. Had I revealed my identity certain administrative offices would have been closed to me. Now that you have unmasked Ron as the author of an article critical of a theatrical production, his relationship with the theatre department could be in jeopardy.

I hope in the future Ms. Aylsworth will pay heed to established journalistic practices and realize that vindictiveness has no place in the editorial columns of this school's award-winning newspaper.

Sincerely
Alan L. Mayer
Class of 1973

Dear Mr. Mayor:

Your letter has caused me to review my decision to answer the letter submitted by Ron Fontes. I was in the wrong by referring to an incident which had no bearing on the quality of Mr. Jones writing. I openly admit to this error in judgement.

However, I must stand firm on the issue of writing under a pseudonym. According to the Constitution, By-Laws and Policies of the Board of Student Publications of APSU, Appendix B, The All State, Section 3, in editorial comments and reviews submitted by non-staff members, "the writer's name must accompany the review."

Although several arguments exist for the practice of writing under a pseudonym, I must believe that a writer should sign his work when presenting his or her opinions.

Thank you for your letter,
The Editor

Dear Editor:

Lately I find myself less and less inclined to announce my alma mater as a whisper or mumble when in the presence of my colleagues and associates.

As a black graduate of Austin Payer, I am especially concerned, angered and embarrassed by the recent comments of Judy Riggs.

By her own taped statements (regardless of later attempts at explanations), I can only conclude that the decision of Judy and Robert Riggs to place their children in a private educational setting was primarily (if not solely) to avoid contact with black students.

It would appear that we blacks have come a long way only to be considered an "unfair percentage" by some of our academic leadership.

It seems to me especially ironic that this controversy should arise now when such strenuous recruitment efforts are being undertaken to increase black enrollment at APSU.

This controversy must cast serious doubts on the sincerity of these efforts.

Attitudes such as those expressed by Judy Riggs (which must surely reflect those of Robert Riggs since independent thought and action on her part causes problems in their marriage) reduce the interest in recruiting black students to no more than the amount of dollars their presence represents to the institution.

I wonder how Riggs reconciles the increased recruitment of blacks with the possibility of an "unfair percentage" in the future.

Maybe the more appropriate question is, "Will the Riggs children attend Austin Payer?"

Until I see some evidence of positive policy changes which benefit blacks, not only will I not encourage any black student to attend Austin Payer, I will actively seek to dissuade any potential student I have occasion to interact with from attending APSU and urge others with whom I am associated to do the same.

Dear Editor:

I would like to speak on a matter that has disturbed me for some time concerning the Student Government Association's private and his method of representation.

I have a philosophy that has continually placed me at odds with some of the SGA members. My philosophy is that the SGA is to represent the student body as a whole to the Riggs administration. While each student is representing a specific population and sees to its interests, it is in the office of the president that the totality of student representation resides.

It is to this issue that I address serious concerns over certain practices carried out by the current SGA president. It has come to my attention that the president has taken as one of his prime considerations the up-grading of the fraternity house that now exist.

I personally am not anti-fraternity and do see a need for these houses to be improved. However, to have representatives of only three fraternities and two of these to exclude all black fraternities is a black indication of where our current president's loyalties lie.

I understand that the black fraternities do not have houses to improve.

But I do not see the current SGA president trying to get these fraternities houses, improved or not.

I feel that this has been a lapse on the president's part and doubt his ability to continue with the student trust.

Sincerely,
James B. Holder, Jr.

Mark Murphy and Fat Wizard stared at the little man with the clipboard.

"You are both in deep trouble," said the little man. He held through a few sheets of paper. "Noncompliance of many, many ordinances. Don't you read your campus mail?"

"No," Mark shrugged. "Does anybody?"

"In the student handbook it says..." the little man tried to pull a book from inside his suit jacket, but the book was tangled in the lining.

Fat Wizard chuckled. "Don't I know you? Morimer Jones, bureau crazy major. Am I correct?"

The little man turned red and clenched a fist. "Irrelevant! The matter at hand is what is to be considered." He glanced at his clipboard. "Student Murphy: illegal use of office furniture. Student...ah... Wizard: violation of dress code in a communications office."

Fat Wizard looked at the cloneness in his clothes and nodded. "Fashion unbecoming of a society major."

The little man gasped. "The shade! The shade!" He ran to the window and held up a piece of measuring tape. "Two centimeters! This shade is two centimeters above regulation height. All shades in this building are to be set at..."

Fat Wizard leaned over to Mark and muttered, "Carouser and carouser."

Mark nodded vaguely. One wall of the office exploded, sending plaster and masonry flying. When the smoke cleared a figure (CPS)—Birth control pill users will receive a strongly worded caution with their prescription as a result of Food and Drug Administration regulations effective in April.

A brochure warns women who smoke that they risk "serious adverse effects on the heart and blood vessels" and advises smokers to use another type of contraception.

The leaflet will be dispensed each time a prescription for the pill is filled and also warns of potential hazards of liver tumors, heart attacks in women over 40 and damage to the fetus if the pill is taken during pregnancy. FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy recently said that women who both smoke and use the pill are 10 times more likely to die of a heart attack or other circulatory disorder than women who neither smoke nor take the pill.

FDA regulations also require manufacturers of the pill to incorporate the new warnings in information given to physicians.

Fat Wizard began to sneeze. "Ooohh, aahhh, ehhh, Rossan Kobarr!"

"Now that has got to be the weirdest sneeze I..." Nick frum, then ran past Fat Wizard's door.

"Okay, Fata, where is he. Where's your Murphy friend, whaddy do with him?" Nick looked under Fat Wizard's door.

"Murphy who?"

"Ah, fer..." Nick whipped out the laser pistol and blasted a filing cabinet.

"Relieve anxiety?" said Fat Wizard.

"Nicks surveyed the room, holstered his weapon. "If you were using your magic to free Murphy, why didn't you go with him?"

should be a keypunch over in the library.

At this, Eugene's eyes lit up and he said, "You know, Dave, you're right!" Our conversation was prompted by the reason of our leaving-it was closing time.

Eugene, being the night shift computer operator, usually closes between 8:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. I asked him why he should have such a positive response to my suggestion. He said, "Because you aren't the only one who has asked about that."

I mentioned to him that I'd been there a good portion of each night, along with others, trying to get our program to run the way they're supposed to. His reply was, "Well, Dave, if they're going to offer as many courses as they do, like Cobol, Fortran, Rpg and Assembler, the students have got to have access to the equipment."

My suggestion was to move one of the keypunch machines to the library and put it into one of the typing rooms.

Responding to this he said that the library is to help the students with their homework.

For the kind of system that they have here, it would even be worth purchasing more equipment. If it was in the library, then the students could have access to it on weekends.

I suggest from the needs seen, that a keypunch machine be established at the library.

This machine would be put on a similar status as that of a typewriter. No new purchases seem necessary, just a move of one or both of the ones located just outside the computer department.

Of the six the department presently has, these two are of the older models. All I'm asking is that even one of these machines be moved in 100 feet from one building to another.

The machines would just be accessible to the students.

If one was in the library, with the hours as they are, there would be an increase of at least 15 hours a week per machine, and just the initial cost of movement to the school.

Dear Editor:

Regarding Feb. 15's letter from "Eager to Complete" on the Intramural Office's deficiencies, I would like to print this rebuttal for what it's worth.

As a worker and a participant in the intramural program, I have had the opportunity to see the program from both sides, and I have also seen the program under the direction of two very fine administrators.

I have watched Directors Bob Neilson and Buddy Bumgarner bend over backwards to make this program work for the students. With the exception of a 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. "civilian" secretary hired to meet the student's daytime needs, the entire program is staffed with Austin Peay students. As one of the student staff members I am trying desperately to earn a degree and function properly in my job.

I will gladly hand over the portion of my salary which is designated for publicity work to anyone who wants the job. I try to get out flyers announcing the dates of upcoming competition, but the only places they can be put up are on the Austin Peay news boards and in the Dunn Center.

As a participant I never waited for someone to drag me into the office and sign me up. I grabbed a roster as soon as it came out and signed up my team.

Incidentally, I was just as disappointed about the cancellation of women's volleyball, which could not be helped and will be rescheduled for spring quarter.

Now that I have tried to defend a program which all of us arm-chair quarter-backs should be very grateful to have, I would like to beg students to work for it as it has worked for you.

An example of this drive was exhibited full quarter by Kathy Jones, and Alpha Tau Omega little sister, who wanted women's flag football included in the program. With only fun and exercise as her motives (no payment involved), she recruited six teams to compete and so instilled women's flag football.

If we could all claim Kathy's enthusiasm for the program, we would have it made. So students, instead of just making yourselves aware of what's happening, make something happen.

Thank you,

THE CROWNING—Cynthia Liggins captures the title of the first Miss Black Clarksville Saturday night in a pageant sponsored by Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity.

Northwest Senior Wins Title In City's First Black Pageant

By JAN AYLWORTH

Cynthia Liggins, an 18-year-old Northwest High School senior, defeated six contestants to capture winning honors of the first Miss Black Clarksville Pageant sponsored by Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Damon Liggins of Storybrook Drive in Clarksville.

Liggins overcame the near-capacity Clement auditorium crowd with a soaring rendition of "Our Love." From that point on, she was the crowd favorite in the competition.

After graduation, Liggins plans to attend the University of Tennessee as a music major.

About her victory, Liggins said, "I feel great. I'm so excited, I can't believe it."

The competition consisted of swimsuit, talent, evening gown and question answer events.

Liggins will enter the Miss Black Tennessee Pageant on June 11 in Memphis, and the winner of the pageant will advance to the nation's finals to be televised in September.

Barbara Cooper, state director for the Miss Black America Pageant, attended Clarksville's first pageant and termed the event a big success complementing student participation and overall spirit.

However, she stated that she had hoped more girls would enter the contest.

First runner up was Brenade Maxwell, an APSU junior from Fort Campbell, Ky. Bonnie Andrews, an APSU junior from Clarksville was second runner up; and Memphis native Janet Aubrey, an APSU freshman, captured the third runner up honors and the Miss Congeniality Award.

"Unsettling" scientific data tends to erode the brightness of the future that humans dream about and in particular, college students. This is the partial description of the subject matter to be tackled by Dr. Hugo Beiswenger, associate professor of psychology.

Beiswenger will conduct a spring quarter class entitled psychology and the human prospect (psy 334). In this course, "The future will be examined in terms of potential crises which may threaten the continuance of the human species," according to the APSU catalog.

Robert Heilbroner, an economist, wrote a book entitled An Inquiry into the Human Prospect asserting three main crises that threaten humankind, each being of "considerable magnitude."

- Population growth,
- Destruction of the environment from an ecological point of view and depletion of resources,
- Economic and political crises leading to wars increasing the likelihood of the U.S. being drawn into them.

Upon reading this book, Beiswenger found that he could completely support Heilbroner's theories, assertions and documentation. This event led to the offering of this new course in the 1977 spring quarter.

Beiswenger stated that humans tend to assume they will always do better than their parents, the previous generation(s), but many scientists are now realizing that standards of living will rapidly decline in the future.

Psychology is defined generally as the study of human behavior, and Beiswenger states that he sees psychology is interdisciplinary. This would tend to indicate that there is much to be gained by students of other disciplines participating in the course.

Beiswenger explains that students who enroll in this course can expect to research, analyze, evaluate and debate the issues.

Consequently students will need academic skills to deal with scheduled class work. The scientific validity of Heilbroner's assertions will be tested on the basis of data available. Arguments will be examined along with supporting scientific data.

"This will not be a lecture course," stated Beiswenger. Within the course, he sees himself as "a catalyst, a source of information and resources, the devil's advocate and guide for discussions" to assure varying sides of arguments and differing opinions will be covered.

Beiswenger expressed his pleasure in the initial course last spring quarter, both with the number of students enrolled and the work accomplished.

Overeating Is Habit

Hygiene Has Prominence

By TIM WIBKING

"To learn to live correctly is the chief purpose of the study of the human body; accordingly, the subject of hygiene has been given the most prominent place in this work," writes John Calvin Willis, A.M., Ph.D., M.D. in the preface to his Elementary Physiology.

This is Willis' third book. Previous books include: Essentials of Health and Outlines of Psychology.

Explains Willis, "Physiology is primarily a study of the human cell in its relation to motion, nourishment, and control. The chief ends of all vital action in the body are motion, nourishment, and control; if these three can be had in the proper proportion, the body is in a state of perfect health."

Food and drugs are discussed at length. Some warnings against abuse and excessive use include:

"It is probably true that more than half of all we eat is mere rubbish. Most commercial candies are made of inferior materials and are unfit for use; also soft drinks at soda fountains are usually injurious or without value."

"By habit, most people overeat. One should never eat or drink merely for the pleasure of it, nor should one eat unless the act is attended by pleasures."

Willis also mentions that many a sleepless night is caused by overeating, and that overeating may cause gas which "should be relieved promptly."

Willis differentiates between mental and manual workers and suggests, "People who do hard manual labor should take meals about 6 a.m., at noon and at 6 p.m. Those engaged in mental labor should not eat so much nor so often. A good plan for a mental worker, or person of

Senior Recital

Practice To Finally Pay Off

By ANNE SULLIVAN

Kathy Stone Brewer has spent four hours at Austin Peay for two hours of credit. What course could possibly involve that much time?

Ask any music major and the answer is the same—a senior recital. It is the culmination of years of study that Brewer, a mezzo-soprano, will present to the public March 3, in the Clement Auditorium at 8 p.m.

"Music is full of emotion and requires much physical as well as vocal energy," said Brewer when describing her favorite aria Conducta all'ora in Ceppei by Verdi. Another feature of the program will be a Shakespearean poem set to music by Stravinsky in a 20th century selection titled Full Fathom Five.

Brewer has been selected to lead the singing of the Alma Mater in the Dunn Center June 2, during the graduation ceremony.

Her husband Rick, also a graduate from Austin Peay, led the 1975 graduation class to a rousing chorus of "All hail to thee, Austin Peay."

Brewer's academic and scholastic honors include Miss Hat and Cane of 1974 and special talent award in the Miss Tennessee Pagant of the same year in the amount of a $250 scholarship. In 1977 Brewer was the director and co-ordinator of the Miss APSU Pageant. In 1975 she was the president of the Government, APSU's answer to the Rockettes. The aspiring vocalist is active in musicals, opera workshops, concerts and competition singing.

Her future plans are to be employed as a high school choir director and to continue taking voice lessons.

Brewer sees the future for the APSU music department as "excellent." "We have an excellent faculty that is caring and helpful to students. There's a family-type feeling within our music department. I would also like to see an expansion of the music building and more students with more talent."

Clarkville community and to the students and faculty of Austin Peay in particular, for their help and support during our recent drive for the American Heart Association.

We raised several hundred dollars this year; and although the exact amount has not been computed as of yet, we far exceeded our contribution from last year. It is due to the help of the people of this area that we are able to give such a large donation.

The Sisters of Alpha Phi at Austin Peay raised money this year through giving "Lav Pops." The Lav Pops were sold not only on campus but throughout the city of Clarkville. This year, thanks to the coordination of our chairman, Sherry Kimbro, we were able to raise something new known as "Blossom for Beasts."

This activity is similar to a dance marathon only the participants dribble basketballs for Cardiac Aid. The winners for this year's blossom for Beasts were the Lady Gays (contribution of $90); second place went to Kappa Delta sorority (contribution of $85); and third place went to Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity (donation of $30).

Also participating was Chi Omega Sorority. With the help of these organizations and those who supported them by pledging contributions, we raised $214. We thank all those who helped us in this new endeavor.

The work is not over here; however, this year the alumni chapter of Alpha Phi at Clarkville has taken on the fund-raising drive for Montgomery County. The alumnae and the active do door to door throughout the county to raise money. These are some of the things we've done this year, but our fight is not over. Next year we will be still raising money again and we hope that when we do, you will remember us and give generously. Thank you.

Dear Editor:

In the Feb. 8 issue of The All State was an article by Vicki Harst on lack of study that Brewer, a mezzo-soprano, will present to the public March 3, in the Clement Auditorium at 8 p.m.

One, I agree that many times commuters are not thought of in plans by the university. A half-empty faculty-only parking lot is only one sign of such lack of consideration. The university needs to realize that the majority of its students live off campus.

Two, all students and especially commuters have a source of places to relax, study, listen to stereo, talk with friends, etc., during the day. This source is not being used to its fullest possibility. The source I am talking about is our church-sponsored student centers. Although they are sponsored by specific churches or denominations, not a single one of the three present facilities limits its participants by religious preference.

My suggestion following my first thought is that commuters and non-commuters as well, should get the Student Government Association active in developing more concern on the part of the university or commuters' needs and problems.

My suggestion after the second thought is that commuters (and non-commuters) ought to check out what is available at the student centers adjacent to campus. Come to them and make yourself at home. That is part of our reason for existing.

Vin Walkup

Dear Editor:

Frank Singwald stated in a recent issue of The All State homosexuals "would like to operate out in the open and get around to 'educate' the unsophisticated among the youth." My objection is that homosexuals are not people to not normally maintain an academic interest in people who are not homosexual. The Rev. Vermulke (the operator of Boy's Farm) is perhaps an exception.

However, we could just as logically be induced to ban heterosexual activities because occasionally young girls are raped.

My point is that a person's sexual preference has no extraordinary influence on whether he is harmful to society.

Singwald seems to think that homosexuality is inherently evil, leading it with crime and venereal disease. I am sure that this argument is not original with me, but homosexuals do not contribute to the birth rate.

The greatest danger to life on earth is continued growth. If the population growth rate is 1 percent for 70 years, the population will double. If it is as much as 7 percent, the population will double in only 10 years.

It is this growth rate that underlies the energy crisis, famine, war, crime and it even acts as a catalyst for the spreading of venereal disease. So the question of sexual preference becomes pretty insignificant when we think about the real problems.

Much criticism is leveled against tobacco, alcohol and coffee which are "poisons."

Concerning the length of life, Willis offers, "By correct living one should be strong at 80, not very feeble at 90, and not old until nearly 100."

He concludes, "Long life is the result of obeying the laws of health. Good food, pure air, proper exercise, pleasant work, unbroken rest, cleanliness and peace of mind are essential to health. Avoiding alcohol, tobacco, overwork, over-eating, disease and the extremes of heat and cold will lengthen the life of anyone."

Such was the study of health back in 1909 when this book was at Russell Springs Academy in Kentucky first used.

Del Square Psi Wins

College Bowl Held

Del Square Psi defeated the Political Studies Association in the championship game of the sixth annual Laurel Wreath College Bowl which was held recently in the University Center.

Ten teams entered the single-elimination tournament which took place over a two-day period.

Last year the event was won by the Political Studies Association, and Del Square Psi, also known as the physics team, finished in second place.

Between 30 and 40 spectators watched the final contest despite inclement weather which postponed the following two days of classes.

Playing for the winning team were Karl Pitts, Karl Pitts, Lowell Morris and Ricky Jones.

An innovation at the college bowl this year was complete student organization and operation. Alternating as moderator were Michie Honeycutt and Tim Winking. Suzanne Byrd served as judge, and Cathy Petty as timekeeper and scorekeeper.

The champion was invited to enter college bowls as the official APSP representative. Georgia Tech, the University of Alabama, Huntsville and UT Nashville have extended invitations to Del Square Psi to enter their tournaments later in the year.

Entries for College Bowl '78 included: Psi Chi, Del Square Psi, Wesley Foundation, Phi Kappa Alpha (2), Kappa Delta, Sigma Chi, Phi Chi Theta, Alpha Tau Omega and the Kappa Delta pledge class.

AFTER THE GAME—Austin Peay's Sports Information Director Doug Vance talks over the game results with Head Basketball Coach Ed Thompson.

Basketball Starts New Season

A whole new season starts this week for the basketball teams at Austin Peay as both the Lady Govs and their male counterparts will enter post-season tournaments for a shot at a national championship.

The Lady Govs open up tonight at 8 p.m. in the Dunn Center against Milligan College, while the Govs will have to wait until Friday night when they will play rival Middle Tennessee in E.A. Diddle Arena in Bowling Green, Ky. in the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament.

The new season is not a new idea as the regular season results are put aside except for the seedings of the tournament. The remaining elements are the same as that of a new season. The problem is that the teams do not forget the past; and if a team was beaten by another team during the regular season, then there could be a lot of problems. Since Austin Peay has already beaten MTSU twice during regular season then this could be a quick "season" for the Govs.

The Lady Govs, on the other hand, will play Milligan's Lady Buffaloes for the first time this year. The women have been playing their best ball lately, and this tourney could be the peak for the season. A win tonight would send the Lady Govs against Union University Thursday night in the quarterfinals. Union has already beaten Austin Peay twice in virtual slaughters, so that game does not offer much hope.

The new season is starting this week with championships and national playoff bids to be decided. Both the men's and the women's basketball teams are capable of advancing to the regional tournaments which would bring Austin Peay back to the standard it once held among basketball powers.

While there is a conflict in the schedule this week between the two tournaments, a fan can make it to all of the games and see both the Lady Govs and the Governors play. The action begins tonight and will continue through Saturday for the women and the men will begin their two-day affair Friday at Western Kentucky.

Bad Break

A visit to the Governor Park, otherwise known as the Lake Placid, makes one think that maybe the winter sports written about in this column several weeks ago should be added to the athletic program. The baseball field for the most part is under a layer of ice and snow which most likely exceeds two feet. A section of the field in fact looks as though someone has been ice skating on the surface.

A closer look at the field shows that the ice and snow have taken a toll on the entire area as the outfield fence seems to be falling apart. There is not telling how long it will be before the field will be ready for use as the precipitation has a way of almost destroying the playing surface.

The baseball team is having problems all around. Head Baseball Coach Joe Ellenburg ruptured his Achilles tendon last week in a racquetball match when he moved forward to return a shot and "it just popped out," according to the coach.

Ellenburg underwent surgery Monday at St. Thomas Hospital in Nashville.

The remainder of the week will be spent in the hospital, and then the injured coach will return to the Peay in a cast and on crutches. The cast is slated to remain with him for two months.

Ellenburg was not too upset about it as he stated, "I guess I'm really lucky—I have three good assistants (Stuart Driscoll, John Sarver and Terry Vinyard) to take the team."

Track Team A Hit

By BILLY FIELDS

Austin Peay made a big impression on the fans at the Illinois Invitational Indoor track meet over the weekend as several of the Govs placed rather high considering the competition.

"It was a pretty good meet for us," Coach Wayne Williams explained. "We didn't really compete as a team because we only took 10 individuals."

Williams did take the athletes who have qualified for the National Collegiate Athletic Association Indoor Championships to be held in two weeks in Detroit.

Of the individuals who have qualified, all made impressive appearances for Austin Peay. The distance medley team made up of Zafar Ahmed, Earl Palmer, Keith Shank and Jeff Wallace finished fifth in the competition, which is a considerable feat since they were competing against teams whose specialty is distance.

John Eddins made another formidable finish in the shot put with a throw of 55-8 to take eighth place. Eddins has not qualified for the NCAA meet which will take a throw of 59 feet to gain that goal.

Coveck Moody sprinting in the 60-yard dash could have easily won that event had he got out of the starting blocks a little quicker, according to Williams.

"I do not know what happened to Coveck," Williams commented. "It could be a million things which kept him from firing out of the block. He had an excellent race in the preliminaries; this is something that just happens."

Pat Fogarty grabbed fifth place in the 60-yard high hurdles which was against a field of 64 other hurdlers from across the United States.

"There were about 40 universities represented in this particular meet," Williams stated. "We did good job in the competition."

The next meet will be the Last Chance Invitational Track Meet at Middle Tennessee this weekend. As the name of the meet would indicate, this will actually be the last chance for an athlete to qualify for the NCAA meet before the deadline.

Williams explained that he will take a rather dry team to the meet with the hopes of qualifying several more for the championship.

Ahmed, Fogarty and Glen Colivas will fly to Canada over the weekend to compete in the Canadian National Indoor Championships. Ahmed and Fogarty are the defending champions in the two-mile run and the 60-yard hurdles, respectively. Williams stated that the two have excellent chance of repeating for the national title and went on to say that Colivas has a shot at winning, or at least placing high in the pole vault, if a nagging leg injury doesn't act up.

averaged .275 in batting last season, while Moore and Janacone batted .364 and .330, respectively.

Although the fielding positions are in question at the present time, they show Don Bradshaw in left field, David McCarthy in center field and Chris Vinyard as probable starter.

The question lies in the need to include the strong batting skills of Billy Merkel and Nick Masner in the lineup. At least one of the players will be used as the pitchers' designated hitter, and the decision of the other will come as a tough choice.

This season's pitching squad includes eight men, all capable of starting. The probable starters for the weekend games include left-hander Joe Briley, right-hander Rick Richardson and first relief right-hander Doug Downey. The season's pitching has shown good signs according to Ellenburg, and it could be three weeks before a definite rotation pattern is established.

Best Record

Western Kentucky has the best post season tournament record for the Ohio Valley Conference as it has a record of 9-0. Morehead is second with a 3-4 record, while East Tennessee is 1-2.

Big Sticks won the championship of the Super League last week with a stunning over-time victory over F Troop in the intramural basketball league which is sponsored by the intramural department.

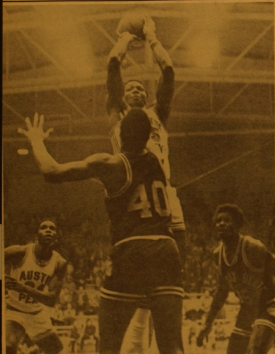

In the Under 6' League Rawlins Hookers came out the champions with Self Destruction finishing as the runner up for the league title. This particular league consists of players under six feet tall, while the Super League is unlimited.

In the Women's League the Ebony Angels took top honors with a victory over the Little Greckettes.

The Co-Ree League, which is made up of mixed teams, was won by the War Hawks, while there was a tie for second place between Johnny's Squad and Sigma Chi.

The championships end the intramural basketball season which Director Buddy Bungarner has termed a success. According to the director, there was probably more competition and enthusiasm this year than ever before. This is due to support from the team members and many of the students at the Peay.

The intramural office will make definite plans before the end of next week about the next events for the schedule. Bungarner and his staff are exploring several possibilities in regard to those activities.

IN THE MIDDLE—All-OVC forward Otis Howard goes up for an easy two points against Murray State, while Gov senior Clarence Mason gets ready in case of a missed shot.

Rucker And Swafford: 2 Lady Governors

By BILLY FIELDS

Since when do freshmen enter a major university and start on the basketball team? Golena Rucker and Elaine Swafford came to Austin Peay and won starting positions for the Lady Goves to become two of the squad's top players.

Rucker, who prepped at Murfreesboro Oakland and Swafford, who prepped Sale Creek High in Soddy, Tenn. have risen from just freshmen on the team to leaders as well as being among the top players in the conference according to their statistics. Rucker is the second best rebounder in the conference with a 12.3 average per game, while Swafford is among the best scorers as she averages 11.4 points per game.

But the notoriety has not phased them a bit as they still possess the same attitudes that they had when they got to the Peay. Rucker is quiet and very reserved, while Swafford is rambunctious, never sitting still. Their styles of playing basketball are similar as both are exciting scorers and rebounders. Rucker holds a slight lead in the rebounding department, while Swafford holds a slight lead in the scoring category.

"I came to Austin Peay because I felt that I had a chance to play," Swafford reflected. "So I came here and hoped for the best."

The best was soon in occurring as Swafford very quickly earned a reputation as being an aggressive athlete. Rucker followed the same route and proved to be invaluable to the women's team.

"You know, I started out playing guard, and one day my high school coach wanted me to practice at forward so I could learn to handle the ball a little," Rucker explained. "I guess he liked the way I played."

Since getting to Austin Peay, the biggest transition from high school to college basketball for the ladies came in the area of having to play both offense and defense rather than just offense. In Tennessee high schools, forwards only try to score, while guards just stay on defense. Next year that will be changed in Tennessee.

Violence on the court concerns both Lady Goves as one is basically passive, while the other is rather aggressive. Swafford says "If they push me, I push back," while Rucker simply turns the other cheek and forgets about the attack. However, both felt that they usually drew fouls when they retaliated with violence.

The two of them are on and off campus together almost like a two-person team. They immediately defend each other when the other is questioned, and they seem to have a strong friendship. Swafford went so far as to state, "If Golena ever gets married, I'm going to sing at her wedding."

Happy-go-lucky may be the best way to describe the two girls, as both seem to take every day one step at a time. Today's opening round of the state AIAW tournament doesn't worry either of the two. Both expressed high hopes for the Lady Goves' chances to win top spot in the tourney.

Tipoff for the state tourney for the Lady Goves is tonight at 8 p.m. in the Dunn Center.

Journey To The Tourney

PLAY-OFFS—The Gobs face Middle Tennessee's Blue Raiders in the OVC playoffs at Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green on Friday, while the Lady Gobs battle the Lady Buffaloes of Milligan College tonight.

The men ended the season with a 14-10 overall mark and an 8-6 record in the OVC. The women will take seven wins and 15 losses into the Dunn Center tonight.

OVC Representative

Tourney Decides

The OVC's representative to NCAA championship play will be determined for the fourth consecutive season by a post-season conference tournament.

In their four seasons of basketball at Austin Peay, Norman Jackson and Otis Howard have never played in an NCAA championship contest.

Their final opportunity for post-season play comes this Friday and Saturday as the Governors join Middle Tennessee, East Tennessee and host Western Kentucky for the fourth Ohio Valley Conference Basketball Tournament at E.A. Diddle Arena in Bowling Green.

Western Kentucky faces East Tennessee in the first game Friday at 7 p.m., while Austin Peay will meet Middle Tennessee at 9 p.m. in the nightcap. The two winners will play Saturday at 7:30 p.m. for the right to represent the OVC in the Midwest Regional (first round) the following weekend at Knoxville.

Howard and Jackson, two of seven seniors on the Governor roster, have come close each of the past three seasons. The pair has led Austin Peay to a combined 35-32 record over four years and spots in the three previous league post-season tournaments.

Austin Peay won the league regular-season championship last season but lost to Middle Tennessee in the tournament final at the Dunn Center.

As was the case in 1976-77, Austin Peay downed Middle Tennessee twice during the regular season and now must face the Blue Raiders for a third time.

Austin Peay coach Ed. Thompson is hoping his team will improve its defensive effort over the last two games. The Governors have lost two consecutive road games by close margins. Austin Peay fell at Oral Roberts in overtime (70-66) and at Murray State (85-84).

The entire three-game tournament will be broadcast over the Governor Sports Network on WJZM (1400 AM), WAKQ (101 FM) and WHIN (104 FM).

The Season In Review: 8-6 Conference Finish

By KENNETH KLEIN

The Governors of Austin Peay completed the 1977-78 basketball season Saturday with a 85-84 loss to Murray State and an 8-6 Ohio Valley Conference record.

The Governors opened the 1977-78 season with a 71-51 win over the Belmont

College Rebels to give Ed. Thompson his first win as the new head coach at Austin Peay. This game played in the Dunn Center was followed up with another home court victory when the Governors burned Troy State 80-53.

Old Dominion proved to be a tougher ball team than Austin Peay as the Governor were defeated in the 10,258 seat capacity Norfolk Scope Gymnasium by a score of 85-67.

Two triumphs in the Dunn Center were next in line for the Governors as they easily defeated Georgia Southern, 87-61, and California Poly, 82-68. Otis Howard attempted a total of 29 field goals in the Georgia Southern game for a seasonal individual high in that category.

Another game on the road and another loss came to the Governors when they traveled to Cincinnati and were defeated 81-67 by the team who is currently fifth in the Metro Seven Conference, Cincinnati.

Oklahoma City was the site for the Governors impressive showing in the All-College Tournament held in the 15,000 seat capacity Myriad Convention Center. Austin Peay opened the tournament with a loss to high-ranked San Francisco, 75-66.

The Governors near to open, but in the final few minutes, San Francisco pulled ahead to win the game.

Two thousand tickets are on hand for Austin Peay fans for the tournament, which decides the team that will represent the OVC in the NCAA regionals. Tickets went on sale yesterday, and preference seating was given to Austin Peay students, staff and season ticket holders.

Tickets will be sold to the general public from 8:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday and from 8:30 to noon on Thursday. Tickets must be picked up in person; there will be no sales via telephone.

The four ticket prices include: full out bleachers ($2 per night), permanent bleachers ($3 per night), floor bleachers ($4 per night) and chairback seats ($5 per night).

semi-finals. The Governors made quick work of the Aggie with a stunning 76-70 victory, advancing them to the consolation finale.

In this game, the Governors faced Oral Roberts and former Austin Peay coach Lake Kelly. Austin Peay tied 11 times with the Titans throughout the game, but Austin Peay managed to pull ahead and win, 80-75. The Governors ended the tournament in fifth place and the second best record of the tournament participants.

The Governors entered the new year with their second loss ever in the Dunn Center when James Madison College dumped the Govs, 73-67.

The Governors opened their Ohio Valley Conference campaign with two losses on the road to Tennessee Tech, 58-57, and East Tennessee, 66-58. Turn-overs seemed to be the main factors in the losses along with rebounding.

Eastern Kentucky was the first OVC victim of the Governors as Bowling Green the Columbia, 113-85. This game marked the most total points scored in a game for this season for Austin Peay

Women Battle Here

The Winfield Dunn Center will be full of female basketball players as Austin Peay will be the host team for the state association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women tournament which will decide the state representative at the national tournament which will be held in Virginia later this month.

There will be 11 teams besides Austin Peay entered in the field which includes Tennessee Wesleyan, Tusculum, David Lipscomb, Maryville, Carson-Newman, Lambuth, Union, Milligan, Lincoln Memorial, Covenant and UT-Chattanooga.

Of the 12 teams, Union, Lambuth and UT-Chattanooga promise to be the favorites, but the Lady Goves will have an outside chance at top honors as they will have the home court advantage.

The tournament gets underway today at 11 a.m. with David Lipscomb taking on Tusculum College. The second game is slated for 1 p.m. when Maryville will play Carson-Newman. Lincoln Memorial will play Covenant at 6 p.m., while the Lady Goves will play Milligan at 8 p.m.

The tournament will run the remainder of the week with the championship game climaxing the four-day event on Saturday afternoon at 1 p.m.

A QUICK MOVE—Brenda McFarlin, senior guard for the Lady Goves, attempts to get around Lady Sue Pam Kilday.

Up And Down Year

Lady's Fate Hinges

By BILLY FIELDS

This has been an "up and down year" for the Lady Goves basketball team as at times they could knock the bottom out of the basket while at other times, they couldn't hit "the inside of a barn" with anything.

Their record is not indicative of the caliber of ball that the women's basketball team played as it ended at 7-15 for the year. In the conference the Lady Goves fared rather badly as they went winless in nine contests.

Austin Peay opened the season with two losses at the hands of Union University and Lambuth College. It scored back from the losses for two straight wins against UT-Martin and David Lipscomb. A game later the Lady Goves up-ended Vanderbilt University in the Dunn Center by a 20-point margin of 81-61. From that point on, the season just seemed to get longer.

The Lady Goves lost four in a row after a win over Tusculum which dropped their record to 4-10 with a good portion of the season remaining. Another win over Lipscomb raised a few eyebrows, but the worst was yet to come.

In the last nine games, APSU could meet only two victories and the women lost seven close ballgames. Those losses were to teams such as Tennessee Tech (73-69) and Middle Tennessee (73-70).

The Peay lost a heart-breaker to Vanderbilt in overtime after leading the entire game.

Tonight the Lady Goves will take on Milligan College for the first time of the year. The players as well as coach Janine Cox expect a lot from the team.

"Our young players are just now starting to get a grasp on their game," Cox commented. "They are playing with more confidence and are starting to reach a peak as we enter the tourney."

Golena Rucker, star

forward for the Lady Goves, expressed as much confidence about the tourney as Cox.

"If we play like we have the past few games, then we have a shot at winning. If we don't, then it could be a short tournament," Rucker said.

The record for the season was not the best ever for the APSU women, but the number of starters who are freshmen must be considered. Four of the regulars were freshmen.

Tipoff for the contest is 8 p.m. in the Dunn Center.

Season Wrap-Up

along with two personal records for 6-7 Otis Howard. Howard compiled a 40-point total in the game to set a new Dunn Center record of the most points scored in a game, breaking his previously established record of 37.

Howard also set a new record of the most field goals ever scored in the Dunn Center with 18. He set the former record of 14 two years ago against Morehead.

Austin Peay bowled its Ohio Valley Conference record to 2-2 after defeating Morehead by a score of 85-69. Dennis Pagan posted a new career point high of 24 points in the game played in the Dunn Center.

A crowd of 10,700 gathered to view the Austin Peay-Middle Tennessee clash at Murfreesboro in which the Goves claimed victory by a score of 64-62. Phil Mayes set his career record against the Blue Raiders with a 16-point total and also gathered in 22 rebounds.

Austin Peay was dropped by the Hilltoppers of Western Kentucky in its sixth Ohio Valley Conference game of the season by a score of 91-83. Dennis Pagan and Otis Howard each scored 24 points in the game.

The Governors defeated Murray in the last game of the first round of the OVC by a narrow margin of two points, with the final score being 83-81.

Revenge and defeat were the words describing the next two games for the Governors as they defeated Tennessee Tech 71-62 and lost to East Tennessee 69-64, both games of which were played in the Dunn Center.

The trip to Death Valley proved somewhat adding for the Governors as they were defeated by the Colonels of Eastern Kentucky, 81-73, but came out on top in the Morehead game, 73-54. The Governors in the game against Morehead, led by the 22 points of Otis Howard, broke the previous school record of field goal percentages set in 1959 by posting a blistering 68 percent mark from the floor.

Austin Peay avenged its loss to Western Kentucky previously in the season by defeating the Hilltoppers in their second matchup, 66-64, in a game fought closely in the final few minutes.

Austin Peay again defeated Middle Tennessee in the season's second matchup before a record crowd of 6,300 in the Dunn Center this season by a score of 90-72.

Next, the Governors went on the road for a non-conference game against Oral Roberts, a team previously beaten in the All-College Tournament. This time the Titans finished victorious by a score of 63-64.

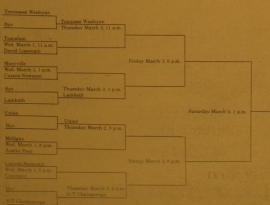

In the final game of the regular season, the Goves were defeated 85-84 by the Murray State Racers. This game marked the first victory for Racer coach Fred Overton against the Governors in the four years he has been coach for Murray.

Four Players Since 1975

Austin Peay has had four players named to the All-OVC tournament team since the revival of the affair in 1975.

Since the tourney was reinstated in 1975, Charlie Pollock, Sam Drummer, Calvin Garrett and Otis Howard have made the prestigious squad. Howard is the only player in the school's history to make the team twice (1975 and 1977), and with the tourney this weekend, he could be the first to make for a third time.

The basketball careers of eight Austin Peay players could come to a halt this weekend as the Governors and the Lady Goves enter the final week of the season. The Governors will be taking six seniors into the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament at Western Kentucky's E.A. Diddle Arena for their Friday

NORMAN JACKSON list of players who could be hanging up his uniform for the final time if the Goves lose their next ballgame. Howard, a business administration major for Oak Ridge, Tenn., is considered to be one of the finest ball players ever to represent Austin Peay.

Howard has been named to the ASOVC team the past two seasons and was named the OVC Player of the Year last season when he averaged over 16 points per game and averaged 8.2 rebounds per game. So far this season he has averaged nearly 22 points per contest while leading the conference in rebounding with a 10.5 average.

Norman Jackson is another senior who has left his mark on the basketball program at Austin Peay. He went into his final year at the Peay as the top man in all assist category for the university and the conference.

Phil Mayo may be one of the most underrated centers in the conference as he is the smallest. At 6-4, Mayo towers over no other center, but his keen desire to play the game makes him one of the better centers in the OVC, according to Thompson.

Norris Randall is the fourth leading scorer for Austin Peay with a 10.2 average. Randall at 16-20 feet from the basket is deadly with a jump shot. His knack for being in the right place at the right time makes him a good rebounder.

Clarence Mason has been the Governors' sixth man most of the season. A transfer from Volunteer State Community College, Mason plays both basketball and sprints for the track team. As a basketball player he has earned his top distinction as one of his coaches considers him one of the best team players on the squad.

Mason has averaged over five points per game as a substitute and part-time starter.

Frank Ross doesn't get very much ink in regard to the press but is a solid performer for Austin Peay. A senior from Lexington, Ross is a sociology major with the intentions of becoming a coach.

Tenna Brown, a senior from Dyersburg Junior College, closes out her career after the Lady Goves last game. Brown is a health and physical education major with hopes of becoming a graduate assistant somewhere in order to continue her education.

Before transferring from Dyersburg, Brown was president of the State Government Association the junior college. She carries double duties

Austin Peay as she plays on the tennis team.

The point-guard for the Lady Goves is Brenda McFarlin, and according to Janine Cox, head coach of the Lady Goves, she will very hard to replace next season. McFarlin averaged just under 10 points per contest for Austin Peay.

For most people, the week will be just another week; but for the six seniors on the basketball team, could be the end of a way life. A loss any time would end all hopes of another game on the college level.
