Houses will be demolished for new dorm

By JARED COMBS
Staff Writer

APSU is set to build a 400-bed residence hall on Castle Heights Road, but the project will require that the Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Sigma Alpha and Delta Sigma Theta sorority houses be torn down.

"All four social sororities with campus housing will be relocated on campus," said Lindsay Mazer, assistant director of Student Life and Leadership.

Though the Chi Omega house is located on Drane Street and would not be affected by the new building project, this group will still be relocated with the other sororities.

"The reason that they will be moved out too is that we're trying to treat all the sororities equally," said Mitch Robinson, vice president of Finance and Administration.

Originally, the sororities were told that they would have to be out of their houses by May 31.

It has been clarified, since the sororities originally met with Student Life and Leadership on Feb. 4, that the organizations will not have to be out of their houses until the 2008 fall break at the earliest.

"Plans are to relocate the sororities to a different location — Home Court Apartments," Robinson said. "The plan is to move them any time before the end of the fall semester but no later than over the December holiday break."

Home Court Apartments are located on Robb

Avenue. They were purchased by APSU in September 2007.

"This proposal has been discussed for over a year as part of an update to the Campus Master Plan," Robinson said. The new dormitory will allow for the transfer of students from the Cross, Killebrew and Rawlins dormitories.

The APSU Housing Master Plan states that the Castle Heights dormitory will be a "double occupancy suite-style dormitory." Each suite will have its own bathroom, but share a common living space.

According to Robinson, Cross, Killebrew and Rawlins will be "taken off-line" because they do not meet fire code requirements.

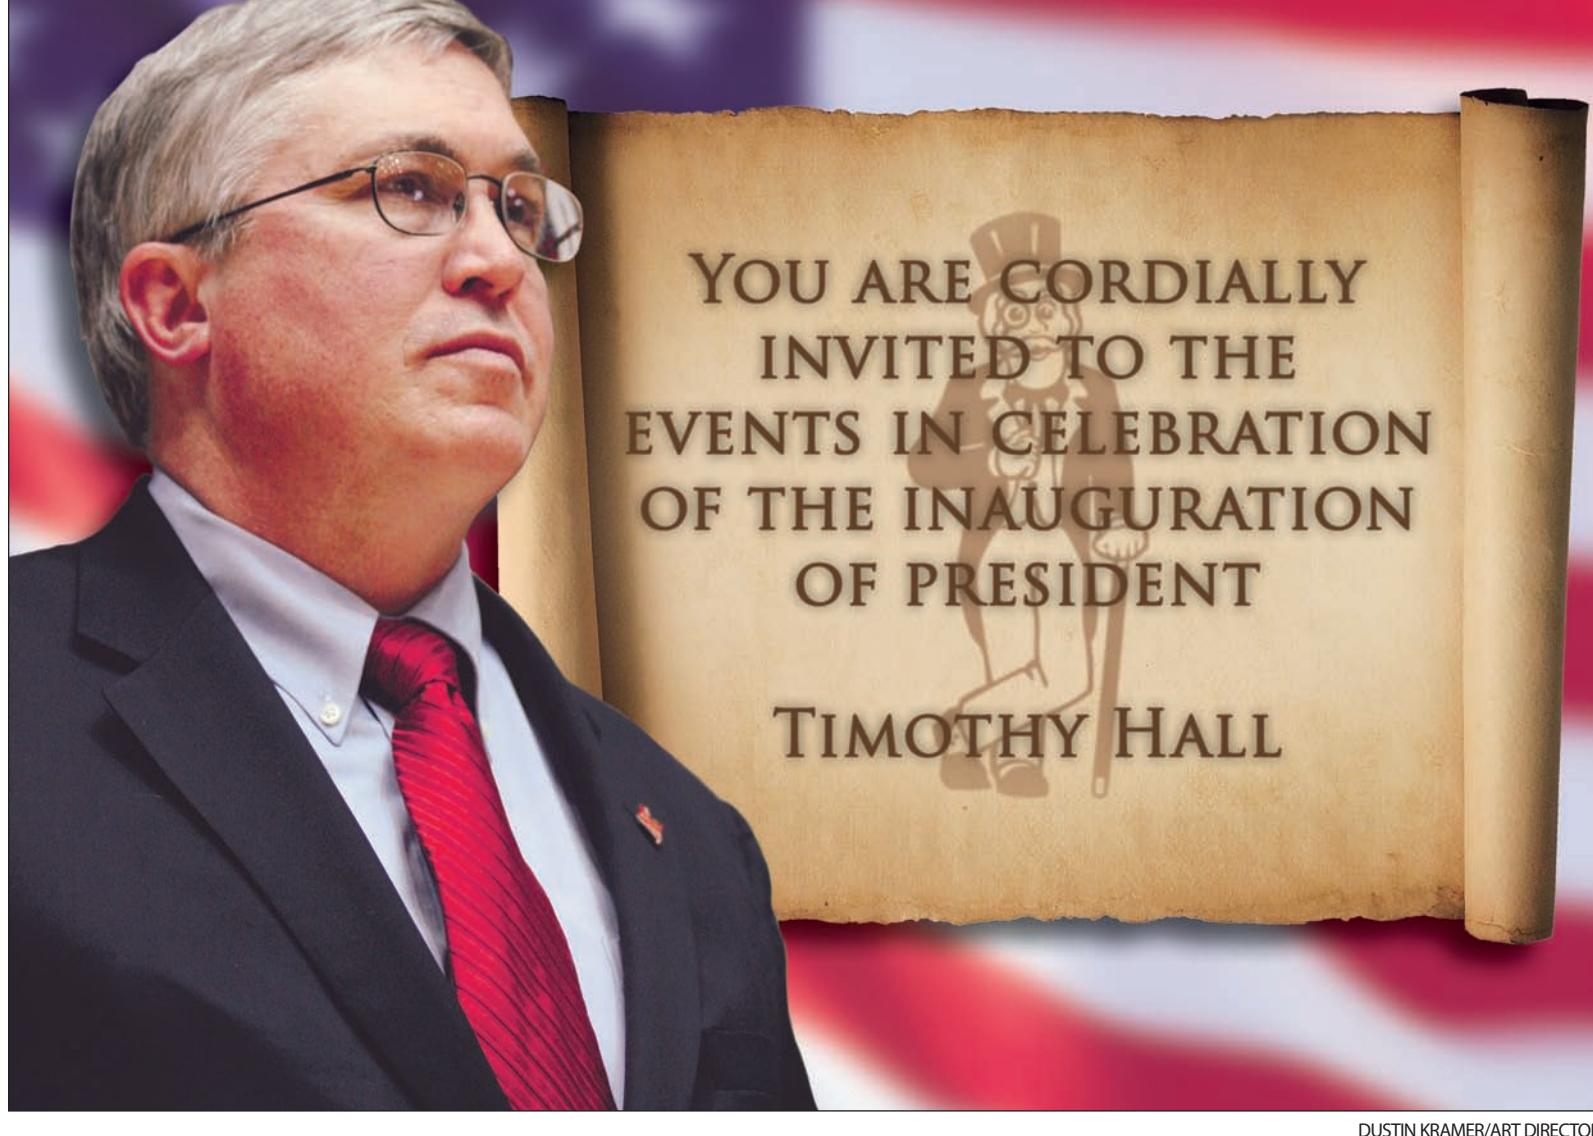

The dormitories will be replaced with a three building complex intended for graduate students, according to the housing master plan. The complex will have 400 beds. Of those beds, 120 will be similar to the Castle Heights dormitory.

'Hall'-mark month celebrates inauguration

By NICOLE JUNE

YOU ARE CORDIALLY INVITED TO THE
EVENTS IN CELEBRATION OF THE INAUGURATION
OF PRESIDENT
TIMOTHY HALL

DUSTIN KRAMER/ART DIRECTOR

President Timothy Hall will be inaugurated as APSU's ninth president April 2 in the Music/Mass Communications building.

By NICOLE JUNE
Staff Writer

A candlelight ball, a prom and a myriad of visits by renowned speakers are just a few of the items on the agenda for APSU's upcoming Presidential Inauguration Month.

March will be devoted to the events leading up to the actual installation of President Timothy Hall, to be held April 2, 2008.

According to Carol Clark, executive assistant to the president, the installation refers to the actual ceremony in which Hall will officially be installed as president, whereas the events calendar for March encompasses inauguration events.

These events are meant to present the diverse scope of the university and celebrate progress and ideas of the university.

"One thing [Hall] wants to make clear is that the installation and inauguration are not about himself, but about the broad celebration of the university as a whole," Clark said. "This is an opportunity for the students, faculty, staff and community to pull together during these events, which will showcase a lot of different aspects of the university."

Although Hall officially began his presidential duties starting Aug. 1, 2007, he has not yet been installed as the president due to the need for what is called a "honeymoon period."

"It's an analogy for the first months in the 'courtship' when the president is making a heartfelt attempt to learn all about the university, and the university community is learning about the president," said Dennie Burke, executive director of public relations and marketing.

"From my perspective, having worked with most of the nine presidents, President Hall's honeymoon is continuing longer and stronger than most," Burke said.

Hall will be APSU's ninth president, making this event quite unique.

"Many students will only be present for one installation. It is an important experience in that regard," Clark said.

"An inauguration — like a lunar eclipse — is a rare event in the life of a university — and we hope everyone will participate and become part of APSU's history," Burke said.

The installation ceremony is a formal event, unlike many of the inauguration month events, according to Clark.

Several delegates are invited to attend, among whom is Gov. Phil Bredesen.

The work of planning and coordinating the inauguration events is the responsibility of the Inauguration Committee, consisting of 14 representatives from the student body, faculty, and staff, and five members from the local community.

In addition to the core committee, there are several active subcommittees: Academic Events, Student Events, Community Events and Public Relations and Printing.

Most of the events are free of charge, especially to students. However, some events are held by invitation only, and some require reservations.

A few of the events will feature internationally-renowned guest speakers.

Nesse Godin, an active speaker and survivor of the Holocaust, will speak at 6 p.m. Mar. 11 in the Clement Auditorium.

The event is open to the public and free of charge.

Physicist and Nobel Laureate Dr. Leon Lederman will be speaking

Denton appointed to hold office until search starts

David Denton is the new interim provost and vice president for Academic Affairs. Denton will replace Bruce Speck, who was selected to be the president of Missouri Southern State University.

The former dean of professional studies was chosen by President Timothy Hall to take Speck's place as of Feb. 1. Denton will hold this position until the fall, when a national search will begin for a person to fill the job on a lasting basis.

"My job is to think broadly on what we do on the academic side," Denton said. Denton has been at APSU since 1994 as a faculty member, chair of Psychology, interim dean and dean of professional studies. According to Denton, this wide array of experience is what may have led to him being chosen as Speck's replacement.

"I chose him because he properly respects the role of faculty in the university," Hall said.

While Denton is only the temporary vice president, he plans to return to his former occupation as the dean of professional studies.

However, according to Denton, if he feels that the position fits him and he is selected, he could become the permanent provost and vice president.

"I'm going to pay attention to how people are responding," Denton said.

"This place feels right to me," Denton said.

Denton was a first generation college student, worked more than 20 hours per week during college, and commuted to school.

Jonathan Shay, a psychiatrist who treats Vietnam War veterans who suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder, will be speaking about what he calls "Odysseus in America," on the problems soldiers encounter upon their homecoming from overseas.

Shay is a recipient of the MacArthur Prize, which is considered the most prestigious academic award in the country.

Shay will be speaking at 6 p.m., March 13 in the Clement Auditorium.

Executive director for the Tennessee Coalition for Open Government, Frank Gibson, will be making a speech entitled "Argument for Open Government: Why should you care?" at 4 p.m., March 27 in the University Center Room 305.

Allen Wier, author of "Tehano," will conduct a public reading at 8 p.m., March 18 in the Gentry Auditorium.

Several other events are being held during this month. The Candlelight Ball will be held March 1 at the Hilton in Downtown Nashville.

Reservations for this event are required, and the cost is $150 per person.

The funds raised from the ball go to an endowed scholarship.

Information about this scholarship can be obtained from University Advancement. The theme for this year's ball is "Dancing with the Stars."

The 40th Annual Student Art Show Opening Reception, open to the public, will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m., March 17 in the Trahern Gallery.

The APSU Center at Fort Campbell will hold a Student Appreciation Day on from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., March 6. Door prizes and T-shirts will be given away.

The Red Cross Blood Drive, sponsored by Chi Delta Chi, will be held from noon to 5 p.m., March 10.

Students are strongly encouraged to attend the blood drive due to the lack of blood available in the Nashville and the greater Middle Tennessee area.

Previous successes have prompted the accommodation of a larger group of donors.

The Veterans and Tri-Counties Upward Bound programs will also be relocated on campus to allow for the construction project. Daniel Botula, director of Tri-Counties Upward Bound, was unaware of where their program's headquarters would be relocated.

"So far as I know that would be still up in the air at this point," Botula said. "I haven't heard anything definite."

According to Robinson, the Upward Bound programs will be relocated to Home Court Apartments with the sororities.

The floor plan of the apartment complex will remain as is, with the exception of some minor changes for the Upward Bound programs, Robinson said.

Sorority leadership declined to comment on this story.♦

Some senators debated the rock resolution, as removal of the rocks would take away an icon of school spirit.

One senator argued to focus on more urgent campus problems instead.

The rock resolution did not pass.

SR 9 and 10 presented

Sen. Yousef Behbahani presented SR 9.

The identity resolution would help students recognize SGA senators by posting the name, campus e-mail address, contact information and a photo of each senator on the legislative branch page of the SGA Web site (www.apsu.edu/sga).

The goal of the resolution is "to promote cooperation in solving problems of general interest to the student body."

Sen. Aaron Taylor presented SR 10, which would encourage the installment of electrical plugs in the food court, a campus dining location.

The plug resolution would solve the problem of inconveniently located electrical outlets as "students can be seen daily using portable devices," and will need additional places to plug electronic devices, according to Taylor. If passed, the plug resolution would call for a formal recommendation to University Facilities to investigate the cost and feasibility of installing additional electrical outlets.

Housing fee discussed

Sen. AJ Wolfe said he wanted to investigate the new housing deposit fee.

Starting next semester, new APSU students who plan to live on campus must pay $200; returning students must pay an additional $100 to the previous $100 deposit already made.

The additional $100 will deduct from the semester housing balance.

Wolfe argued students who are completely covered from costs due to scholarships would lose money since scholarships do not arrive until after the housing deposit is paid.

Brian Huffman, president of SGA, said he would consult Joe Mills, director of Housing/Residence Life, regarding the deposit.♦

The All State dedicated to quality journalism

Editorial Roundup

THE ISSUE:

The All State recently participated in the annual Southeast Journalism Conference.

OUR TAKE:

Though TAS won several awards, we recognize the need for self-evaluation.

We at TAS are dedicated to providing students with a quality newspaper. We hope to continue serving the APSU community for many years to come.

Recently, The All State participated in the annual Southeast Journalism Conference. This conference hosts many events including workshops, announcing "Best in the South" winners and on-site competitions. Nearly 30 universities were represented throughout the South and TAS's competitors included college newspapers from esteemed universities like Vanderbilt, Emory, Ole Miss and many others.

At 2007's conference, TAS walked away with several awards — including being ranked "Third Best Newspaper in the South." Other noteworthy achievements included three award-winning writers, one award-winning photographer and another award-winning page designer. The results are in for 2008, and once again, APSU's student newspaper walked away with several awards. For the "Best of the South" competition, Jessica Baird received a fifth place ranking for "Best Features Writer" category, while Patrick Armstrong and Kasey Henricks each ranked sixth for "Best Photographer" and "Best Opinion-Editorial Writer" respectively. The conference held numerous on-site competitions ranging from First Amendment writing to public relations. For the on-site category of "News Writing" Kyle Nelson achieved a second place finish.

Although TAS is proud of its regional success, we recognize there is always room for growth and improvement. Self-evaluation is essential to the advancement of any profession, and TAS must uphold the duty of public servanthood. We at TAS take this commitment a step further and view our service as being the unofficial fourth branch of government. The media must maintain a role in the "checks and balances" process, and must be watchdogs — not lapdogs.

TAS serves to provide information and promote student interests. In achieving this goal, TAS places great emphasis on investigative journalism. Students have a right to know about the events and issues that affect their lives. We are a paper that provides information to a growing university community. As the eyes, ears and voice of APSU, this newspaper seeks to provide readers with agency. This means that TAS promises to provide an open forum to all students to express views and highlight issues that speak to fellow students. We are a newspaper written for the students, by the students.

On a different note, improvement often implies innovation. Every day marks a changing wind and newspapers are confronted with two options: Change with the times or remain left behind. In order for any newspaper to improve itself, it must remain fresh and relevant and allow for innovation to occur, and TAS is doing so by pioneering in areas such as videocasting, podcasting and blogging.

Most media is a one-sided form of communication, meaning that the message is delivered but not returned. TAS rejects such a standard. Constructive criticism is encouraged. If a reader identifies a problem with the paper, please address these problems and offer solutions by e-mailing TAS at allstate@apsu.edu. TAS is open to input from its readership because many minds coming together are always better than one. Among this paper's strengths is its collective approach towards acknowledging and hearing many voices and turning those voices into one newspaper. This is the basis of accountability, and we at TAS believe we should offer nothing less to the public. Good night. And good luck.♦

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

Political voyeurism a popular American pastime?

Recently, The New York Times broke a story on Republican presidential front-runner Sen. John McCain involving allegations that he had an extramarital affair with a lobbyist back in 2000 while married to his current wife. The senator denied all allegations, called the article tawdry and disgusting, and vowed to continue on with the business of running for president without being distracted by such sleaze in his quest for the presidency.

When Clinton (Bill, not Hillary) first ran for president, so many tabloid tales of his sexcapades dogged him on the campaign trail that his staff began to refer to them as "bimbo eruptions." At one point they even filmed a counterattack political commercial with then-candidate Clinton looking straight into the camera, and in his most sincere voice saying that, yes, he and his wife Hillary had difficult patches in their marriage, but they loved each other and were moving on. Clinton vowed (again) to not be distracted by such sleaze in his quest for the presidency.

At another point, he and Hillary went on "60 Minutes" with Mike Wallace and again admitted difficult times but didn't go into specifics like who, how many times and when. American voters seemed to agree that this was something that could be set aside for more important items like the economy, gas prices and international turmoil.

Of course, the whole "bimbo" issue reared its ugly booty again when Bill wagged his finger at the camera, in front of the American people, and denied ever having "sexual relations" with that woman (Monica "boom boom" Lewinsky).

Ah, the good old days. It's not like Bill was the first or the last politician to partake in the perks of power. Sen. Gary Hart, who had electoral success, political momentum and a host of powerful endorsements back in 1980 when he ran for president, risked it all when he had Donna Rice, a winsome young voter (not his wife), sit on his lap for a photo opportunity.

Apparently, they hit it off, because he then invited her along with pals overnight on a yacht appropriately named, "Monkey Business." Soon the media made a monkey out of Gary when they followed him to his townhouse in Washington, D.C., and saw Ms. Rice going in at 9:00 p.m., and coming out at 7:00 a.m. Mr. Hart's campaign ship sunk faster than the Titanic, and Ms. Rice pocketed a cool million soon after for endorsing a line of jeans called, "No Regrets."

Let's see, Franklin D. Roosevelt had a not-so-secret affair with his secretary, and his wife/cousin, Eleanor Roosevelt, had not-so-secret trysts with her gal pals. Of course, back then the media felt that what was behind the scenes deserved to stay behind the scenes. This brings me to the question of this column. Should the sexual affairs, proclivities, likes, dislikes and marriage or relationship troubles of politicians stay behind the bedroom doors, or do we, as voters, have a right to know?

In polls on media coverage the answer seems to be both yes and no. Yes, we as voters do have a right and a need to know about the character of the men and women who claim to be fit for our nation's highest elected office.

No, in that Americans at the same time believe the media often cross the line and divulge too much about the private lives of our leaders.

Little Shop of Horrors takes root on stage

By KIMBERLY SHUEL
Staff Writer

Looking for some great entertainment? Look no further than the APSU stage. The department of theatre will produce "Little Shop of Horrors" beginning Wed, Feb. 27 through Sun, March 2.

The play will be showing at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday night through Saturday. An additional showing will be on Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets prices are $5 for students and $10 for adults. They will be on sale one hour before each performance.

Directed by Darren Michael, this play is sure to entertain. With an artful blend of singing and acting, the actors will keep your eyes glued to the stage all night.

This is only professor Michael's second semester at APSU. "Little Shop of Horrors" is his first endeavor with the talented theatre students. Michael is extremely excited about the show. "The students have been fantastic. They're working really hard," Michael said. After only four weeks of preparation, the show is ready. This even includes missing two rehearsals due to snow days.

Michael believes this will be a very exciting play for the audience. "It's not your typical musical," he said. Anyone familiar with the play knows the plant is a fantastic part of it. It takes three people working four different puppets to bring this plant to life. "It's very odd to watch a puppet on stage," Michael said the anticipation of the crowds' reaction to the animated plant fuels the actors.

One of the main characters, Audrey, is played by Britney Jade Smith who is majoring in theatre design. Smith said she loved being a part of the play. "I love musical theatre. It has been a while since I have been on the stage and not working behind the scenes, so that makes it even more exciting." In regards to her new director Smith said, "I don't think Darren really knew what he was getting himself into when he cast[ed] all of us. This cast is wonderful, and we are all so close. We love working together and we have so much fun."

Smith's favorite scene that she is involved in is "Suddenly Seymour."

"It is the one point in the show where my character really gets to let loose. Audrey and Seymour really connect and for a moment everything is perfect. I love singing with Jack (Seymour), he is such a sweet and amazingly talented guy."

Smith has high expectations for the play. "We have all put many hours of hard work and dedication into this show. My only hope is that every audience member will be open to what we have to share with them, and hopefully they will come away with something they were not expecting."

The character of Audrey should relate to the female audience well. According to Smith, "Everything Audrey does is in some way influenced by a man in her life, just like most girls out there at some point in their life. The difference is that Audrey is of course a character, so everything is very extreme and has very high stakes; however, I think almost any girl can relate to Audrey on some level."

Smith's final words for her future audience are that "it is a very high energy, high paced show that is lots of fun for everyone involved onstage and in the audience. We have a great cast full of tremendous talent that will keep you on the edge of your seat."

Another actor is theatre major Charles Young. He plays Orin Scrivello, a motorcycle-riding dentist. Young also greatly enjoyed this play. "I have had a ton of fun with rehearsals and my character."

Young's favorite scene is his character's death scene. "Another of my favorite scenes is where Mr. Mushnik asks Seymour to be his son; the song and dance are hilarious," said Young. Young had some great influences to become his character. "I have several musicians that I pulled characteristics from including Prince and Elvis."

"The theatre department here at APSU puts on some really good stuff, and if you haven't seen anything yet you should totally come check us out," Young said. It is obvious that these actors feel very passionate about what they do.

If you have never seen a play at APSU, now is the time to check it out. The students are extremely passionate and talented and will make you glad you came. "Little Shop of Horrors" is sure to be a fantastic production that you won't want to miss. ♦

Music styles evolve with life

By MARSEL GRAY
Assistant Online Editor

Art is an aspect that has evolved with life. Some say there is a symbiotic nature between life and art. One such art form that has been a part of life is music.

Music is popular with people of every age, gender, nationality, religion and race. To conclude this month's heritage celebration of black history, let's take an in-depth look into African-American music.

This style of music can be characterized by blending African and European elements. According to the BBC article more than 11 million African-Americans taken into slavery from the 16th to the 19th century were cut off from their cultural roots. Music, however, united them in a way that transcended barriers of language and custom.

During the late 18th Century, the first African-American church congregations were formed. At that time music was a ceremonial worship consisting of psalms and hymns and singing "the shout," a form of religious dancing with hand-clapping and foot-stamping.

During the years following the Civil War, African-American music became more commonly heard. Black choral groups that sang plantation songs were widely used in white stage shows of the later 19th century.

With what were the onset of the early 20th Century, various types of African-American music such as spirituals, ragtimes and blues, began to fuse into what was later known as jazz. Jazz is greatly deemed one of America's greatest cultural achievements since it is characterized by a struggle between city and country, spiritual and secular lifestyles.

Jazz is a critical moment in America's musical history. Jazz groups began to attract widespread attention and achievement. New Orleans became the capital of jazz music, but the tradition was carried to Chicago and New York as well.

The blues is a closely related, yet distinct style of music. Blues music combines oral tradition of African-American poetry with the music using blues form. Rhythm and blues grew out of the union of jazz and blues. R & B contains strong backbeats.

The 1960s saw the birth of Motown, the first multimillion-dollar black-owned recording company. Songs became geared toward marches for civil rights. After the assassination of Martin Luther King, Jr., composers produced memorial works.

African-American music has since evolved into even more popular genres of art and entertainment. Both hip-hop and rap have had explosive popularity and have gained worldwide audiences.

Hip-hop and rap evolving from the 1970s and 1980s and then becoming even more distinct in the 1990s have shaped a lot of recent musical trends.

Louis Armstrong said, "What we play is life." Indeed, African-American music has evolved with the times and it is as much a reflection of American history as it is of African-American life. ♦

MOVIES YOU SHOULD NOT BE WATCHING

This 'Bachelor Party' was a bust

By DUSTIN KRAMER
Art Director

Bad movies exist. It's a fact of life. This is something that all of us have to cope with in some way. Whether it's simply ignoring all of the chasmic plot holes and terribly jumbled CGI in "Transformers," and just to be happy with "super sweet robot battles" or sobbing naked in an empty bathtub because George Lucas decided to change his own movie, and Greedo's itchy trigger finger just didn't do it for you.

"Bachelor Party 2: The Last Temptation" is a glaring example of a complete and utter lack of responsibility by money hungry studios that pass movie rights along to mediocre producers, who hire mediocre screenwriters, directors and actors to work on what will be, at best, a mediocre product.

This film is bad, but it's not "Gigli" bad. There are certainly more apparent cinematic failures out there. The main problem with this film is that there is no reason for anyone to care about this film and watching the film won't change your mind.

The story is chock full of clichés, the characters are cardboard cutouts of the same teen/college sex comedy archetypes that we've seen for years now and the jokes just aren't that funny.

Now let's talk about the title. First of all, "Bachelor Party," the seminal (pun intended) 1984 film starring Tom Hanks, wasn't all that great to begin with. There were some laughs here and there, and the donkey show was kind of messed up (although I prefer Kevin Smith's one-up in "Clerks II"), but the film is really dated now.

It seriously doesn't age well which makes me wonder why anyone would make a sequel to a mediocre film from more than 20 years ago just to abandon any and all resemblance to its predecessor?

"Bachelor Party 2" bears no similarities whatsoever to its prequel other than the fact that there is, believe it or not, a bachelor party in the film. Shock me, shock me. The movie feels more like "American Pie" than "Bachelor Party," and in any other case, that might be a good thing.

Avoid this like the plague when it arrives (no surprise) direct-to-DVD March 11. ♦

'The Eye' shows dead results

By TANYA LUDLOW
Assistant Perspectives Editor

Sydney Wells, played by Jessica Alba, is a violinist, blind from early childhood, who has a double corneal transplant to restore her sight. As she learns to see again, she is haunted by visions of carnage and menacing shadowy images, just as the viewer is haunted by predictable scares and bad dialogue ("They're like escorts for the dead")

She then spends the rest of the movie trying to convey the idea that she sees dead people without actually saying the words since this role is taken over by the skeptical therapist assigned to help her adjust to the world of sight: "I see, I see ... " "What Sydney? Dead people?" As Sydney uncovers the history of her haunted cornea's, she is led to — of all places — Mexico.

I wasn't aware of any organ-sharing program between the United States and Mexico, but this will undoubtedly fuel anti-immigration sentiment. They take our jobs and supply us with cursed organs? Where's our wall already?

Jessica Alba gets a lot of flack for just being a pretty face, and her work in "The Eye" isn't exactly going to win her any awards. At her best, she is compelling as a sweet and blind violinist who evokes sympathy because she can't even see how hot she is.

At her worst, well, there are headless mannequins at Dillard's who are able to more convincingly express emotion. The gratuitous shower scene plays out like an apology to the viewer for her horrible acting.

The most frightening thing about this movie was when I realized, half way through, that I had seen the original 2002 Hong Kong version, but had completely forgotten it. I'm not sure what that says about the original, but at least it was originally unmemorable. ♦

He considered joining the Marines, but after being accepted to Austin Peay, he decided to pursue a college degree. Now a freshman studying psychology, Victor wants to eventually earn a Ph.D and counsel Hispanic families to prevent broken homes.

"I have been told so many times that I wouldn't succeed, but now I know I just have to follow my dreams and forget about all the people who discouraged me in the past," Victor said.

Victor is involved in the Hispanic Cultural Center's Freshman Mentee Program and serves as a volunteer for many HCC events.

Lady Govs sweep Skyhawks

By MARLON SCOTT
Sports Editor

Before this weekend, the APSU Lady Govs had lost nine straight games including their last home game of the season. The last game they won was against the University of Tennessee at Martin Skyhawks in the Dunn Center Jan. 17, 58-52. This weekend the Lady Govs made it a clean sweep by defeating the Skyhawks on the road 55-48.

Senior Ashlee McGee and freshman Ashley Herring both scored 15 points in the game. McGee almost earned a double-double with nine assists. Senior Kellea Reeves added 11 points and sophomore Nicole Jamen pulled down 15 rebounds. Jamen is the first Lady Gov to grab 15 rebounds since Jan. 25, 2007, when Alicia Watson put together a 15-rebound effort against Jacksonville State.

McGee opened the game with a 3-pointer. Following her example, the rest of the Lady Govs began shooting the lights out and established a 16-6 lead by 8:52 in the first half. They made 12-of-27 (44.4 percent) field goals in the first half. Six points was as close as the Skyhawks would get to the Lady Govs. At halftime, the Lady Govs led 29-19.

When the Skyhawks opened the second half of the game with a 10-3 run, it appeared as if the Lady Govs were going to let another game slip through their fingers. With just over 12 minutes left in the game, Skyhawk Sarah Stinson made a layup that cut the Lady Govs lead down to three points, 29-32.

However, the Skyhawks began to get into foul trouble and the Lady Govs capitalized on the opportunity to put the game away. The Lady Govs made 13-of-16 (81.3 percent) free throws in the second half of the game.

Of the five Lady Govs who shot from the free-throw line in the game, three missed only one shot. Both Keri Reese and McGee were perfect from the free-throw line, making 4-of-4.

Lady Govs senior Ashlee McGee and sophomore Nicole Jamen walk down the court. McGee scored 15 points against the UT-Martin Skyhawks Saturday, Feb. 23. Jamen grabbed a team high 15 rebounds in the same game.

Missed shots by the Skyhawks compounded their troubles in the second half.

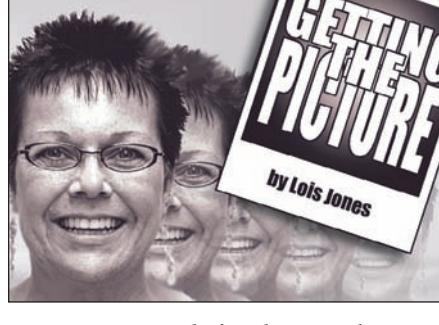

They tried to make up some ground from three-point range, but made only 3-of-11 (27.3 percent). Phyllisha Mitchell made the last 3-pointer for the Skyhawks with 1:02 remaining in the game. Mitchell and Crystal Miller both scored 13 points for the Skyhawks.

Behind by six points, the Skyhawks missed their last two shot attempts and lost the game 55-48. The win improves the Lady Govs record to 6-21, 3-15 OVC. They have two road games remaining this season.

The Lady Govs play Eastern Kentucky Feb. 28, and finish their season on the road against Morehead State. ♦

One shot captures two playing 'Fields'

Ernest Fields. You couldn't miss Matthew Fields' hair flying as he ran down court, but I had missed his name because my focus was on our players.

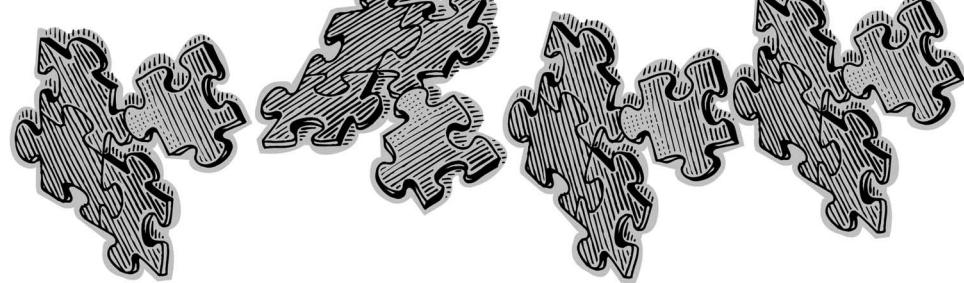

When reviewing my photos after the game, I noticed I had several pictures of both players. I am not sure of the stats, but two players with the same last name playing in the same game on different teams probably is not rare. However, I am not sure how often two players with the same last name play the same position or cover each other in a game.

I especially liked this picture because you can see Matthew Fields wrapping up the arm of Ernest Fields. It was a great example of how they played side by side, against each other, most of the time in the game.

Sometimes you don't realize something until later, and then you have a "light-bulb moment." One of these moments happened to me at a Govs basketball game when they played Georgia Southern University Feb. 23.

When I watched the players line up for a free throw, I noticed the name of a Georgia Southern player on his jersey—Fields. Matthew Fields, the senior forward for the Eagles was lined up next to Govs sophomore forward,

The Govs Fields is fun to watch as he explodes on the court. You have to pay close attention to catch one of his many blocks or rebounds. He is someone to keep your eye on. This time my camera was on him. ♦

Govs find success on senior night

The APSU Govs took an easy win Sat., Feb. 23, in the O'Reilly ESPNU BracketBuster game against the Georgia Southern Eagles, 80-72.

Coach Dave Loos said, "[This win] got the bad taste out of our mouth from the other night at TSU and we beat a pretty good team."

Instead of their usually fast start, the game looked a little shaky when the Govs missed their first five shot attempts. The Eagles made a statement early with an impressive defensive display: Two blocks and one steal in the first minute of play.

However, once junior Kyle Duncan made the Govs first shot of the game with 18:31 left in the first half, they had no problem finding the net again. The Govs finished the game making 28-of-56 (50 percent) from the field.

Senior Todd Babington landed a 3-pointer that gave the Govs a 10-0 lead at the 16:31 mark. Babington made four of the Govs' six 3-pointers and shot 4-of-11 (36 percent) from three-point range.

The Eagles came within one point of the Govs three times in the first half and tied the game once.

The Govs smashed the 26-26 tie when freshman Caleb Brown swiped the ball and passed it down court to junior Drake Reed who finished the play with a slam dunk. The Govs kept their lead and went into the half up 13 points, 42-29.

"Coming back from the half we worked to correct stupid mistakes," said senior Derek Wright.

The Govs turned up the heat defensively in the second half making seven steals, four blocks and 19 rebounds. They also continued to sink shots, determined not to let Georgia Southern overcome them. Their field goal percentage increased from 44 percent (16-36) in the first half, to 60 percent (12-20) in the second.

Within two minutes of starting the second half, Georgia Southern landed two jumpers and a layup bringing them within seven points of the Govs. But the Eagles did not maintain their offense and found it difficult to gain ground as the Govs stepped up their defensive pressure.

Reed made a layup with 15:50 remaining in the game that capped off a 7-0 run. It also gave the Govs a 14-point lead. Two minutes later, the Dunn Center crowd cheered wildly when senior Fernandez Lockett threw down a slam dunk for another Gov highlight.

As the game wound down, the Eagles shrank their deficit to eight points but would get no closer to the Govs.

Five Eagles players scored double-digit points. Louis Graham led the Eagles with 17 points. Matthew Fields earned a double-double with 16 points and 14 rebounds.

Reed led the Govs with 22 points. Babington added 18 points and Wright scored 14.

Babington and Wright were two of five Gov seniors recognized at halftime for their contributions to the team throughout their careers. The other three were Brandon Harriford, Tomas Janusauskas and Lockett. Loos proudly spoke about the Gov seniors.

"They have contributed a whole lot to this basketball program and the university," Loos said. "We want to try our best to see that they leave with not just a conference championship but a chance to go to the NCAA tournament." ♦

Bat Govs lose home opening series to Crusaders

By MARLON SCOTT

Sports Editor

The APSU Govs opened their season Feb. 23, with a three game series at home against the Valparaiso Crusaders. After splitting the doubleheader Sat., Feb. 23, they dropped game three the next day 11-5, losing the series 1-2.

In game one, the Crusaders produced nine runs in the fifth inning to put away the Govs. They would continue to make contact all afternoon, eventually winning 15-6.

Junior Ryan Mantooth got the start on the mound. He struck out four, walked four and allowed five runs (four earned) on five hits in four innings of pitching. However, it was senior Jeff Lykins, who picked up the loss. He earned four runs and walked four in the top of the fifth inning with no strikeouts.

Offensively, the Govs produced six runs on four hits. Junior Ryan Gilroy led the team going 1-for-3 at the plate for two runs. Conversely, the Crusaders produced 16 hits in the game, nine in the Gov-slaying fifth inning.

The Govs regained their swing in the second game. It took just three innings for them to produce better offensive numbers than those in the first game.

After three, they had already scored six runs from seven hits. Senior Josh Kemph smacked a home run in the third inning with two outs and two teammates on base to make the score 6-2.

The Govs eventually swung themselves to a 12-4 victory. Kemph was one of eight Govs who combined for 12 hits in the game. He finished 2-for-4 at the plate with a homer and three RBIs. Freshman Greg Bachman turned some heads hitting 3-for-5 with two RBIs.

The Crusaders were held to four runs by the combined pitching of sophomore Stephen Huff and freshman Ryne Harper. Huff earned the win with 5.1 innings pitched. Allowing just three runs (two earned) in four hits, he notched seven kills before passing the reigns to Harper.

In his debut as a Gov, Harper threw his way to three kills, one walk and one run from two hits.

The third game remained close until the sixth inning Feb. 24. The Govs were within one run of the Crusaders 5-6 after five innings. But the Crusader pitchers shut down the Govs offense the rest of the game, allowing just three hits and two Govs on base with no runs in the last four innings.

Meanwhile, five runs in the sixth inning were all the Crusaders needed to get the win 11-5. Gov junior pitcher David Vicini picked up the loss. He struck out three, but allowed six runs (three earned) from six hits and walked three.

Lykins returned to the mound to close the game. In 2.2 innings of work he allowed only three hits for no runs. He also had one strikeout and no walks.

Jarad Miller earned the win for Valparaiso, pitching 3.2 innings. He allowed three hits with one run (earned) and one walk.

John Snelton was right behind him with almost identical stats. In 3.1 innings, Snelton earned four runs from four hits and walked two batters with no strikeouts.

Gov senior Raphael Hill led the Govs offensively going 3-for-4 at the plate with one run. Kemph had another good game, batting 2-for-4 with one run.

Western Kentucky came to Raymond C. Hand field to face the Govs Tue., Feb. 26. Today, the Govs play their first road game in Knoxville, Tenn., against the Volunteers. Next, they get a chance for payback against Valparaiso who comes back to town Fri., Feb. 29. ♦

Lady Govs win one at Mercer Wingate Inn Classic

By MARLON SCOTT

Sports Editor

Originally slated to open the season at home in a doubleheader against Kentucky Wesleyan, the APSU Lady Govs softball team were forced to wait and play on the road because of inclement weather. On Sat., Feb. 23, they played their first game of the season in Macon, Ga., in the Mercer/Wingate Inn Classic against Nicholls State.

Before the weather caught up to them again and cancelled their last game Sun., Feb. 24, against Western Kentucky, the Lady Govs went 1-2, losing to Nicholls State and Mississippi State before defeating Mercer 7-6.

Nicholls State 2, Lady Govs 1

In their first game of the season, the Lady Govs' bats were as cold as the weather that cancelled their first game. They generated only one run from one hit in the game. In the fifth inning, third baseman Ashley Taylor smacked a RBI double into left center scoring Beth Carr, who was walked at the top of the inning.

Nicholls State's Lace Gros kept the Lady Govs pinned down for seven innings. She struck out four and walked six.

Ashley Elrod pitched six innings for the Lady Govs, allowing three hits and two runs. She picked up two earned runs while striking out three and walking three.

Mississippi State 12, Lady Govs 4

Lady Govs pitcher Meagan Williams was lit up by Mississippi State batters in the second game Sat., Feb. 23. In just over five innings pitching she struck out one, walked four and earned 12 runs as the Mississippi State players made contact early and often in the game.

Ali Bainbridge started the chain reaction with a single up the middle at the top of the second inning. She scored when Gina McCloud hit a RBI double in the gap at left field. By the end of the inning, Mississippi State had scored three runs from four hits.

Williams started a rally with a home run in the fifth inning. Taylor and Carr followed up with hits of their own. The Lady Govs scored three runs from three hits and were behind 5-3. However, wild pitches and two errors gave Mississippi State their best inning. They scored four runs from two hits and two errors. Three more runs in the sixth sealed a convincing win for Mississippi State.

Lady Govs 7, Mercer 6

Down 4-0 against tournament host, Mercer, the Lady Govs scored five runs in the fifth inning to change the momentum of the game Sun., Feb. 24. It was their best hitting performance of the weekend.

Ashley Alverson smacked the ball down the first baseline for a double. Afterwards, Taylor was walked. Next, Brittany Williams reached on a Mercer error, which also advanced Taylor to third and scored Alverson. Taylor scored the second run on a passed ball and Williams advanced to third base on a ground out. After Daniella Hooper was walked, Williams launched her second home run this weekend over the center field fence scoring three more runs.

Mercer scored two runs in the top of the seventh inning to tie the game at six. Williams became the winning run when she doubled down the first baseline. She advanced to scoring position on a sac hit by Tiffany Smith. Two batters later, Elrod hit the ball into the right field gap for an RBI and the game winning score. ♦

PRE GAME WARMUP

Sleep: The relaxing path to good health

Many college students and plenty of adults wish they could get more sleep. It is "Mind and Body Unity week" in the Pre-Game Warmup and we will examine sleep, its benefits and how it works.

Sleep is essential for survival. When we sleep properly, we wake up feeling revitalized, alert and ready to face our day-to-day challenges. The National Sleep Foundation maintains that the optimal amount of sleep for adults is eight to nine hours. Sleep deprivation can affect all of someone's daily activities. Adequate sleep provides benefits including alertness, improved memory and better problem solving skills.

According to sources including WebMD and NCSDR (National Center on Sleep Disorders Research), most sleep deprivation stems from unrecognized sleep disorders. It is essential to consult a physician to help recognize such disorders. There are both short term and long term consequences from lack of sleep.

Maintaining good sleep practices does not involve ignoring that huge pile of homework or reducing a 40-hour workweek. It is about time management. It takes a conscious effort to prioritize sleep.

Short term effects include decreased alertness, memory impairment and stressed relationships. Long term health problems linked to sleep deprivation include high blood pressure, heart attack and stroke. Any of these consequences is worth considering the next time you sacrifice sleep to work or play. Instead consider a regular healthy sleep routine.

Establishing a regular bedtime routine will ease the body into sleep. Use whatever it takes: Music, special scents, extra pillows, etc. These are just a few examples of sleep aids.

Research and consult a physician for more. The key to remember is that getting enough sleep is an important factor to improve your health. Just like regular exercise and a healthy diet, a regular eight to nine sleep cycle can change someone's life dramatically. Grab a blanket, find a pillow and take a nap. Your body will thank you. ♦
