Popular attorney visits campus through conference

by LAURIE ROGERS
staff writer

If you detected unusual levels of activity on campus late last week, you were probably noticing participants of "Winds of Change," the annual conference for women in higher education held Oct. 7 and 8.

Weddington

According to Dr. Linda Rudolph, associate vice president for Planning and Institutional Effectiveness, the conference attracted approximately 260 people.

Rudolph said while the conference was open to everyone, it was directed toward university faculty, staff and administrators.

"Our mission is to encourage women in education to assume leadership roles," Rudolph said. "Each year we meet for networking and developing purposes."

Explaining that the program dealt with issues currently facing higher education, Rudolph added, "We were extremely pleased with the turnout. It was an exciting day."

According to Rudolph, a popular speaker was Sarah Weddington, defense attorney in the Roe vs. Wade abortion case and author of "A Question of Choice." Weddington was brought in to speak on leadership.

"She was excellent," Rudolph commented. "We heard rave reviews after her speech." Rudolph said all 50 of Weddington's books were sold out early in the day. "I think we could have sold 100 or more. Everyone was very impressed by her speech."

Weddington proved to be an engaging speaker, frequently using anecdotes and wry comments to send her audience into gales of laughter.

Throughout her speech, Weddington used the concept of oxygen masks in an airplane as an analogy for opportunities for women.

"I think we are always trying to give oxygen to everybody else," Weddington said. "What I worry about is that we are in danger of running out of our own oxygen. So one of the challenges for me is not just can I figure out what I need to do, but can I find the energy to keep doing it?"

According to Weddington, three ways to obtain more "oxygen" are through laughter, new ideas and interesting people, and the ability to have an impact.

She said it's often one person who can make a difference, and that it's important to remember how far women have come, to avoid getting "bogged down in how tough the winds of change are now."

In one anecdote, Weddington related the difficulty she had as a new lawyer in obtaining her own credit without her husband's signature.

"I thought that because I was supporting the family, my signature should be

Fort Campbell soldier taken prisoner during Somalia battle

from staff reports

Yellow ribbons have popped up around campus and the Clarksville area after a Fort Campbell soldier was taken prisoner during fighting in Somalia Oct. 3-4.

Chief Warrant Officer Michael J. Durant, 32, Clarksville, was taken prisoner after his Black Hawk helicopter was shot down by forces loyal to Somali warlord Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid during the 36-hour battle that left 17 American soldiers dead, including three Fort Campbell soldiers, and over 75 wounded.

According to Monday evening reports, a representative of Aidid in Washington said Durant could be released soon, but the representative also said he had not been in contact with Aidid for three weeks.

Durant is a member of 2nd Battalion, 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment (Airborne), also known as the Night Stalkers, the Army's only special operations aviation unit.

The Night Stalkers fly missions in support of special operations units such as the Army Rangers and Special Forces.

Durant's parents came to Clarksville from Berlin, N.H., after his capture to be with his wife, Lorrie, and his 14-month-old son, Joseph.

Fort Campbell soldiers killed in the fighting have been identified as: Chief Warrant Officer Clifton P. Wolcott, 36, of Hopkinsville, Ky., assigned to 2nd Battalion, 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment (Airborne); Chief Warrant Officer Donovan L. Briley, 33, North Little Rock, Ark., assigned to Company D, 1st Battalion, 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment (Airborne); Sgt. Thomas J. Field, 25, Lisbon, Maine, assigned to D Company, 1st Battalion, 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment (Airborne).

Another Fort Campbell soldier, William David Cleveland Jr., is listed as missing.

The battle occurred during an operation called Operation UNOSOM II which began around 3:45 p.m. Somali time. The operation began when Army Rangers assaulted a hotel and captured two top aides to Aidid and over 20 people affiliated with the Somali National Alliance.

Helicopters were called in to assist in moving the prisoners when American forces were attacked. Two helicopters were shot down and a third made a controlled crash landing.

Somali gunmen surrounded the Rangers and supporting forces, cutting them off, beginning a seven-hour period in which the Rangers waited for a quick reaction force to reach them.

The quick reaction force was held up because of communication problems and a lack of heavily armored vehicles needed to travel the streets of Mogadishu.

Durant was captured after his helicopter was shot down and his face was seen across the country after he was interrogated on film by Somalis.

Peavyhouse sentencing delayed until Nov. 8

From staff reports

The sentencing hearing for former Austin Peay student Lester Peavyhouse was rescheduled because of a death in the family of his attorney.

Peavyhouse was scheduled to be sentenced on Oct. 8, in Montgomery County Circuit Court, but Russel Church, assistant public defender, went out of town the day before the sentencing hearing because of a death in his family.

The new date for the sentencing of Peavyhouse has been set for Nov. 8.

Peavyhouse is facing two life sentences for the Nov. 1, 1991 murders of Billy Hembree and Misty Harding. He was convicted of nine felony counts, including the murder counts and two attempted murder counts.

Judge Robert Wedemeyer will determine at the hearing if Peavyhouse will serve time for his crimes concurrently or consecutively. Wedemeyer's decision will affect Peavyhouse's future possibilities for parole.

Correction

In the Sept. 29 story on the grade-changing policy at Austin Peay, we inadvertently reported that Dr. Dennis Dulniak, director of Records and Registration, was troubled by the dean's council decision not to revise the current policy in use. In fact, Dulniak said he was not troubled by that decision.

Veterans, dependents represent significant percentage of AP population

By ROBERT BROOME
staff writer

Austin Peay has seen a rapid increase in the number of students enrolled in the university in the past few years. One of the fastest growing groups is the veterans and dependents of the United States Armed Forces. While it is not uncommon for colleges to have veterans and dependents attending school, APSU is unique in the university community in how this group affects campus life.

Veterans and dependents of veterans can receive primary support from the Office of Veterans Affairs, located in 224 Ellington. A division of Financial Aid, the Office of Veterans Affairs maintains all required forms for students to apply for their education benefits.

The coordinator of Veteran Affairs, Helen Frazier, is the certifying official for APSU. She is responsible for processing and enrollment certification and notifying the Veterans Administration that the student will be attending or is attending school. Frazier also can set up tutoring for those receiving benefits, as well as a work-study program for those who qualify.

According to Frazier, enrollment of veterans and dependents is on the rise. In Fall 1992, 658 students attended the Fort Campbell Center and APSU. Figures for Fall 1993 indicate that 842 students are attending the FCC and APSU. The enrollment figure for 1993 does not include the Fall II quarter at the FCC, which could push the total to over 1,000 students.

Austin Peay's Fort Campbell Center serves the military installation and also is open to the public. It is primarily a two-year institution, but does offer a bachelor's degree in public management with concentrations in several other fields.

The center is also a member of the Servicemember Opportunity Colleges, a group of over 400 universities and colleges.

On campus, veterans also make their presence known through the Veterans Service Organization, a registered student organization not affiliated with Veterans Affairs.

Membership in the VSO is open to all active duty members or veterans of the armed services, as well as any student who has an interest in the organization.

When asked how the VSO affected student life at APSU, Alan West, president of the VSO, responded, "We supplement the campus. We bring a different dimension to the school that other schools don't receive." A political science major, West said, "I can offer a different

Researchers warn students about drinking game dangers

By College Press Service

POTSDAM, N.Y.— Chug-a-lug and other drinking games are not as harmless as college students think, warn two researchers in a recently published study.

Nearly 4,000 alcohol-consuming students from American colleges and universities were surveyed about the games they play when drinking. The study was done by David Hanson, a professor of sociology at Potsdam College of the State University of New York, and Ruth Engs, professor of applied health sciences at Indiana University at Fort Wayne, Ind.

While students who identified themselves as "light" or "moderate" drinkers experienced few alcohol-related problems, those who played a drinking game within the preceding year significantly increased the probability of negative consequences in 15 of 17 drinking-related behaviors, the report says.

The behaviors included missing classes, getting lower grades, trouble with the law, violent behavior and property damage.

More than twice as many game players as non-game players experienced difficulties in most categories, as driving while drinking. Twice the number of game players as non-game players also had fears that they may be alcoholics.

Chug-a-lug contests, which identify winners by the person who consumes the most alcohol in a time period, "quarters," a game that involves flipping a quarter into a mug of beer to designate the person who has to drink the contents, were identified as two popular drinking games.

Hanson and Engs stated that drinking game behavior should receive greater attention from campus alcohol prevention programs and messages. The researchers concluded, however, that messages stressing abstinence from drinking have not proved to be effective among college students.

"Light" and "moderate" drinkers were defined in the study as those who drank no more than three drinks no more than once a week, or five or more drinks no more than once a month. "Heavy" drinkers were defined in the study as those who drank more than three drinks at any one sitting once a week or more.

viewpoint on world affairs because I've actually been there in places we talk about." West thinks political science can carry over into other subjects as well.

There are a number of benefits to membership in the VSO, according to West. Included among them are seminars on resume preparation for civilian employment and how to dress for a job interview. The VSO also offers free tutoring programs, social activities and participation in beneficial civic actions.

"First and foremost, the VSO offers support," Elaine Horn, adviser to the VSO. "There are many adjustments to make from life in the service to civilian life, and the VSO helps make that transition easier."

According to West and Horn, APSU has not done much in the past to recognize veterans on Veterans Day. "We were finally able to convince the administration to recognize the veterans on this campus this year," said. This year, "The VSO, along with the ROTC, raised the colors that morning (Nov. 11) as a POW-MIA flag," West said. Next year, Veterans Day will be a recognized holiday of the school, and there will be classes on that Friday.

"I invite anyone who has an interest in what we do for," West said.

significant," she recalled. "But they didn't care what I thought. So I ran for the Texas legislature, passed an equal credit bill, and then came back and got my credit."

In another anecdote, Weddington used her attempt to learn to snow ski as an example of her belief that women tend to hold themselves back because they have a need to be perfect.

Describing how proud she had been of getting to the bottom of a hill without falling, she recalled her instructor telling her, "Well, then Public outrage after seeing another unidentified soldier's remains being dragged through the streets of Mogadishu prompted congressmen across the country to call on President Clinton to set a withdrawal date for American forces in Somalia.

Clinton has said all troops will be pulled out by the end of March, but you're never going to be good, because the only ones who are ever good are those who are willing to go a little faster than they know how to control, and who, when they fall, have learned how to get up."

Weddington said she now understands that if people only do what they can do perfectly, they will never do as much.

In concluding her speech, Weddington urged her audience to look for sources of "oxygen," moments of laughter and "moments when you can be most effective in change."

She said women may not be perfect, but they have achieved a great deal; and although they have come a long way, they still have a long way to go.

Somalia photos stir emotions of military town

Somalia. It's on everyone's mind, and with good reason. Thousands of families are waiting to hear news of whether their spouse or parent will be among the next sent to the African nation.

In Clarksville and Montgomery County, feelings are particularly intense, since it is so close to home.

Though the entire nation cringed in horror at the thought of an American hostage in Somalia, local residents felt the pain much more when they realized that it was a Fort Campbell soldier and husband of a local elementary school teacher who was being held captive.

They were also angered to see the photographs on the front page of the Leaf-Chronicle, which showed the badly beaten hostage and another picture of a dead American soldier whose naked body had been dragged through the streets of Mogadishu.

Since the photos were published, letters have been pouring into the paper, berating editors for the photographs, which many considered in poor taste. Some subscribers have cancelled their contracts in protest of the photographs.

Those are harsh steps for a resident to take against its only source of local news, particularly when all the elements are taken into consideration.

True, the pictures are disturbing, and perhaps, the Leaf-Chronicle should not have printed the photos, in consideration of the area in which it covers.

Easily, the family of that dead soldier could be a member of this community and deserves to be spared that continuing pain.

However, take into consideration the time frame that the newspaper deals with. Split-second decisions must be made, and if a photo comes over the Associated Press wire that accurately describes the mayhem in the streets of Mogadishu, wouldn't you want to publish it?

Television stations nationwide, broadcast the photos, live, with little criticism. Why is it that newspapers are expected to be more civilized, yet more in-depth?

While being in a rush isn't an excuse for hurting someone, and it can't be taken back, falling into the trap of not publishing pictures that might disturb someone is a dangerous trend. Photos have the ability to impress truths upon people that are hard to express with mere words.

Increasing links to children and violence mean society must listen to their pleas

Oct. 1, 1993—21-year-old Fort Campbell soldier, shot in the chest 3 times while trying to leave local nightclub.

Oct. 3, 1993—21-year-old Clarksville man shot once in the chest, while standing in a local parking lot.

Oct. 3, 1993—18-year-old Kentuckian dies after being struck on the face and head numerous times.

Two teenagers, age 17 and 15, are being charged for the murder.

By BONITA WHITE
Staff writer

Senseless, is the only word that comes to mind when describing the horrific wave of violence sweeping Clarksville and neighboring areas.

Lives are being disrupted or taken at the drop of a hat.

And for what? In the Oct. 1 shooting, the incident was started because a young lady refused to dance. Have we gone mad?

Have we lost all sense of dignity and pride? I sincerely believe we have, and the present state of our own community supports this claim.

We all live in a society that claims to embrace love and mercy. But, in every corner of the world, there is a troubled child, reaching out for help, that exposes us for the frauds we are.

From my work with children, I discovered two things: Children are hurting, and no one cares. These children are growing up to commit the most heinous of crimes to the society that turned a deaf ear on their pleas for help.

The thousands of lives that have been taken can never be returned, happiness once shared can never be restored, but future tragedies of the same sort can be prevented.

In the community, we must all start working in positive ways with disturbed youth, who are trying to be heard.

There are hundreds of organizations, Big Brothers/Big

We have lost respect for ourselves and others, and we have eliminated the desire within us to be kind and show kindness, due to hatred and ignorance.

Sisters, for example, that try to provide futures for troubled youth. All that is missing are positive role models. Unfortunately, there are still children waiting for someone to care.

The world is in a sad, self-destructive state and human beings are slowly laying claim to the same title. We have lost self-respect for ourselves and others, and we have eliminated the desire within us to be kind and show kindness, due to hatred and ignorance.

The millions of men and women populating our prisons today received, in youth, a healthy dosage of this attitude. There is no sympathy for the murderer, rapist or molester, but there can be sympathy for the child that could have been.

Worth Repeating...

"The scientific evidence is now clear. Moderate alcohol use can extend life."

--from a pamphlet published by the American Council on Science and Health

"The president's upstairs having a drink and a cigar and will make that decision shortly."

Cultural center advocate says action key element

Dear Editor,

My suggestion to any ethnic group who feels that they should be a part of the African American Cultural Center:

Form committees and begin the struggle to get what you want. Anything worth having is worth working for.

I will not apologize for not being able to reflect an image of a Native American, an Asian, a Hispanic or a European through my actions. I will not apologize for being proud of myself, my ancestors or my heritage.

I would also like to add that African Americans must be doing something right.

I will not apologize for being proud of myself, my ancestors, or my heritage.

Everyone jumps our bandwagon when we do something worthwhile. We were given 28 days out of the year to celebrate our heritage. Now, there is Women's History Month and Hispanic History Month.

Even on this campus, when the African Americans received the African American Resource Center, a Women's Resource Center was created.

My question is, if there is no racism within this institution, why do others get offended when the African Americans demand equality? It seems to me others would be joining in to help the cause or offering their support to a group of courageous young men and women.

Please understand that we fought and struggled for an A.A.C.C. and we will die before we give up our only oasis of solitude on this campus.

IF WE MUST DIE

*If we must die, let it not be like hogs
Hunted and penned in an inglorious spot
While round us bark the mad and hungry dogs,
Making their mock at our accursed lot.
If we must die, O let us nobly die,
So that our precious blood may not be shed
In vain; then even the monsters we defy
Shall be constrained to honor us though dead!
O kinsmen! We must meet the common foe!
Though far outnumbered let us show us
brave,
And for their thousand blows deal one deathblow!*

What though before us lies the open grave?

*Like men we'll face the murderous,
cowardly pack,*

Pressed to the wall dying, but fighting back!

Xenophobic attitude causes student concern

Dear Editor:

Slavery is a part of every society on earth. For the majority, a part of their past. To take the dust of the past and lay it at one door, then imply that one person's opinion is to be held responsible for what happened over a hundred years ago, is based on faulty thinking.

That one could demean another just because that individual does not comply with their precepts by the way they act, look or dress, makes me worry, especially if they are condescending about another person's thoughts and beliefs. Imagine, a person who is condescending can be in a capacity to audit your tax records. Nurses, doctors and judges also have jurisdiction in what is done with another's life.

To blame the son for the father's sins has always been one of mankind's failings—even if they're not related. Did you know in 1830 records show that 3,775 free blacks owned 12,760 black slaves? It was so much easier to pay the locals of the gold coast to impress the tribes of the inner continent into slavery. Slavery was not racial, it was equal opportunity.

I have noticed that many departments and organizations (actually people in general) have a slight xenophobic attitude toward what is different. Some complain to themselves that they are not getting adequate representation in The All State, so they boycott the paper. I ask you, how can you boycott something that is not paying attention to you anyway? That's like saying: "If they ignore us we'll ignore them and they'll be sorry." If you close yourself off, no one will know of you.

LifeChoices offers more than humanism to APSU

Dear Editor:

O.K. quiz time boys and girls, what one book has been misquoted, misunderstood, and misinterpreted more often than any other book in history? Times up, it's the Holy Bible.

People have taken the scriptures in the Bible, twisted them to prove a point and taken them out of their true context for years. In my experience, when this happens, Christians get upset and riled, myself included.

In the same way, Ms. Joy Davis has twisted something good to prove her point. She claims that LifeChoices is rooted in humanism. Ms. Davis uses a phrase off a poster found in the office that states: "I am me, therefore I can engineer me. I am me and I am o.k."—and tells us that this phrase puts man in a higher position than God.

HELLO! Sure it means that, and if you distort it enough it could mean that I have fungus growing on my big toes. The phrase actually means that I am an individual and I can do my own thing without others telling me what to do or being persuaded by peer pressure.

She also talks about separation of church and state. As a college student, Ms. Davis should know by now that you research before you write. If she had, she would have found that the term "separation of church and state" does not mean what she indicated.

Our forefathers came to escape religious persecution. They founded a Christian country where the church would run the state but not vice-versa. In fear of the state telling the church what to do, they instituted "separation of church and state."

LifeChoices is an awesome addition to this school. It offers a variety of programs that assist students in their personal growth and development, such as Fitness Week, Alcohol AwarenessWeek and Stage Left, which is open Thursday nights from 9 p.m. till 2 a.m. in Clement Auditorium. And, it has given the awesome theatre group, Blah... Blah... Blah, a chance to perform.

NEA deserves funding without defining 'art'

Dear Editor:

As an art student, I would like to submit this letter in response to Mr. Timothy Prather's "opinion" regarding the National Endowment for the Arts and in support of public funding for the arts. I will not comment on the specific work Mr. Prather took offense with, not because I think it is unjustifiable, but because I believe it is unfair to pass judgment on another artist's work without seeing it or investigating the artist's intentions.

If Mr. Prather has viewed this work, listened to what the artist's intentions were in doing this work and then wishes to disagree with the artist, I say "great"—at least the work has provoked some thought.

The real issue here is, as Mr. Prather asks,

"Should the federal government fund art?" I think most people would agree the answer is "yes." In the results of one poll, the majority of those polled said they would be willing to pay an extra $5 a year in taxes to support the arts (the average taxpayer now pays about 69 cents per year).

Mr. Prather said that in the "appreciation" classes the teachers "have a difficult time deciding on a concise definition of art." That's because there is none, nor should there be any. Art is abstract, even in its most representational forms, and must be understood in the abstract. One definition cannot fit all.

Mr. Prather states that "most people believe that art that is subsidized must benefit the community." With this I can agree, then he goes on to equate that "benefit" with "entertaining." Is it conceivable that Michelangelo's "David" or Van Gogh's "Starry Night" are simply "entertaining"? I equate benefit with entertainment relegating the "Mona Lisa" to being another pretty picture. Clearly there must be more to art than entertainment.

Finally, Mr. Prather states, "government should not fund art that is offensive to the majority." The NEA has tried in the past to enact such a policy and it was challenged and overturned in court.

The First Amendment, the right to free speech, entails that the government cannot discriminate against the minority because the majority doesn't like what they have to see. The Bolsheviks censored art, Hitler censored art, I don't think we in this country want to be in that company.

Smokers need to give consideration to campus

Dear Editor:

During the past year in which I have attended APSU, I have been appalled at smokers throwing their cigarette butts on the ground. After the state (or the taxpayers) have given us this beautiful facility to enlighten our minds, how could anyone destroy it? Evidently some can, since there are hundreds of butts in front of the library alone!

I hope this letter will encourage smokers to put their cigarettes out in ashtrays rather than under foot. This will allow the beauty of the Creator intended to shine through. The campus is not a refuse heap. Let's keep it clean.

Schedule awaits FSU on road to destiny, first-ever top finish

By BYRON SHIVE
sports editor

After an impressive 28-10 thrashing of Miami, the Florida State Seminoles have passed their first hurdle on their way to an elusive national championship. It has widely been stated that this is the Seminoles' year, but destiny doesn't have to play the Seminoles' schedule!

With three unbeaten teams left to play, two of them on the road, it won't be easy for Bobby Bowden's bunch. However, if the Seminoles roll through unbeaten and win the school's first gridiron title, they will be the first "true" national champion in a long time.

What I'm saying is that if Florida State goes unbeaten against the likes of Miami, Notre Dame, Florida and potentially unbeaten Alabama in the Sugar Bowl, not to mention North Carolina and Clemson, then the Seminoles will have earned their title against arguably the nation's toughest schedule.

After a home match-up against Virginia on Saturday, the Seminoles get the next two weeks off (they play Wake Forest and Maryland!) before heading into South Bend, Ind., to play Notre Dame, a game that should feature two unbeaten highly-ranked teams.

Following North Carolina State at home, FSU must travel into "The Swamp" to play Florida, who is on an unbeaten collision course with the Seminoles. The Gators haven't been beaten at home under Steve Spurrier yet, so this could be the Seminoles' undoing.

It has been a hectic year for pollsters, with Florida State and, perhaps, Alabama, the only two "definites" in the poll.

Consider this: Entering last weekend's competition, 16 of the AP Top 20 were unbeaten! After the weekend's action, 12 teams still stand unscathed, and three of the teams that lost for the first time lost to unbeaten teams (Miami, California and Louisville).

Yes, I'm aware that only about eight unbeaten teams are legit, with the others benefitting from creampuff schedules, but it's still unusual to have so many unbeaten teams half-way through the season.

As the saying goes, "If you ain't the lead dog, the view never changes!" Well, all the rest of Division I has seen this year is Florida State's high-scoring, stingy defense-having tail!

Florida State's defense, ranked fourth overall but tops in the nation in points allowed, has scored more touchdowns off turnovers (4) than they've given up (3). The opposition has finally scored as many touchdowns as Derrick Brooks, the 'Noles All-American linebacker Heisman candidate.

What other team in the nation has a quarterback who has virtually cleared a space on the mantel for the Heisman Trophy already, plus a linebacker who has a legitimate claim to the title?

Florida State's toughest game ahead lies above the eyes and below the top of the head: the mental game.

They've beaten their old nemesis already and they've got one of the best teams in college football history, so regardless of the schedule ahead, they just need to sense the title. The victory over the Hurricanes just opened the ol' nostrils!

My one wish is that Scott Bentley, the Seminoles' highly-touted freshman kicker who was booting 35-yard field goals in fourth grade, gets the chance to win the Notre Dame game Nov. 13 with a field goal—that's if the Irish are still in it at the end!

It seems that Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz verbally thrashed Bentley over the phone following his announcement to attend FSU, saying that he had let down the Irish and had lied in the process! Need a Kleenex, Lou?

Even though this column is mainly about Florida State and their upcoming schedule, how can Purdue score 56 points and lose?!? Or, how can Minnesota give up 56 points and win?!?

Back to the order of business, an Alabama fan recently told me that there are two things you can count on every year: Miami beating Florida State and Tennessee losing to Alabama.

Florida State 28, Miami 10.
Watch out 'Bama!

Falcons defeat Black, 8-6

Killebrew captures first title

By BYRON SHIVE
sports editor

After knocking off two other teams from the Greek league, the Killebrew Falcons completed their sweep of the top three seeds in the rival division with an 8-6 win over Sigma Chi Black in the championship game of men's intramural flag football competition last Thursday.

After a scoreless first half, the Falcons got on the board first on the first play of the second half when the opening snap for Sigma Chi sailed into the endzone for a safety.

The Falcons then drove down the field to score the game's first touchdown to lead 8-0.

Sigma Chi Black answered with a touchdown of their own, but forced to go for two for the tie, were unsuccessful.

As irony would have it, the Sigma Chi's would get another chance to avenge the decisive safety with the final four plays of the game.

After the first two plays, Black went to its three-quarterback set to buy more time to throw. However, a Falcon interception ended the game and Sigma Chi Black's bid to repeat as champions.

In the semifinals, the Falcons upset unbeaten Pike Garnet on a controversial play to end regulation. Trailing 18-12, Killebrew lofted the ball to the back of the endzone, where a Falcon player, who appeared to be out-of-bounds, tipped the ball back to a waiting teammate for the game's tying touchdown. The Falcons then added the winning extra point to seal Garnet's fate.

In the other semifinal, Sigma Chi Black avenged an earlier loss to the Kappa Sigma Gators with a 27-12 win. The game was never in doubt for Black, who had a three-touchdown cushion at one point.

Let Jordan retire in peace!

By DARREN JERNIGAN
guest writer

Can anyone tell me why in the world everyone is in hysteria over the departure of Michael Jordan from the NBA?

The man took a ball and tossed it through a hoop. Don't get me wrong, I'll be the first person to agree that he was the greatest athlete to ever play the game, but this whole retirement thing is too much.

As far as I'm concerned, the earth still revolves on its axis, I still have to pay rent at the end of the month, and still no one has any idea what Hillary's health care plan is about.

The front page of USA Today on the morning of Jordan's retirement had number 23 splashed all over, while a very small lead at the bottom of the page reported that two of our boys in Somalia are dead. What's going on here?

It's Michael who I truly feel sorry for. This guy has been through a hell of a lot.

We forget that we put Jordan in the limelight that he's in today. The dam finally cracked.

Jordan was quoted as saying, "It's nice to be Michael Jordan for a day, but not every day." The man has a lot he would like to do without society watching over his shoulder.

I can imagine the kids are pretty upset at their idle for quitting the game, but in the words of Pat O'Brien, "You can ask your dad to play a game, you can ask your dad to take you to the mall, you can ask your dad just to hang out for a while, or even ask your dad to help with your homework."

Give the man his life back without us checking up on it. The game has given a great deal to Michael Jordan, and he has given equally as much back.

They say if you love something set it free, if it comes back... well who knows.

The Economics of the Citibank Classic Visa card. How Student Discounts and Price Protection contribute to upward growth.

A variety of factors have been suggested as contributing to the economic growth of students, including (1) more lottery winners between the ages of 18 and 22, (2) a 37% increase on earnings from bottle and can returns, (3) more students doubling earnings in the lightning round of game shows, and (4) the Citibank Classic Visa® card. It's this last one, however, that affects most students. ¶ The Citibank Classic Visa card offers immediate savings to student cardmembers. You can save up to 26% on long distance calls versus AT&T with the free Citibank Calling Service™ from MCI! And you can capitalize on a $20 Airfare Discount

No known picture of Washington smiling exists. Economists believe Washington was unhappy because he felt he could have received a better deal on war supplies. If he used a Citibank Classic Visa card, he would have been assured of getting the best price and probably would have been happier (Artist rendering of how he would have appeared on the dollar).

for domestic flights.² Savings on mail order purchases, sports equipment, magazines and music also abound. Maximize these savings with a low variable interest rate of 15.4%³ and no annual fee, and you can significantly improve your personal bottom line (especially if one's net income tends to be pretty gross). Put another way, one might even have enough savings to reinvest in a CD or two (the musical kind, of course). ¶ On the way to the record store, or any store for that matter, take stock of the 3 services concerned with purchases made on the Citibank Classic card. Citibank Price Protection assures one of the best prices. See the same item advertised in print for less, within 60 days, and Citibank will refund the difference up to $150.⁴ To protect these investments, Buyers Security™ can cover them against accidental damage, fire or theft (ordinarily causes for Great Depressions) for 90 days from the date of purchase.⁴ And Citibank Lifetime Warranty™ can extend the expected service life of eligible products up to 12 years.⁵ ¶ But perhaps the features which offer the best protection are your eyes, your nose, your mouth, etc.—all featured on The Photocard, the credit card with your photo on it. Carrying it can help prevent fraud or any hostile takeover of your card. (Insiders speculate that it makes quite a good student ID, too.) Even if one's card is stolen, or perhaps lost, The Lost Wallet™ Service can replace your card usually within 24 hours. ¶ So never panic. As we all know, panic, such as in the Great Panics of 1837, 1857, and 1929, can cause a downswing in a market. But with 24-hour Customer Service, there's no reason for it. A question about your account is only an 800 number away. (Panic of the sort experienced the night before Finals is something else again.) ¶ Needless to say, building a credit history with the support of such services can only be a boost. You're investing in futures—that future house, that future car, etc. And knowing the Citibank Classic Visa card is there in your wallet should presently give you a sense of security, rare in today's—how shall we say?—fickle market. ¶ To apply, call. Students don't need a job or a cosigner. And call if you'd simply like your photo added to your regular Citibank Classic Visa card. Here's the number: 1-800-CITIBANK, extension 19. ¶ The Law of Student Supply and Demand states, "If a credit card satisfies more of a student's unlimited wants and needs, while reducing the Risk Factor in respect to limited and often scarce resources—with the greatest supply of services and savings possible—then students will demand said credit card." So, demand away—call.

Monarch Notes® Version:

New leadership program emphasizes practical skills, hands-on experience for all students

By DARCY HARTZ
Features editor

Born leaders? There's no such thing. FDR, Gandhi and Martin Luther King all had to learn certain skills enabling them to motivate people and make a difference in society. Now, there is a new program at Austin Peay designed to help any student develop those leadership skills.

APPLE, Austin Peay Leadership Experience, is the brain-child of Andy Kean, director of Student Activities. It grew out of his concern that there was not a consistent leadership program for all students. Over the summer Student Activities and Life Choices developed a two-year leadership program which will train participants in skills important for functioning in society.

"We don't necessarily want people who are current leaders. We want people who just came to campus or are not actively involved and would like to develop these skills," Kean said.

The program is not just leadership training, but a means of becoming more effective in all areas of life. It is unlike other leadership programs in that it emphasizes applying leadership skills to present situations, and participants can use the results of their experiences and further develop those skills.

APPLE will explore team building, critical thinking, problem solving, motivation and understanding the self through four main "cores" of success.

APPLE

Austin Peay Leadership Experience

The first core, self and others, will help participants learn about their own values and skills and gain a better understanding of themselves as a whole.

"The more we understand who we are, the more effective we become in interacting with other people," Kean said.

Groups and organizations will be the second emphasis. Participants will learn how to be leaders on campus, in the community and in the job market.

The third core teaches practical skills necessary to train others. Public speaking, workshop development and the philosophies of leadership will be examined and students will apply that knowledge with hands-on experience.

APPLE is a unique program to Austin Peay and Kean hopes that it will grow each year. With a two-year program, students can learn about leadership and get hands-on experience through the program and then have two years left to implement the skills that they learn.

Finally, APPLE looks to be an ongoing experience where participants will actually lead workshops on campus and in the community and put their leadership skills to work.

"We want to teach people more about themselves and that's what leadership is all about."

The first APPLE group will consist of 25 students selected through an application and interview process. An interest meeting will be held at 3 p.m. Oct. 18.

APSU alum, Juilliard grad returns to direct playhouse season opener

By DARRELL SPARKMAN AND CHAD WILLIAMSON
Guest writers

Juilliard. The word itself conjures up images of prima ballerinas, musical geniuses and child prodigies. However, it also evokes images of struggling young actors trying to make it in the real world.

It's hard to imagine anyone as an undergraduate at the university level simply being "discovered" by someone of the theatrical stature of internationally-acclaimed American playwright Arthur Kopit. Yet that was precisely what happened to Austin Peay alumnus and Juilliard graduate David Alford.

RHEARSING A SCENE - Marsha Tolbert and Rob Waltz rehearse for "The Importance of Being Earnest" which opens tonight. (photo by Barry Jones)

Alford will be returning to Austin Peay to direct AP Playhouse's season opener, "The Importance of Being Earnest." The production will run Oct. 13-17.

Having grown up in Adams, Alford came to Austin Peay after attending Martin Methodist College in Pulaski. He initially intended to major in music, but soon changed his mind and major to theater after discovering his talent for acting.

At the time, Kopit was in residence as occupant on the Acuff Chair of Excellence for the Center for the Creative Arts, working on a project that dealt with the Bell Witch variations. Being from Adams, Alford not only was knowledgeable about the subject, but also eager to be involved.

During his semester residency at APSU, Kopit recognized and believed that Alford had a talent for acting. Because he was a senior at that time, Kopit encouraged him to seek further theater training elsewhere. It was then that Kopit arranged for Alford to meet and audition for representatives of The Juilliard School in New York City. Not exactly sure of what awaited him there, Alford flew to New York for an audition and was notified of his acceptance into Juilliard that same day.

For the next years, Alford attended Juilliard not really understanding everything that went into acting. In fact, he even found himself wondering what they could possibly teach him about acting for such a long length of time.

He would soon find out. During his stay at Juilliard, Alford took classes in voice, singing, moving, stage combat and makeup, just to name a few.

When asked about his experience at Austin Peay as compared to his training at Juilliard, Alford says, "Just because we're in Tennessee, just because we're in the South, does not mean that we have to have the attitude that we are not good enough or will never be as good as the New York theater. It's bogus and ridiculous. If you can continue to get people of Kopit's stature to come here, you can do it all the time."

Since his graduation from The Juilliard School in 1991, Alford has worked with such playwrights as Simon Gray and Caryl Churchill, along with directors Mark L. Amos, Daniel Sullivan and Lisa Peterson, who received an Obie Award for directing.

Directing his first college production, Alford found himself in a different role from any in which he had ever acted. He states, "I'm wearing many different hats this time. I'm doing interviews; I'm the dialect coach; I'm making suggestions about design, costumes and sound. Working in professional theater, there's a different person to do every different job. But I love it. I love getting my finger into every little pie. I think it actually helps the cohesiveness of the production. But it's fun; I'm having a lot of fun."

"Besides, it's nice to come back to the place where I decided to embark on my career," Alford stated nostalgically. "I feel very comfortable here. Since this is the biggest technical production I've ever directed and a period piece, it's nice to be in such familiar surroundings."

When Alfred first entered Juilliard, achieving fame was his main goal. However, he soon realized that aside from the financial security, fame was not as important to him as he had once thought.

He did feel strongly, though, about the preconceived notion that the South has an artistic inferiority complex, particularly concerning theater.

One incident that made Alford aware of this situation was the notoriety he received when he was accepted to The Juilliard School. One newspaper did a feature story making his acceptance seem like an escape from an otherwise culturally-deprived area. However, nothing could be farther from the truth, Alford states.

How does he feel about the future of theater in the South? Alford states, "There's no reason for us to be lagging behind in self-esteem or artistic credibility. All we have to do is take the bull by the horns."

Performances are Oct. 13-17 at 8 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, with a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday. General admission is $5, students $3. Tickets are on sale at the theater box office from 2-5:30 p.m. through Friday. For more information or reservations, telephone 648-7379.
