Mrs. Russell To Teach Psychology

Mrs. Frances Russell has been appointed temporary instructor of psychology due to the resignation of Dr. Sam Salter who left to write a book on parent education for the Rogers Foundation of Houston, Texas.

Mrs. Russell, whose home is in Nashville, is at Austin Peay on a six month basis.

She is married to a Nashville chemist and has two children. Mrs. Russell did her undergraduate work at the University of North Carolina. She received her B. A. in English from U. C. and her B. S. in Library Science from U. C. Her M. A. from Peabody is in counseling and guidance.

She worked the past year in special education at Peabody studying language development in pre-school children. She has also worked as reference librarian at U. C.

Broadway To Come To AP Campus

"The Moon is Blue," the Broadway smash hit, will be presented by the Austin Peay Drama Department, January 29 and 30, under the direction of John Griffin.

The sophisticated comedy is all about an innocent little girl by the name of Patty O'Neal who is played by Joyce Pardue. But, according to the script, the very innocence that gets you in trouble will get you out.

Don Alsop plays the part of David Sladen, a worldly playboy who has too much money and a yen for pretty young girls.

Mr. Average Guy," Don Graham, is played by Mike Howell. The only thing he has in common with David is his admiration for Patty.

George Milan comes in as Patty's father and when he leaves the stage, Don will be a little down on him - literally speaking. This subtle and surprising comedy will have 8:00 as its curtain time and tickets will go on sale soon.

Dean Woodward Attends Meetings

Dean F. G. Woodward recently attended two conferences as a delegate.

The first conference was the first annual Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in Richmond Va., December 3-5.

The meeting was attended by representative members only. The purpose was to discuss educational problems that are of concern to the member institutions. The attendance was about 1900 which consisted of presidents, deans, and administrative officers of institutions of higher education and principals, superintendents of public and private schools.

The meeting was broken down to sectional meetings to fit the interests of the different representatives.

Mr. Woodward attended the general meeting and the division on "Counseling of Academic Deans," "Section for Admission Officers and Registrars," and the "Southern Council on Teacher Education."

The second conference was the regular meeting of the Preparation on Secondary School Teachers in Louisville, December 9-10.

The meeting was sponsored by the American Council on Education and was composed of representatives from liberal arts colleges, universities (public and private), and state colleges, all of whom are engaged in the preparation of secondary school teachers.

Forty-five people from four, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, and Tennessee, attended the meeting. Each person was invited and was chosen because of the position the person held and the type of institution that was represented.

Dean Woodward's speech at the meeting was concerned with harmonizing the thinking of the teachers of liberal arts and the teachers of professional education about the preparation program of the secondary teachers and bringing better mutual understanding.

Superlatives Presented at Dance

Library Staff Has New Member

Mrs. Sarah Morrow, former head librarian at APSC, has recently been re-appointed to the professional library staff after a 22 year absence.

The first librarian for 7 years that Austin Peay ever had, Mrs. Morrow, is now serving in the capacity as assistant librarian, her appointment being in effect since January 2.

Mrs. Morrow explained her 22 years absence from Austin Peay as being due to the fact that her husband, who is just recently deceased, had to travel on his job.

The last five years she has served as librarian in a Hamilton County school. In the time between 1925, the year she graduated from Southwestern, and 1929 the year she received her Library Science degree, Mrs. Morrow taught at the Moultrie, Georgia, High School.

Miss Givens Heads College Library

Miss Johanne Givens, a 1946 graduate of Austin Peay, was appointed Head Librarian of Austin Peay State as of January 1, 1958.

The appointment was of a rather unique nature in that Miss Givens is the first graduate of Austin Peay State College to serve as head librarian.

Of course, being the head of a library such as APSC's entails certain requirements, and Miss Givens satisfies these requirements and then some.

With a major in English, she received her B. S. degree from Austin Peay in 1946 and then proceeded to acquire her B. S. degree in Library Science from Peabody. Following Peabody, Miss Givens completed the necessary requirements for a M. A. degree at the Graduate Library School, University of Chicago, with the exception of her thesis.

Miss Givens has had quite a lot of variety in experience in library work, starting at exactly 1:00 p.m. on the day registered as a freshman at APSC in 1942. The first two years she worked as student assistant; she was appointed full time student assistant librarian in June 1944, all the time working 40 hours a week completing her college work; and finally, she was appointed full time assistant librarian on the professional staff in September, 1946. She has also worked as acting order librarian at Peabody and as an assistant in the reserve room at Harper Library in Chicago.

Miss Givens' professional activities include membership in the N.E.A., T.E.A., M.T.E.A., A.L.A., S.L.A., and the T.L.A.

In 1955-56, she was the secretary to the college and university section of the T.L.S. In 1956-57 she was chairman of the college and university section of the T.L.S. At present, she is a member of the recruiting committee for the T.L.A.

Superlatives Chosen By Student Body

Each year the student body of Austin Peay chooses from its members the most outstanding students. They are chosen for beauty, service to the school, leadership, personality, and scholastic ability.

December 4, 1957, at the Christmas Dance, the names of the winning candidates for the superlative honors were announced.

Janell Crain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orman Crain of Dover, was chosen First Lady. Janell is a senior business and physical education major. She is a member of the Business Club, P. E. Club, and majorettes. She is the secretary-treasurer of the band, president of the Girls' Dorm and was the junior class queen last year.

The Governor was announced as Bill Cobb, son of Mrs. S. V. Cobb. He is an English major. Bill is a member of the Circle "K" Club and is a veteran.

Anne Allen, Miss APSC, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Allen of Chapmanboro. Ann is a sophomore and she was the sophomore class queen. She is a physical education and health major and is a member of the MSM, Government, and is president of the Beta Club.

Bachelor of Ughness was announced to be Don Alsop, junior distributive English major. Don is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Alsop of Lebanon and a veteran. He is a disc jockey on WDXN Radio and a member of the Dorm Council, Circle "K" Club, and president of the Student Body.

Jo Ann Crockarell, Iris Queen, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Crockarell of Dover. She is a sophomore. She is a member of the band, secretary-treasurer of the sophomore class, secretary of the MENSC, and president of the Beta Club. Jo Anne was a Valentine Queen attendant and is a majorette.

Use The Walks

One of the most striking features of the Austin Peay campus, or any other campus, is the grounds. This is composed not only of the general landscape, but of the very smallest details that make up an attractive campus. It is of these details that we are concerned.

Unintentional carelessness of students on campus can do more damage to the grounds than can be imagined.

A short cut across the grass soon can become a fixed path with no grass and it becomes a definite eyesore. The flower beds are waiting for spring and not a trample of feet hurrying to class. There are walks placed at every necessary direction on campus and the few seconds saved by cutting across the grass certainly will make no difference in anyone's schedule.

Signs have been put up to remind everyone that walks should be used and the natural beauty of the campus is to be admired and regarded as an asset to our college.

Men's House Council

The ALL STATE would like to recognize the fine work of the Men's House Council in McReynolds Hall. Under the guidance of president Charles Gearshiser and advisor Joe Suttin, the residents of the new dorm have organized and already have several projects well on the way.

The Christmas party and carol singing to the girls of Harned Hall was certainly an interesting start. We would definitely like to see more starts such as this on campus.

Campus Dances

The ALL STATE is proud to see the good number of students turning out for the informal dances on campus. The "after the ball game dances" have come over with real success and the students seem to be thoroughly enjoying and supporting them. These will continue as long as the students show an interest in their continuing.

Education

Education— the vast amount of seeds that has to be sowed to produce one small, struggling plant. And the vast amount of attention and care that has to be given the plant before it develops into a rooted and growing, fruitful tree. And the tragic truth that it will even die then, if deprived of the elements which made it start and continue its growth.

While we are in college we receive the seeds of education; in ourselves and our interests and initiatives we receive the stimulation and growing power. To prepare for the sowing we must believe in education and education's ability to help us. To prepare us for the growing period, we must believe in ourselves and our ability to grow. To prepare us for the vigil of keeping the beliefs, we must have a strong faith in our way of life and the worth of the individual man in this way of life.

Education is a group of steps; we must take one at a time. We must beware not to miss the first step— college.

ALSUP'S FABLES

Happy New Year to everyone and I sure hope you had a pleasant holiday. From some of the stories I've heard there was a great deal of fun had by A. P. students. I was glad to get back to school because vacation was killing me. Too much partying.

Since this quarter has started we have had several informal dances and mixers in the new addition of the Gym and everyone seems to have had a good time. Larry Womack, Mickey Garland, and Dick Strickland played for one dance and it was really a success.

I think it's a shame that college students should have to be reminded of this, but it seems necessary. Please take time to go over to the chaperoons and express your appreciation to them for helping us on our dances. The teachers get absolutely nothing for their service; they are using their own time and without them we couldn't have any of the dances.

The big social event of this quarter will be the Valentine Dance. The Girls' Dorm has charge of all the arrangements for that dance, so it is sure to be an enjoyable evening. I understand that the date set at the present time is Valentine's Day which falls on a Friday. I hope everyone won't go home that week-end. We will try to arrange for some activities for the following day and there is a ball game with Belmont the night of the fifteenth. Maybe we can get a caravan for the game.

It is time to think about the annual "Torch Game" with David Lipscomb, also. In case someone doesn't know what that is I will attempt an explanation. Last year the game was inaugurated and the winner of the game got to keep the torch. Since the idea originated at Lipscomb they ran it from Nashville to Austin Peay using relay teams. Austin Peay won the game and we have the torch in our possession. (At least someone has it in their possession, I know not who. This year we must run it back to Lipscomb and after we win the game we can bring it back home. I would like for all of the boys to think about this and volunteer their services for the run. The details will have to be worked out later but we will need quite a few runners.

I am definitely not a supporter of the English Club, but the "Tower", which is an anthology of student writings, furnishes a fine outlet for students who are interested in writing. If you have always had a desire to try your hand at writing, who not check into this matter? Ask any club member for information. But don't ask me who the members are. I don't know either.

Are you aware that the swimming pool is open two days a week for our use? We have on the best pools in this area and it seems a shame that more people don't take advantage of it.

If you are interested in reading a real good article about our days I would like to suggest the December issue of "Readers Digest." The article is "Where did you go? OUT. What did you do? Nothing."

Here is some good advice: Always be sincere, whether you mean it or not.

(Editor's Note: we are sure that we can speak for the English Club in thanking Mr. Alsop for the kindness he showed in the above article. The English Club humbly appreciated even the smallest crumb. (Nothing personal, Mr. Alsop.)

By BILL CONTE

He felt tired, his bones were getting old and he couldn't fight the cold the way he did as a youngster. He buried his head in the covers, trying vainly for a few seconds more of sleep.

He could hear Sara in the kitchen making breakfast and the grumbling that went with it. The last of his brood had moved on the summer before and he still hadn't gotten used to the silence in the old house.

He was proud of his house, there wasn't another one like it in five miles, cause if there was one thing he couldn't stand, it was to live in a run down house. So over the last few years he had been trying to improve his house, little by little.

The wind howled down the stove pipe and made a lonely sound. He realized he would never be able to get back to sleep that morning and surrendered to the inevitable. He rolled out of the bed and planted his feet firmly on the floor. He rose and shook himself awake and lumbered to the door of the kitchen, "My, that smells good." He pivoted and stumbled back into the bed-room-living-room-and everything else room being careful not to disturb anything. It was hard to see all the way to the wall where the treasured old clock sat so he couldn't make out the time. The windows had been boarded up and the only light came from the kitchen. He moved over to the little pot-bellied stove. What he'd do when Sara went he just didn't know. He could often sit for hours admiring her boundless energy. It was a source of never ending wonder that any one person could do so much. He knew that if he tried to do the same amount of work he would probably be dead inside a month.

Finally, after much stomping of his feet, and low grunting noises as if he were in pain, he managed to get his clothes on. He went into the kitchen and sat down at the table and watched Sara stir the hominy. She put the food on the table and they ate pretty much in silence. He didn't like to talk much at breakfast. It always seemed to ruin his digestion. He liked to start the day easy and sorta slide into the work, never going too fast or taking on more than he could handle. He wanted life to go its own way and leave him to regulate his affairs the way he wanted.

When breakfast was finished he wriggled into his heavy machinaw and patted Sara goodbye. He was going to town today to get some rations and some material so he could work on the house. He had been working on the house off and on for three winters and he believed he was making good progress considering what he had to work with. He had always wanted a good, sturdy house. But there had never been time when he was younger. Now it was about all he had to do. So if it was the last thing he would ever have his house in fit condition.

He had been in a real house, a fine house only one time in his life. The memory had stayed with him and he still dreamed of how it would be to live in a house with all these new gadgets and an indoor water-closet. It would be very much like Heaven, where he was sure he would go in the not too distant future.

He had led a hard life, of trying to wrest a living from a soil which seemed reluctant to grow anything. But though he thought of himself as poor he didn't bear a grudge about it and strangely enough, in his own way he had had a full life.

Now he went tramping down the dirt road, hugging his machinaw about him, planning to himself the things he would buy and what he would have to fix. The house steps had been troubling him for a long time and he was determined to do something about them this winter. He could get some scrap pieces of two by four and maybe fix them. He wasn't too sure yet of how he was going to fix them but he'd figure out a way. And the chicken coop had been an eyecore for too long. He was going to make some whitewash and maybe even make it look pretty and he wanted a fence around the house, oh yes, a house wasn't anything without a fence . . .

This Is The College; Here are the Students

By Sheila Bowman

Go to college and work, too? Sure, why not? Many students do, and Carol Cardillo is one of them. She works as part-time secretary for the firm of Daniel and Harvill, Attorneys at Law. She takes dictation, types, and occasionally helps with the bookkeeping. Since this law firm also represents insurance companies, her duties often take her deep into automobile investigation or hospital reports on accidents, operations, etc. The cases thoroughly acquaint her with the world, all the way from the restaurant business down to individual coverage, leaving a vast area in between.

One of the things Carol considers the most annoying and yet extremely amusing is the photostat machine - it only works for her if it works at all.

This efficient lass manages to clock a little over half a work week at the "office" while taking eighteen and one-half hours at Austin Peay. How does she do it? Without qualification, she just doesn't waste time. Every minute counts, and, in spite of this, she has ample time to do the things she wants. Carol declares that it merely takes a little planning. For the most part her classes are in the morning, giving the student an opportunity to be a career girl in the afternoon and all day Saturday.

Do her studies suffer? They may, but you can't tell it. This is Carol's second quarter at A. P., leaving only the Fall for observance, but her name on the Dean's List is an indication of the ambition and intelligence packed into this biology major.

Actually if you had known Carol in high school, her amazing success both in the classroom and in the business world would have come as no surprise. Miss Cardillo graduated from Clarksville High School in '37, ranked in the top ten of her class and a member of the National Honor Society. Her senior year saw her reign as Football Queen. Last year Carol's ambitions were aimed toward becoming a medical secretary, but now she says she'd like to continue in legal work.

Carol is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Luke Cardillo, presently in Clarksville. Born in Schenectady, New York, this is one Yankee who has more than one feather in her cap.

Carol is an outstanding representative of the numerous individuals who attend college and also hold down a job. Although her achievement in both fields is beyond the ordinary, the blocks which she finds in her path, the problems which appear, and the satisfaction of a job well done are typical of the other Austin Peay students leading a dual life.

Night Classes Well On Way

Austin Peay State College has the distinction of being the first Tennessee state college to begin a program of evening study for adults which led to a bachelor's degree.

In the fall of 1949 President Harvill was approached by a group of veterans who were interested in an evening course in accounting. Instead of a single accounting course, President Harvill insisted upon offering Business Math, Business Communication, and Introduction to Business to round out the program; and these four classes have branched until seventeen courses are now offered, ranging from psychology to poultry husbandry.

In the beginning the students were primarily veterans, but as time passed more of the town people and eventually Fort Campbell personnel began to come into the program. Of the approximate 250 students now enrolled in evening classes only a small per centage of the total is veterans.

The students fall into three classifications: those who come to work toward degrees; those who have been to college for a few years and wish to complete the work for a degree; and people who are interested in taking different courses just for the general knowledge.

The first student to earn a degree through only his night classes entered school in the summer of 1949 and completed his requirements for a degree in business in August, 1954.

A major in business is the only one offered, but with careful selection of subjects some students have been able to earn degrees with majors in English and history, but the courses are rotated around the business majors.

The members of this faculty are taken for the most part from the regular college teaching staff. In addition, professional men from the area, such as lawyers, accountants, and an occasional psychologist, have been, or are instructors in the Austin Peay evening sessions.

P. took 78 shots, and 25 for a slim 32 per cent shooting average.

Union connected on 24 of 30 chances for an average of 48 per cent which was the difference in the ball game.

Governors Lose To LMU

Austin Peay couldn't keep up their two game win streak and fell to Lincoln Memorial. The Governors took more shots than L. M. U., but couldn't connect as often. Austin Peay led at the half 30-27, but L. M. U. took over and led most of the last half. A coach couldn't ask for more scoring balance than Lincoln Memorial displayed.

Their highest scorer was Burton with 16; their lowest was Webb with 13, so all starters scored well for the Governors. A. P. shot 37 per cent from the floor to L. M. U.'s 49 per cent. Both clubs hit 13 free throws.

As I See It. by Bobby McCord

The man you see walking across the campus looking as if he's coming out of a daze is Coach Aaron. His basketball playing Governors are finally winning.

From a team that won 17 games last year, and made it to Kansas City, he returned ten men. Two of these men, Tom Morgan and Kenny Gerald, have been on the All Conference Team the last two years. What everyone would like to know is how they lost their first four games with these boys back.

Everytime one of the basketball player comes in the student center he is hunkered by students who want to know what's wrong. Coach Aaron took the same boys last year and was conference champs; he certainly knows as much basketball this year as he knew last year, so you have to look elsewhere to find the reason for the Gova's poor showing. I think one reason is that every team got a look at these same five boys last year. Some teams played them three times last year. The opposing coaches should know all there is to know about the A. P. strong and weak points by now. They know to guard Gerald tight out front, to stay on top of Morgan. They know Garrett likes to drive, especially to his left. Opponents also know that the A. P. center is not going to get the ball enough to hurt them. The Governors then, have no new faces to show the opposition, except for Bob Patterson and Ray Justice.

The Austin Peay club also has played only one home game, as I write this article. They have played six on the road. I don't think teams will beat AP in Clarksville.

I don't think the club has a boy that doesn't believe in giving one hundred per cent. Some clubs loaded with seniors relax a little. They feel they can be in the right place at the right time without hustling to get there. They often find a boy with less experience, but as much ability, beats them to the ball because he has a little more eagerness. A senior may not be trying to prove himself to the coach because he is a star already, while a younger boy is out to make good. Maybe that is the Gova's relaxing a little. Here's looking for a few game win streak.
