Journalist recounts trials, experiences

By ALICIA MOOREHEAD
Editor-in-chief

"It is my belief that it is inevitable that in the next 5-10 years, there will be a hostile nuclear explosion in the United States," said Investigative Journalist Dale Van Atta who spoke to a crowd of about 30 Monday night.

This along with several recounts of his experiences in America, highlighted the talk which centered around America's international involvement.

Van Atta reasons that there will be a nuclear explosion in the U.S. for two reasons stemming from the five year study from the Pentagon.

The first is the break up of the Soviet Union because,

as Atta argues, it created a more unstable world. Before break up, there were two powers, one on each side of the world, but now, the U.S. is the only superpower.

The second reason for the nuclear threat relates to the power of the world. The world is shifting from an eastwest power struggle to a north/south power struggle.

America and Europe are in the north and Africa with its

and world civilizations is in the south. The third world civilizations are tired of not getting attention from the United Nations as the United States isolating itself is supposed to do.

Out of sheer frustration, Van Atta said, terrorists form

according to Van Atta, a Palestinian was captured attempting to blow up 12 American planes within days of each other.

The terrorist had designed a bomb consisting of nitroglycerin in a contact lens solution bottle and a watch, and he had actually tested the explosive device on a plane. The terrorist was two weeks away from killing about 1,000 Americans when he was caught, according to Van Atta.

The journalist pointed out that it is easier for individuals to engage in acts of terrorism. In the past, groups were responsible for most activity, but recently, more and more individuals are getting involved. "There is a growing emergence of cults that are breaking away from American society; these are the cults that tell their members not to trust their parents, sisters, brothers, and friends," Van Atta said. He also pointed out that there are over 500 cults in the United States, and that number is "growing at a rapid rate because of the end of the millennium."

Van Atta also discussed an interview with King Hussein who has survived 40 assassination attempts and who, according to Van Atta, said he had a near-death experience.

All of this information Van Atta acquired just by asking "dumb questions." He said he just simply asked Hussein if he had a near-death experience. Hussein responded that he did.

Van Atta interviewed four presidents and discovered many asking "dumb" questions. He made the argument that the press is not going to learn anything from press conferences.

Van Atta is currently working on a book, and he has contributed to The New York Times among other publications. The program was sponsored by the University Programs Council.

Abuse of history a problem for students

By KELLY WILKERSON
news editor

The Austin Peay State University History Club recently sponsored a panel discussion concerning the misuse of history.

The panel, organized by Dr. Dewey Bowler, consisted of four APSU history professors and a member of the United States Business and Industrial Counsel, Educational Foundation, in Washington D.C.

Bowler, along with Dr. Michele Butts, Dr. George Pesely, and Dr. Richard Gidley participated in the discussion.

Richard Wiggers, a specialist on post-World War II foreign policy, who has a graduate fellowship at Georgetown University, also participated in the event.

The panel came together to discuss the misuse of history by individuals who are more concerned with making money than with writing history true to form, and to discuss common misrepresentations found in the course of history.

Gidley, the first to speak, discussed the "mythology that clouds our sense of the Puritan." He suggested that several misconstrued images of the Puritans have developed over the course of time. From the idea that the Puritans are the founders of American democracy to the archetypical wicked theologian to the image of the Puritan as an individual who had the "fear that someone somewhere is having a good time."

"Our job as historians is to point out fallacies and trace their origins and uses, and through this we might all become wiser," Gidley said.

Butts, the next to speak, discussed the image of the Native American. She suggested that Native Americans have been misrepresented throughout history by being perceived as one people, when they actually are many different groups of people with different languages and cultures. They have been perceived as the evil opposites of Christianity and civilization, and images have been developed of Native Americans as being the "savages" or "noble savages."

Traditional Butts suggests, the Native American has been portrayed as a barrier to white settlement, but as history evolves today from historians such as Richard White is beginning to show how the Native American was directly involved in the frontier experience and that a meshing of the two cultures occurred. "Students receive an incorrect image of Native Americans. They are led to believe that white society deserves to triumph while primitive peoples didn't," Butts said.

Pesely spoke on the book Black Athena, written by Martin Bernal. According to Pesely, Bernal was an expert in Chinese history, and much controversy has risen surrounding his book.

Pesely says that Bernal is not always quoting accurately. He uses Greek myths and etymologies of words as sources. Bernal had the tendency to argue that who don't agree with him are "Pee-wee."

According to Pesely, Bernal is accused of focusing too narrowly on Phoenicia and Greece and ignoring Mesopotamia and Syria. He is recognized as being useful for stirring up interest in the subject and provoking discussion on the topic.

Richard Wiggers came to Austin Peay to discuss those who write and sell bad history. He presented a list of rules for writing bad history: keep the numbers big; blame the crime on someone famous; have a credible individual write the forward to the book; launch the book in a huge public relations flurry; and build the case around documentary evidence from archives.

Wiggers recognizes that one doesn't have to "have a Ph.D. to write quality history," and that academics can write bad history.

Wiggers also discussed a book that has been published recently that does not portray history accurately. James Buchan, a Canadian novelist, has published a book concerning the mass deaths by starvation of German POWs by the French and Americans.

Bowler, the last on the panel to speak, says that Bacque did poor research in the statistics of those who died in Germany and that Bacque "has become a legend in his own time for his ability to sell myth as history."

Tribunal delays appeals

By KELLY WILKERSON

news editor

A recent meeting of the Student Tribunal developed into a complicated situation concerning hearing ticket appeals for students and members alike.

Fliers circulated on campus concerning the Student Tribunal of hearing rules and regulations at the meeting, beginning the meeting 15 minutes late, and refusing to hear numerous cases.

The fliers asserted that appealing a parking ticket before the Student Tribunal is a "waste of time." The fliers were not approved by Student Activities as is required by Austin Peay for the posting of fliers on campus.

The Student Tribunal is the judiciary body of the Student Government Association. Its primary purpose is to serve on the university hearing boards, serve ASA by interpreting and applying rules and regulations when needed, and to hear parking ticket appeals. The tribunal consists of a chief justice, who is in charge of the tribunal, and eight justice members.

According to Chief Justice Beck Fulghum, the tribunal has been accepting applications for its open positions and currently has only three slots filled. These three justices are only members of the tribunal with voting power. The chief justice is not a voting member but is present to preside over the meeting and to ensure that the justice members consider every appeal concerning an appeal. The chief justice is allowed to vote in a tie-break situation.

According to Article 3, Section 6 of Austin Peay's Parking and Traffic Regulations, there must be three judicial members present in order for hear appeals.

Four-tenths appeals were scheduled for the recent meeting, which was scheduled to begin at 4:30 p.m. According to Fulghum, a list to sign was passed around for all those who were present and waiting to have their appeals heard. Those present would have their appeals heard first.

The hearing of appeals goes on a first-come-first-served basis. We go straight down the list reviewing the cases in order. We try to fair as possible," Fulghum said.

The tribunal had heard 15 or 16 appeals by 6:00 when one of the justices had to leave the meeting, leaving the tribunal with only two voting members, not enough to continue the meeting.

According to Fulghum, the tribunal realized that there would be no way to hear all the cases and told those waiting sometime after 5:00 that they would not be able to hear everyone. Those waiting were given the choice of coming back the next week or having their cases heard without them being present at the next meeting with a special notation made on their appeal recognizing that they had been present at their scheduled time.

Some students continued to wait while the tribunal proceeded to hear the cases in the order they were listed on the list. "The tribunal tried in its best to be fair," Fulghum said.

To Reliane, a student present at the meeting, said, "They knew they weren't going to get through all the appeals but made people wait an hour and fifteen minutes before telling them this."

Bellamy, referring to other students present and waiting to have their tickets cleared so that they could pack up scholarship or financial aid grants, said that they could check said, "If she is supposed to be there for the students, then she is not helping the people who need it the most."

He also said, "If they don't show up then the appeal is automatically denied; then if they (the student tribunal) don't hear the appeal should be automatically accepted."

Kenn Cole, a sophomore pre-law student who also waited to have an appeal heard, said, "They started late and then waited before telling people they couldn't hear all of the appeals."

The people who stayed should have either been heard or the first of the list for next week. They should be more fair with their decisions."

Detuctive Steve Warren, the APSU officer present in the meeting said, "I know the fact that they started late and then waited before telling people they couldn't hear all of the appeals."

Concerning the tribunal's inability to hear all of the scheduled appeals, Warren said, "It was a system problem that she (Fulghum) didn't have control of."

"Students have to realize that the ticket appeal process is a privilege. Our main purpose is to serve the students, but we have to enforce rules and regulations. I do understand that they got stuck up and it appears not too because it is the responsibility of the student tribunal. We have no control over it and we are trying to do what we can. If we're not here for the students, we're not here for anyone."

According to Fulghum, the tribunal is keeping the list from the last meeting and will go by this list first at the next meeting.

The appeals scheduled for the date of the next meeting will go to wait as the tribunal hears the cases in order.

TBR to meet on campus

By ALICIA MOOREHEAD
Editor-in-chief

Austin Peay's chance to showcase the university has come once again with the Tennessee Board of Regents, APSU's governing body, convening on campus Thursday and Friday to hold its quarterly meeting.

The meetings are rotated among schools within the Board of Regents in order to have a good feel of the institutions they are governing. Victor Ukpoko, chair of the Tennessee Board of Regents Steering Committee, said, APSU has not hosted the meeting for five years.

Students may be slightly inconvenienced during these two days because of McCord parking lot being blocked off to accommodate the guests. Also, all of the activities on campus will be held in either the University Center or in the Executive Dining room of the cafeteria, so students are asked to please be courteous. "This is an important event for us and we want to make sure the guests have a pleasant stay at Ukpoko," Ukpoko said.

Most of the presidents and directors of TBR institutions will be on campus, as well as the Chancellor of the system, Dr. Charles Smith. "Many of them have not been here for the first time, so please help them as much as we can, especially with directions," Ukpoko said.

Ukpoko encourages students to carry on their normal routine, but do it with them to be aware of the situation.

TBR committee meetings will be held on Thursday in the UC. The committees on Finance and Business Operations, on Academic Policies and Programs, on Personnel, on Vocational-Techical Education and on Student Life will meet.

Friday, APSU President Dr. Sal Rinella will be given a period of time to welcome the Board of Regents and to make a presentation concerning the campus. Part of the presentation will include the showing of a new promotional film about Austin Peay that has been some time in the making.

The Board will then hold the full meeting. The committees, the chancellor and presidents and directors will give reports. Some new business at the meeting will include the naming of the arboretum at Tennessee Tech and the naming of the baseball field at Tennessee Tech and the naming of a building on the Clarksville Branch Center campus of the Tennessee Technology Center.

Elections fill open seats

By KELLY WILKERSON
news editor

The Student Government runoff election held last week resulted in many open Senate seats being filled. The runoff was a consequence of the regular freshman election resulting in a tie for the sixth freshman senate seat as well as seats for senatorial seats within the college of graduate and professional programs.

Voter turnout in the runoff was low, with 43 total ballots being cast for the open senate positions. In the first election held on Sept. 4, Nathan Boles and Jennifer Phillips were elected to the sixth freshman senate seat. In the most recent elections, Boles emerged as the winner receiving 23 votes.

Also on Sept. 4, nine students received one write in vote each for the open positions for the College of Graduate and Professional Programs. Several six students were eligible to hold the position and their names were on the ballot in the recent election.

Those emerging as the winners were Susan Argo, 31 votes; Tabitha Vires, 20 votes; Kelly Wallace, 23 votes; and Robert Young, 24 votes.

Senate Seats are still open.

Student Government Vice President, Lane Crawley, said, "Currently we have four available senior seats."

According to Crawley, for these positions to be filled, the student must obtain an application from the SGA office, fill it out and turn it back in to him. The student will then go through an interview process before the Senate Board consisting of the Vice President and five senators.

"We would like to have all of these seats filled and we are planning for a successful year," Crawley said.

According to her nominator, Hamel has an "unbelievable" grasp of the clothing and supply inventory. She participates in University functions and rarely misses football or basketball game. Her nominator also writes that Hamel goes out of her way to help customers who work well with co-workers, faculty and staff.

Also staff on campus know Joe Mills, director of housing/residence life, according to his nominator, has excellent rapport with residents because of his positive and friendly attitude. Mills, who received the award in the professional category, was responsible for major improvements to residence halls and makes daily visits to residence halls to assess their condition and to attack problem areas. "It's because of Joe's skillful planning and perseverance that we have quality residence halls and service students," writes his nominator.

The recipient of the award in the support category is Robert Minor, who was promoted Sept. 1 to custodial lead worker in the physical plant.

Abuse of history problem for students

Browder says that what confuses students as to what is bad history and what is not is that it usually carries positives. Pseudohistory is myth; not only is it wrong but it is harmful and does a great disservice to the group the myth is designed to enhance, Browder said.

How do we know if what we are looking at is bad history or not? As Wiggers says, it is hard to tell. But there are ways to discover if what you are looking at is true to form or not. Gildner suggests looking first at primary sources, these tell you exactly what the individuals were thinking at that time in history. Also, you can look at sources that other authors have used as Browder suggests.

"Let's go Peay" But not in our River

If you didn't know any better, you might have thought it was the 1960's, but social protest is alive and well in 1996.

Earlier this week, motorists driving down Riverside Drive outside McGregor Park were greeted by a group of APSU students protesting the dumping of raw sewage into the Cumberland River.

After reading stories in The Leaf-Chronicle about Metro-Nashville's dumping of 45 tons of raw sewage a day into the river, students in Gregg Schlanger's art classes decided to use their art to send a message.

And what a message they sent.

Armed with close to a dozen toilets, a skeleton, signs and dirty water from the Cumberland, around 30 students spent Wednesday morning building displays showing the community's disgust for the blatant disregard for our environment and communities located downstream from Nashville.

While one display featured a skeleton being showered by toilet water, another took an up-close look at menu items from "The Cumberland Cafe" — complete with the Cumberland's own bottled water, "Pee-rer."

We applaud the efforts of those willing to stand up to big government to make a statement on behalf of our environment.

"What good is a classical education...if we sit idly by as the powers that be rape our country."

For a city the size of Nashville to be contaminating the water we take our drinking water out of is not only irresponsible, but a disgrace for the state's capitol city.

We join Schlanger and his visionary students who chose to use their art as a vehicle for social change.

But this, hopefully, will not be an isolated incident. If we, the leaders of the future, do not take a stand to protect the things we believe in — be it the environment, political idealism or other issue — then our future is a bleak one.

What good is a classical education and an understanding of music, art, literature, science and mathematics if we sit idly by as the powers that be rape our country leaving us with the leftovers.

The All State encourages each student to find what they can individually change in this world. You may not think you can do very much on your own, but the organization MADD was started by one concerned mother. All it takes is a willingness to change something, that you think is wrong in our environment or society and others will join you.

Now is the time to reclaim our inheritance and save the things we believe in.

Perot should have chosen brain surgery over presidential politics

By LANE CRAWLEY
assistant opinion editor

Election year isn't exactly heating up, but no one seems to care anyway, except the partisans. It's been a relatively boring campaign so far. There's not been great rhetoric to gab about, and no controversial veep picks at which we can poke fun of.

However, it hasn't been a race completely without interest, although one does have to look close to find some of the ironies and points of wonder in this year's rat race for the top. For example, I was looking at a blurb from this month's National Review, which said that Ross Perot, who just a year ago said he would rather perform brain surgery on himself than get back into presidential politics, likes to regard himself as George Washington II, and has enough money to buy either party. It's "accepting" nearly $30 million in federal election funds.

The same H. Ross Perot, who said that both Democrats and Republicans are responsible for running up the deficit, now takes a shovel full of responsibility for himself. I like Perot better, the more I see him less. President Clinton takes all other awards for the campaign.

One example is knowing his voters. Clinton has kow-towed so many issues lately that he actually has managed to place himself to the right of some Republicans in Congress. After saying at the '92 Democratic convention, "I'm tired of politicians lecturing up on family values," old absence-of-values himself is now talking about what he ridiculed Dan Quayle about just four years ago.

Clinton has also embraced welfare reform, tax cuts, less bureaucracy, and refused to endorse same-sex marriages. Sounds awfully republican, eh? Last week, my editor wrote that President Clinton "must be given another chance because there isn't anyone else..." Clinton can let the gay community down because he realizes something that most of his supporters don't seem to; the fact that he can screw his disciples and they'll still vote for him, because for them there is no one else. He can and he does.

Clinton, in the past few months, has treated those whom he previously thanked for putting him in office, like toilet paper, to be used and thrown away. Clinton excites people by throwing up new ideas that sound wonderful, but like communism, fall apart when one applies logic to them.

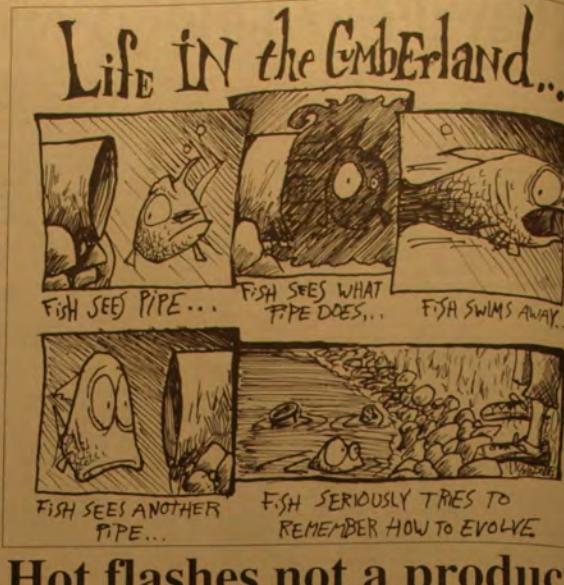

Dole's not a bad guy, I just think he needs to stop talking about himself in third person so much. Can you imagine him as a kid? To his parents: "Bob Dole would like another piece of cake." To his friends: "Bob Dole wants to be on your team." To girls: "If you'll do it with other boys, why won't you do it with Bob Dole?"

I like Dole better than Clinton, I trust him more; he took his stands on issues before the election season. My only complaint with Dole is that his campaign has been a second-hand one. With the combination of Whitewater, Travaglione, the FBI files, Vince Foster and character issues, Clinton has given voters plenty of reasons to vote against him.

Another thing, has anyone else noticed how Hillary has suddenly just shut up? We haven't heard a word out of her in months. Maybe the Clinton staffers might have grown wary of her upstaging husband.

My real worry lies with the Congress, the very thought of a "Speaker Gephardt" is enough to make one consider migrating to Guam. Never in the history of the country has there been such a man as Gephardt that believes all life's solutions lie in another government program. Never before has there been such a man who believed so little in the average Joe's ability to take care of himself. It's something to think about, but not too much.

Even I got bored with politics from time to time. The important thing is to participate in democracy. Everybody should go out and vote for someone; hell, start a write-in campaign! There's still time left for it all to get interesting, so don't give up yet America. Thank you for reading.

Hot flashes not a product of student's middle age

By LYDIA MELTON
features editor

So Austin Peay went over budget this year. The physical plant is trying to make up for it with their conservation plan. From a distance, the plan seems like a good idea. Turn off the air conditioners in buildings at night. Nobody's there to know the difference. Well those of us who have early morning classes know the difference. Half the time the rooms are so hot, students start peeling off layers of clothes before the professor takes roll. The rest of the time we are rubbing our hands together to create some sort of heat source so we don't freeze to death.

I have all my classes in Hamred so I can't speak for the extreme temperatures in the rest of the buildings. I have heard, however, that it is just as bad everywhere else. It's just frustrating to me to swelter on Monday and when I dress for the heat on Tuesday, the air is up so high that I can see my breath. That last part is a sign of aging, but you get my point. My backpack is now full of books to carry around extra clothes to change into if I'm too hot or too cold.

"Quit whining" you are probably thinking to yourself. "Grow up and get over it." I would if I could, but the main problem I'm having is that the temperature distracts me from my work. It's hard to concentrate when you are about to pass out from heat stroke or you can't hear the professor because your teeth are chattering so loud. Sure the physical plant is saving money but at what expense, our education?

The library seems to have the opposite problem. Until very recently, it was cold. I'm not talking chilly. I'm talking Arctic winter, penguins and polar bears cold. It has gotten better so I can't complain much but I want to explain to everyone who goes to the library at night. Nobody's going to notice the strange looks while I was seen hauling an armful of sweaters and coats into the library on a night when it was hot outside. If you were just visiting library during the cold snap, you probably noticed the temperature much. I work there. I had to leave there to three hours at a time. I would start on a flannel shirt and as I got colder I'd move up to a sweater and then the coat. I'd have to shed layers before I left work though. If I had worn out in August heat, I would have passed out. I'm the verge of bringing gloves, my hands were so cold it couldn't type when the spring thaw started library. Thank goodness I don't have to dress for the cold weather at work anymore.

All I am asking for is a happy medium in temperatures in the buildings. Not too hot, not too cold. Temperate would be nice. This weird temperature has been a little more consistent maybe the physical plant has taken the hint. I hope because I don't want to have to break out my suit in the middle of October once they turn heat.

Among other things, The All State is the student voice of Austin Peay State University. We welcome all letters to the editor. They should be less than 250 words in length and should be submitted no later than Friday at 5 p.m. for publication on Wednesday. Letters will not be printed unsigned, and a phone number, which will not be published, is preferred.

Letters to the Editor

God condemns gay lifestyle

After reading the "Gay and Lesbian Rights..." editorial last week, I felt the need to speak out on this issue. I indeed am a Christian and feel no sense of shame for believing that same-sex marriage as well as homosexual/lesbian relationships are physically, mentally and spiritually wrong. The Bible teaches against such relationships. (See Genesis 19:1-29, Leviticus 20:13, and Deuteronomy 23:17.)

I won't ostracize anyone who feels that they must express their love in a homosexual way because I must love my neighbor as myself despite my beliefs.

Furthermore, I don't support sanctimonious hypocrites who judge others without pointing a pinky at themselves. "Homosexuals" must grow in the Lord.

My area of irritation with the article comes from Mr. Alley's use of Jesus to elevate his ideals, when anyone who studies the Bible knows that God displeased with the lifestyle. I also doubt very seriously that Jesus would "go for a night around the town gay bashing and condemning others to hell"; however I believe that Jesus would lovingly speak the truth. The truth is that anyone who embraces same-sex relationships via marriage or sexual acts, will condemn themselves to hell. (See Corinthians 6:9-20 for truth)

Mr. Alley, Jesus is more democratic than anyone in this world because He gives the privilege to choose our eternity. That, sir, is neither "uptight" or morally upright; it is the truth.

If you want to speak Biblically, do so with an understanding, not from the idiotic babbling of Rick, Jerry, Gordon, Montel. I pray that in the future you think about the terms you use "loosely" in a presentation to your peers. Some of them are saved, sanctified, filled with the Holy Spirit and fired of confusion being spread in Jesus's name.

Financial aid staff professional

In response to Lydia Melton's fiery editorial Financial Aid, I wish to offer another opinion that perhaps balance out her comments.

Oritated, the forms can be tricky, and lag time can be bothersome. However, it is my opinion that administration at APSU, to include the Financial Aid office, are second to none. The staff have always been helpful and professional, even under extreme circumstances. And, of course, they have recently installed a computer system to shorten much of the exchange information.

I personally have had no problems getting financial aid checks, be it grants, scholarships, or loans. But, I do my part in taking responsibility for reading instructions and filling out forms accurately for returning them promptly, and by providing necessary documentation.

Remember, this is higher education, a stepping stone to life or the outside. Take this opportunity to be responsible for yourself! Don't expect the F.A. to hold your hand, although I'm sure they would need to.

I have attended several other institutions of learning, both larger and more expensive, but have never been happier with the administration or their thanks for the opportunity to share our experience and viewpoint. I think it needs to be said, "Thanks, F.A., for your great service to me!"

Mistakes costly as Governors drop second

by SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

The song remains the same for Austin Peay's Governors after last weekend's 12-10 loss to the Samford Bulldogs in Birmingham, Ala. Just as they did in the loss to Arkansas State, the Govs failed to convert scoring opportunities when they had them.

In the end, the Govs had the ball come away with 10 points.

In the Govs first possession, it appeared that they would finally put some points on the board.

After driving 56 yards on nine plays to the Bulldog four, the Govs watched as David Young's 21 yard field goal sailed wide. The next Governor possession culminated in quarterback Matt Hicks' first interception of the game at the Samford 3.

The Govs finally seemed to get on track in the second quarter when Matt Hicks hit Cisco Navas from six yards out to put the Govs ahead for the first time this season. David Young's extra point made the score 7-10. The score came after the Govs marched 84 yards on 10 plays.

Samford got on the board for the first time in the second quarter with a field goal to make the score 7-3 in favor of the Govs. The half ended when Hicks' pass intended for Daniel Williams fell incomplete on fourth-and-one at the Samford 22.

The Govs dominated the first half everywhere but on the scoreboard. They totalled 255 net yards to 130 net yards for Samford, and held the ball for 38:33 compared to 11:27 for the Govs. However, interceptions and penalties cost the Govs valuable field position in the first half.

The Governor defense provided some spark for the offense to begin the second half. On Samford's first possession, Ralph Hill blocked a Bulldog punt that Terrance Tillman recovered at the one yard line.

Before the first play from scrimmage could even be run, the Govs offense was flagged for illegal procedure, moving the ball back five yards. From there the offense ran three straight plays, gaining a total of zero net yards.

Once again, the standing Governor offense failed to put the ball in the end zone. A David Young 23-yard field goal made the score APSU 10, Hicks was 18 of 38 for 174 yards and one touchdown. He was intercepted three times, though he did not have six interceptions on the season compared to one TD.

Charles Hall had a strong game at receiver, hauling down four passes for 65 yards to lead the Governors in that category. Terrance Tillman also added four passes for 39 yards.

As a team, the Govs netted 306 total yards, but could only manage 51 yards in the second half. For the second straight week the Govs led in time of possession, 31:00 to 29:00. For the second straight week, the Govs couldn't capitalize on having the ball longer than their opponent.

This Saturday the squad faces a formidable Western Kentucky team, a team that has defeated Murray State and Eastern Kentucky already.

The Govs were never able to generate any offense in the quarter, and saw their lead slip away as Samford kicked a field goal with 4:37 remaining in the game to put the Govs away for good.

"We had a lot of opportunities," Gregory said. "We should have won this one. This is one of the hardest losses I have ever had."

All the news wasn't bad for the Govs, though. The rushing game that virtually disappeared in the loss to Arkansas State reappeared. The Gov ground attack totalled 132 net yards rushing, led by Terrance Tillman's 64 yard effort on 14 carries.

Hicks was 18 of 38 for 174 yards and one touchdown. He was intercepted three times, though he did not have six interceptions on the season compared to one TD.

The Sports Corner: stars to sign books

sports commentary
by SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

To all of you out there who have not got enough of the Olympics, here is your opportunity to see renowned track and field star Carl Lewis.

He will be at the Planet Hollywood in Nashville on Friday, Sept. 27 from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. to sign copies of his book. The occasion is to raise money for the National Kidney Foundation.

There will also be a silent auction of Olympic memorabilia. Get out your wallets, though. The cost is $50 per person or $75 per couple. It's for a good cause, however.

In other book signing news, Olympic gold medalist Rebecca Lobo (former University of Connecticut basketball star) and her mother, RuthAnn Lobo, will sign copies of their new book at Davis-Kidd Booksellers on Wednesday, Sept. 25, at 6 p.m. The inspirational book details how Rebecca overcame obstacles in her life and how RuthAnn defeated breast cancer.

For those of you who are women's basketball fans, here's the chance to meet a champion. The event is free to the public.

This week's Governor of the Week is running back Terrance Tillman, who rushed for a team-leading 64 yards and caught four passes for 39 yards in the Govs' 12-10 loss to Samford.

The Lady Gov of the Week is volleyballer Noemi Chabria. In the Memphis Invitational last weekend, she tallied 61 assists, 27 kills, and 17 digs, as the Lady Govs took three of four in Memphis.

This weekend in Knoxville is the college game all of us have been waiting for—the much anticipated "game of the year" between Florida and Tennessee. UT will break the attendance record for an on-campus football game held by Michigan. Over 107,000 are expected.

Here's the Top Ten poll for this week:

Peay Hall of Fame names 3 inductees

by SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

Austin Peay's athletic department announced that three former Govs will be inducted into the Austin Peay Hall of Fame. They are former tennis standout Shannon Peters, and former Gov basketball stars Eddie Childress, and Danny Odums.

Childress played for the Govs during the 1971-72 and 1972-73 seasons after transferring from Martin Junior College. He averaged 13.9 points and 5.5 rebounds per game during the 1971-72 campaign and averaged 13.2 points and 4.4 rebounds per game as a senior. The 1972-73 squad gave Austin Peay its first NCAA Tournament appearance.

He earned first-team All-OVC honors after the 1972-73 season. The same year he received the Jay Award.

Odums played only two seasons as well, in 1972-73 and 1973-74. Playing point guard for Lake Kelly, he was named honorable mention All-OVC after averaging 10.1 points, 6 assists and 3.3 rebounds per game as a freshman.

As a sophomore, Odums averaged 12.4 points, 3.3 rebounds, and 2 assists per game, earning All-OVC honors as the Govs returned to the NCAA Tournament for the second straight year.

Special recognition will be given to Dr. Joe Morgan, Dr. George Fisher, Dr. Dave Aaron, and Mr. John Ogles, previous inductees into the Austin Peay Hall of Fame.

With an overall singles record of 64-2, Peters was named All-OVC all four years at Austin Peay, garnering eight first-place finishes. As a junior and senior she was champion at No. 1 singles and No. 1 doubles. In 1991 she was the recipient of the Joy Award, given to APSU's most valuable senior athlete.

By CARINDA BASSO
assistant news editor

We've all heard the saying "Since the day," but how many of us have actually taken it seriously? The cast of the APSU playhouse production of "Our Town" is shedding new light onto this phrase.

"Our Town," by Pulitzer Prize winner Thornton Wilder, is about life and death in the small town of Dover's Corner, New Hampshire. Through the play we are able to catch a glimpse of what life is like after death. Emily Webb, played by Wendy Planter, dies in childbirth and is given the opportunity to go back to the past. She sees that people don't know how to live and take the important things in life for granted.

For those of you who enjoyed "The Heidi Chronicle" last spring, this play is for You. They share similar themes of sharing the joys of life but differ in their dramatic tones, as "Our Town" is more powerful in its vision.

"Our Town" is scenically different from most plays. Wilder wanted the audience to utilize their imaginations, so he chose to use an empty space with a few tables and chairs for the set. Due to this, Wilder included a stage manager, played by Mitch Diehr, who sets the stage for the audience and tells the events of the play like a narrator.

"Our Town" is directed by David Wesner and co-directed by Dr. Joe Filippo. Wesner is new to the theatre department this semester and is serving as technical coordinator as well as teaching several classes.

This semester, the department has added more freshmen to the department than any other year. Besides adding new faces to the stage, the Trahern Theatre is also undergoing a renovation of their fire system.

"Our Town" will be performed Oct. 2-6 in the Trahern Theatre. Show times are 7:30 p.m., Oct. 2-5, and 2 p.m. on Oct. 6. The box office is open Sept. 23-27 from 2-6 p.m. Tickets are $3 for students, $5 for general admission. For more information, call the box office at 648-7379.

APSU officer cheers boys of summer

Coyotes baseball brings some dreams to life for many of us

By STEVE WARREN
guest writer

The little boy looked carefully around before sneaking onto Raymond C. Hand Field soon after one of the last Coyote games of the season. As the APSU officer assigned to the game, I was probably supposed to make him return to the bleachers but I wouldn't have done that for the world.

I saw the determined look in his eye as he strode to the plate and, in his mind, knocked one right out of the park. His little legs pumped hard as he charged towards first base with all the speed he could muster. Rounding the base, he continued around the diamond to finally stomp triumphantly, with both feet, on the home plate and raise his hands in victory. The grin on the little fellow's face was brighter than all the lights in the stadium.

I think some hard-working athletes and some risk-taking team owners should raise their hands in triumph, too. I don't know whether or not these people made money, but I do know they brought a whole summer of great entertainment to Clarksville at an affordable price. What is more American than baseball and free enterprise? I saw a lot of Coyote players and a lot of Coyote employees and owners spend an awful lot for more than 40 hours a week trying to make this team work.

Maybe the Coyotes didn't finish with the win-loss record people wanted. It may be, however, that they did something more important.

They did finish. Not every team in the new Big South league can say that. And they did something else, too. They made at least one little boy dream a very American dream. And they reminded an older fellow that sometimes things in life are worth going for.

Movie Review

'Il Postino' delivers cinematic poetry, a must see on big screen

By CHRIS DOWNES
Staff writer

For those of you who missed it the first time, "Il Postino" (The Postman) has been re-released into theaters. If you were waiting for it to arrive on video, let me strongly urge you to try to see it on the big screen.

If you have never heard of this movie, then let me give you a little bit of background: so far this decade, "Il Postino" is the only foreign movie that has been nominated for an Academy award for best picture. Not best foreign film, but best picture. It is amazingly good.

The basic plot line involves a humble postman, Mario, who is star struck by the arrival of Pablo Neruda, the famous poet, to his island somewhere off the coast of Italy. Neruda is the only person on Mario's postal route. He is bothered many times by Mario's attempts to befriend him. Eventually, Neruda gives in to Mario's persistence, and the two become good friends.

"Il Postino" is the only foreign movie that has been nominated for an Academy Award for Best Picture."

The story is a beautiful complement to Neruda's poetry and yet simple enough to eloquently portray the uncomplicated life of the small island. Seeing "Il Postino" in the theater also enhances the rich scenery of the film. The forest-covered hills and the endless blues of the ocean reaching beyond the cliffs inspires the viewer to poetic magnitudes.

It is interesting to see the town's people disregard what is around them and focus entirely on Neruda. Inspiration is derived from what we do not have. Neruda is inspired by the beauty of the island, and the inhabitants are inspired by Neruda's fame.

All in all, it is a beautiful movie and should be seen in its original element, the big screen. Massimo Troisi, who plays Mario, was also nominated for best actor. I personally think that he did much better than Nicholas Cage, and because he died right after the filming of the movie, it would have been a fitting exit for a actor.

"Il Postino" is playing at the Bellevue Carmike Cinema in Nashville.
