Drugs make scene on campus

by Holli K. Froemming
editor in chief

Three Austin Peay State University students were charged with "possession for resale" after campus police confiscated more than 165 grams of marijuana, Nov. 6, in three unrelated incidents.

A fourth incident was reported and is still under investigation.

The four incidents were reported in Rawlins, Cross and Meacham Apartments on campus.

Joe Mills, director of housing, says the incidents are unrelated and it is coincidental that they all happened on the same day.

"People on campus know where it [the marijuana] is - we were just following up on tips we got," he says.

The three students, Terance Bean, Dessica Harris and Larry LaCroy face felony charges that could result in a jail sentence of up to six years or more.

Bean, according to the police report, was in possession of 75.6 grams of a "green leafy substance" that tested positive for THC, the drug found in marijuana.

Harris, according to a police report, had 79.2 grams of a "green leafy substance" that tested positive for THC.

LeCroy, according to the police report, had 9.8 grams of a "green leafy substance" that tested positive for THC.

According to the police report, LeCroy told officers he had been involved in distributing drugs on campus since September.

All three men were arrested and taken to the Montgomery County Jail.

The fourth report involved a simple possession charge.

Simple possession can result in a prison term of any amount of time less than 11 months and 29 days.

Although she could not comment specifically on the disciplinary actions taken with the students, Dr.

Jennifer Meningall, vice president of student affairs, says the university has a zero-tolerance policy on drugs.

She says the university will take appropriate disciplinary action against any student who is found with the possession of drugs, no matter the amount.

At least three other drug-related incidents have been reported this semester.

Football player excels in academics

Justin Schrader, Austin Peay State University's senior line-backer, has been selected for a second straight year to the Football Verizon Academic All-District team, as chosen by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA).

The 6-2, 230-pound native of Strawberry Plains, Tenn., is a business major and one of five repeat selections to the 2000 21-player District IV team.

His name now advances to the Verizon/CoSIDA Academic All-America ballot. That team will be announced Dec. 5.

Schrader owns a 3.691 grade-point average in business.

Three times he has achieved a perfect 4.0 GPA during a semester and two other times was a member of the Dean's List (3.5 GPA+).

He has been a member of the Ohio Valley Conference Commissioner's Honor Roll (3.25 GPA for year) each of his three APSU years and the Athletics Director's Honor (3.0 GPA).

The Govs' football team, on which Schrader is a player, lost this weekend to Davidson.

NTSO seeks new members

Austin Peay State University's Non-Traditional Student Organization (NTSO) is reborn and seeking students interested in joining.

"NTSO is revitalizing itself. Since we have such a large non-traditional student population, there is a need for it," says Blanche Wilson, director of the APSU Child Learning Center and NTSO adviser. "NTSO wants to reach these students, and we are working hard to make sure the word is out."

"We want to get the campus more non-traditionally oriented," says Wendy Nelson-Wyckoff, NTSO president. Nelson-Wyckoff hopes to have more activities on campus for both non-traditional students and their families.

"College is supposed to be the best time of your life. This is a way to solve some of the problems non-traditional students are facing. It also is a way to get more out of college than just a degree," says Nelson-Wyckoff.

She believes participation is important because non-traditional students can learn from the experiences of other non-traditional students. At APSU, students are classified as non-traditional if they are at least 25 years old, returning to school after an extended absence from formal education, married, a parent or a military veteran.

"The out-of-class experience is a very vital part of college life. Non-traditional students have a different focus and want to seek out others, so they can interact with students like themselves," says Wilson.

The goals of NTSO are to help non-traditional students stay in touch with the campus, community and peers, provide a smooth transition into college life, aid in developing a strong peer support system in the non-traditional student community and to encourage scholarship and career-oriented goals.

Anyone interested in joining NTSO can call Wilson at (931) 221-6234, e-mail Nelson-Wyckoff at dblname@hotmail.com or write her at APSU, P.O. Box 7327.

Professor receives grant to develop herbarium

Dr. Edward W. Chester, professor of biology at Austin Peay State University, has been awarded a grant from the U.S. National Park Service (NPS) to develop a park herbarium at Fort Donelson National Military Battlefield in Stewart County.

A herbarium is a reference collection of the plants that exist up to a given point in time. Park officials and Chester believe it is important to document the plants present at this time to provide baseline data for monitoring inevitable changes.

"Our studies will seek out any rare plants, and we will make recommendations for their protection," said Chester.

All vascular plants in the battlefield will be included in the herbarium, with special attention given to locating rare plants and non-native plants.

Rare plants will not be collected. Instead, photos will be taken. Non-native, invasive plants will be documented so their status may be monitored and, in some cases, eradication plans developed.

APSU maintains zero-tolerance policy on drugs

by Holli K. Froemming
editor in chief

Administrators at Austin Peay State University, maintain their zero-tolerance policy when it comes to drugs.

Anyone found with drugs, regardless of the amount, will be appropriately disciplined, says Dr. Jennifer Meningall, vice-president for student affairs. Meningall feels drug offenses are more prevalent than alcohol offenses this semester, although she says her office does not receive information on all the alcohol related offenses.

"[All the drug incidents are] making me want to figure out what's going on," she says.

Joe Mills, director of housing, says he's seen more drug-related issues this semester as well.

At least eight students have been suspended from housing this semester, a number greater than in past semesters, says Mills.

Mills says students are adults and need to make their own decisions about the use of illegal drugs, but they need to know the consequences of their actions.

Housing policy says that if anyone is found guilty of drugs or drug paraphernalia (i.e. scales, little plastic baggies, pictures, etc.), they are suspended from housing. The suspension usually lasts for one year.

Mills says the administrators and student workers in housing are enforcing state and federal laws in supporting the zero-tolerance policy.

Mills is not sure why there has been such an insurge in drug abuse this semester. He speculates that it might be that drugs, such as marijuana, are being introduced to students at a younger age and wonders if high school students are beginning to think it's not a big deal to use illegal drugs.

He thinks it might be easier to get marijuana than alcohol for someone who is under-aged and feels that might have something to do with the increase.

The Jimpson weed substance that was responsible for sending three students to the hospital earlier this month is new to Mills; he had never heard of it until that point. The seeds, when taken, produce a hallucinogenic affect, but they are not illegal substances.

Mills also says they don't have "hard" drug occurrences, such as cocaine or heroin. The reason for this, he says, is not necessarily because students aren't using them but because the harder drugs are more difficult to detect.

"They don't have a smell or anything else," says Mills. Aside from housing discipline, students caught with illegal substances will be disciplined by the University as well.

Meningall says depending on the circumstances surrounding each incident (i.e. the amount of substance found, if there have been other violations etc.) the student can be put on interim suspension while they await due process.

Due process includes giving the student the chance to plead "guilty" or "not guilty."

From that point, the student may choose from the following options: to have an administrative hearing with one or more administrators or a University Hearing Board hearing (the Board is made up of students, faculty and staff). Other options are the "guilty - no hearing" option and the Tennessee Uniform Administrative Procedures Act hearing. The TUAPA hearing is usually used when the student is at risk of suspension or expulsion from the university and involves a civil court. The University's attorneys get involved and the student may hire an attorney if he or she chooses.

Drugs at Austin Peay State University are a serious business and the administrators want students to know how strictly they enforce the policy.

Meningall says in drug cases, the strictest forms of sanctions are usually taken. If anyone feels they have a drug problem and want to receive help, according to APSU policy, that person will not be punished for coming forward voluntarily.

The university, at that time, will provide information to the student on their options for getting help and the policy says all such individuals "shall be assured that applicable professional standards of confidentiality will be observed."

For more information or a complete copy of the drug/alcohol policy, see the 2000-2001 Student Handbook or contact the Office of Student Affairs at 221-7376.

Football team drops the ball against Davidson

Austin Peay State University's upset bid fell short thanks to Davidson's special teams.

Davidson pushed its record to 9-0 Saturday afternoon as it blocked a punt for a touchdown while also blocking a field goal as the Wildcats downed the Governors 22-7 in the home finale for 10 Austin Peay seniors.

The loss dropped the Govs to 2-8 for the year while the 2000 Davidson edition now owns the most wins in its 103-year football history.

Davidson jumped out on top in the first quarter when Ryan Hutto blocked a J.P. Hogan punt and Graham Elmore returned 31 yards for a score.

The Wildcats added another two when John Shephard fumbled the ball out of the end zone on a sack following the safety as the ensuing kickoff found the Wildcats in APSU territory.

They quickly made it 15-0 on quarterback Paul Nichols' two-yard score and missed extra point.

The Govs finally rebounded, mounting an eight-play 67-yard scoring, capped by Brandon Garner's one-yard score. Garner, who rushed for 192 yards last week had 95 for the day against a stingy Davidson defense.

Late in the second quarter, the Govs' Bert Britton intercepted Paul Nichols' pass at the Davidson 23. The drive stalled and then Justin Deardorff had his 37-yard field goal blocked by Darryl Childers.

The half ended with John Shephard tossing an interception on a desperation pass from the Davidson 39.

Late in the third quarter, Davidson clinched the contest with an eight-play 48-yard drive as Bryan Fish, who finished with 110 yards (31 carries) on the day, punched it in from one-yard out.

The Govs threatened in the second half but two interceptions and a fumble helped kill any chances of an upset.

With the win, Davidson maintains the nation's longest winning streak (along with Robert Morris) at 15 games. The loss represented the Govs 16th straight loss to Division IAA competition.

Schrader

all six previous semesters.

Schrader is APSU's nominee for the National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame Scholar-Athlete Award.

He also has been a member of the Student-Athlete Advisory Council (SAAC), serving as vice-president in 2000-01.

He serves as Big Brother to two local elementary schools.

Schrader was selected 1-AA Non-Scholarship All-America by Don Hansen Football Weekly in 1999 after racking up 134 tackles.

This season, he has been hampered by a knee injury, missing 1 1/2 games.

He has been credited with 47 tackles.

To be nominated for Verizon Academic All-America, a student-athlete must be a starter or important reserve with at least a 3.2 cumulative GPA (on a 4.0 scale).

He must have reached sophomore athletic and academic standing.

District IV consists of all schools within the states of Ohio, Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky and Michigan.

Women's basketball victorious in pre-season

Austin Peay State University's women's basketball team ended their pre-season schedule with an 87-62 victory over the Nashville All-Stars, Saturday night.

Freshman Gerlonda Hardin recorded a double-double of 16 points and 16 rebounds to lead the Lady Govs. sophomore Brooke Armistead added a team-leading 21 points.

Austin Peay led at the half, 38-30, and used 55 percent shooting from the field to expand the lead in the second half.

The Lady Govs open their season with a 2 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 18, contest in Nashville, Tenn. against Belmont. Austin Peay opens the home portion of its schedule with a Tuesday, Nov. 21, contest against Jacksonville State.

Volleyball season ends in defeat

Austin Peay State University's volleyball team ended its regular season in disappointing fashion, being swept by Eastern Illinois, 3-0 (15-4, 15-7, 15-2).

The Lady Govs finish the regular season with a 17-14 overall record and 8-8 in the Ohio Valley Conference.

The Panthers (17-12, 11-5 OVC) dominated the entire contest, not allowing the Lady Govs to lead at any point during the match.

They pounded Austin Peay with 50 kills and a .327 attack percentage.

The Lady Govs could only muster 32 kills and a .116 attack percentage.

Offensively, only freshman Amy Walk had any success against Eastern Illinois, leading the team with a team-high 10 kills.

Junior Natalie Rossier and freshman Elizabeth Murrietta, each recorded six kills.

The Lady Govs nationally ranked defense was hit hard for the third consecutive match, recording 45 digs during the match.

Leading the defensive effort, Walk and junior Danielle Waldrep each recorded three blocks.

Next up for the Lady Govs is the OVC Tournament, Friday and Saturday, in Cape Girardeau, Mo., hosted by Southeast Missouri.

Austin Peay finished the regular season tied for fourth place in the OVC with Murray State and Morehead State.

However, the Lady Govs own the tiebreaker against both teams and will be seeded fourth in the tournament. They will play fifth-seed Morehead State 1 p.m., Friday, in the first round.

Semifinal matches will be played later on Friday. The championship game is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday.

Annual reading benefits local charity

by Carrie Slaymaker & Holli K. Froemming
The Languages and Literature department, along with the Center of Excellence for the Creative Arts at Austin Peay State University will host its sixth annual literary reading called "Bread and Words" Monday, Oct. 20, at 6:30 p.m. in the Music/Mass Communication building. Four readers are scheduled for this event: Jeremy Joseph, an undergraduate student, Marna Krajewski, a graduate student, Brett Ralph, a professor at Hopkinsville Community College and Barry Kitterman, professor of languages and literature at Austin Peay. They will each read from their original works. When it began in 1994 the fund raiser included only a reading and grossed $125 in proceeds.

Since a dinner was added to the event in 1996 the proceeds have more than doubled. Currently $400-500 are made each year. All money raised benefits Loaves and Fishes, a local soup kitchen. Loaves and Fishes is supported by a lot of different groups including many churches and restaurants, says Kitterman. This year, another element is being added to the event. Chuck Emery, a local blues guitarist, will provide music for this event. Dinner begins at 6:30 p.m. with the readings to follow. Kitterman says children are welcome to attend at parental discretion since these readings are uncensored and adult material may be discussed. The coordinators of the event request a $5 donation at the door. All proceeds benefit Loaves and Fishes. Kitterman says they have no illusion that they are keeping the soup kitchen/food bank going. Officials at Loaves and Fishes say it costs them approximately $1 to serve a meal and they give out about 100 meals a day. Therefore, the donation from this event serves people for less than a week. Kitterman says the event is as much a time to gather for a literary event as it is a fund raiser. "It's a chance for us to get together and to be thoughtful about the hunger in our community," he says.

He also says in the past, the people attending the event have been a wide range of students, faculty, staff and community members. People in the Languages and Literature department and "friends" provide the soup and bread. Aramark provides desert and coffee. Anyone who is interested in making a pot of soup and/or bring bread for the fund raiser, or for more information, should contact Kitterman at 221-7878 or Susan Wallace at 221-7081.

Theatrical performance opens at Austin Peay

"She Loves Me," a romantic musical comedy based on the play "Parfumerie," comes to the Trahern Theatre at Austin Peay State University Nov. 29 - Dec. 3. Presented by the AP Playhouse and the APSU Center of Excellence for the Creative Arts, the production is led by guest director, Tom Thayer. Performances are at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, with a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday. Admission is $6 adults and $4 students, and reservations can be made by calling the Theatre Box Office at (931) 221-7379. The box office is open from 2-6 p.m. weekdays beginning Nov. 20 and one hour preceding each performance. Members of the cast include APSU students MeLynda Belby, Shane Bridges, Jonathan Castile, Dustin Geiss, Heather Guest, Estelle Hatcher, Katherine Hill, Dale Krupla Jr., Marie Lavalley, Angela Leftwich, Stephanie Martz, Jeremy Maxwell, Marie Miller, Vikki Neal, Dyani Saxby, Anna Smith, Nathanael Spurgeon, Alex Syler, Amber Gray Wallace, Jos Willard and Gregory J. Wytiaz. For more information, telephone (931) 221-7379.

Any student wishing to attend various sessions at the African Studies Association conference in Nashville, for free, should contact Dr. Jacqueline Wade at the African American Cultural Center. If you are interested, call her at 221-7120.

Editor seeks higher political standards

Mat LaVigne
Opinion Editor

Well elections are over, sort of, and the country sits in a perpetual limbo waiting to see who the next President is going to be. This whole election has been a joke since the very beginning.

So how else should it end but in the same manner. Is it going to be Bush? Is it going to be Gore? I just can't bear to watch anymore. The suspense is killing me.

I'm going to be honest—another couple of days of this and I am just not going to care at all anymore.

Both candidates, and I do mean both, are acting like two spoiled children fighting over the same toy. They've both acted like spoiled brats from the beginning. Are these really the type of people that we want running our country?

Democracy seems no longer to be of any concern. The idea of majority rule and minority rights might as well be thrown out the window. None of it really matters anymore. It has all boiled down to "I just want to be president, not because I can do a good job or help better the country, it just looks good on my career record."

The White House is not

Barbie's dream house, it is an office that should be taken seriously especially by the candidates.

I know some people will disagree, but I implore you to take an honest look at both of the candidates. One of these men is going to be the leader of our nation, they speak for us to the rest of the world. They portray the image of this country. They need to carry themselves with dignity and respect, two things that seem to be absent from politics lately.

Do we really want a President that cannot control himself while in the public eye?

Abortion has been a big issue this election, too. I was not only shocked but appalled at how many people's votes were swayed on the account of one issue. Abortion is an issue that on a moral basis I'm not going to touch with a ten foot pole, but I will discuss it from a political standpoint.

Abortion is a highly emotive issue that politicians use to tug on the heart strings of people, one way or the other. Believe it or not there are other issues that affect a wider group of people.

I'm not saying not to stand up for what you believe in, but just to remember that when doing so there are other issues to be addressed.

There are some people that seem so ready to let this country be run into the ground as long as one moral issue is changed or protected. The account of one moral issue is not going to keep this country working as a whole.

Finally, what have we learned from this years election? Not to trust politicians? The lack of common sense in the electoral process?

I'll tell you what I've learned. The lesser of two evils, is still evil (Evil in this context is used as a figure of speech it does not have a moral connotation or suggestion whatsoever), and that the Electoral College needs serious revision.

It just seems odd to me that as a country that boasts so much of Democracy, so much in fact that we take it upon ourselves to promote those rights for other countries, that we can allow an archaic institution that adds a superfluous step to the electoral process and basically negates the voices of a large percentage of the population. I for one believe that a revision of the process, a more direct democratic method, could prove beneficial.
