Former student among murder victims

By JEFF GRIMES
news editor

Four people, one a former Austin Peay student, were murdered Sunday morning in a robbery of Taco Bell restaurant on the corner of Riverside Drive and New Providence Boulevard.

The murdered Taco Bell employees were Marsha Klopp, 22; Patricia Price, 28; Kevin Campbell, 22; and Angela Wyatt, 22. The bodies were found around 7 a.m. by the day shift manager when he arrived for work Sunday morning.

Campbell attended Austin Peay last semester, but did not return for this semester. His wife Lori gave birth to a girl two weeks ago.

Clarksville Mayor Don Trotter said, "Anytime something like this happens, it's a tragedy to the community. It's atrocious, it's sickening, and it's deplorable."

"Since this happened yesterday morning, we've mobilized just about everything we had," Clarksville Police Chief Johnny Rosson said in a press conference on Monday. "We're following up numerous leads even as we speak and we have some 50 law enforcement on this thing right now."

"It's an-around-the-clock operation, and we're not going to quit until we get something done," Rosson said.

"We have the same amount of people on patrol. Just about everything we have that is available is on this," he said.

Rosson said while the patrolling officers may be more aware, the city does not have any more men to put on the street.

Jim Taylor, a Tennessee Bureau of Investigation special agent, said as of noon Monday, "We do have suspects. We haven't made an arrest yet."

Taylor said the crime scene crew finished gathering evidence at the scene at 5 a.m. on Monday morning and evidence was sent to the TBI crime lab in Nashville to be analyzed.

He said the amount of money taken or whether the victims were also robbed was undetermined. However the way the assailants entered the building was known, but that information was not being released. He also said it was possible that the victims may have known the assailants.

"We were able to establish that the victims died of multiple gunshot wounds."

"The wounds appear to have come from 9 mm weapons as well as a 12 gauge shotgun.

"At least two individuals were involved in this homicide. We know there was more than one, but we don't know how many. We felt there are at least two involved," Taylor said.

He also said there did not appear to be any motive other than robbery.

When asked if the victims resisted, Taylor said, "When you're facing a gunman without a gun, (there's) not much you can do. If the person has gone in and killed four people, I can't say he wouldn't go and do it again."

The state medical examiner, Dr. Charles Harlan, performed autopsies on the bodies Sunday night and Monday morning and

Japanese exchange program explored

By ALICIA MOOREHEAD
staff writer

Austin Peay students could be speaking Japanese as early as next fall if plans to initiate a student exchange program with a Japanese university are followed through. Dr. Aleeta Christian, developmental studies, recently traveled to Osaka, Japan, to discuss the possible program with Hajime Yamamoto, dean of Kansai Gaidai University.

Kansai Gaidai is a private liberal arts university with only two majors: English and Spanish.

"It currently has student exchange programs with more than 100 colleges in the United States, including Western Kentucky University," Christian said. She added that Western Kentucky has been exchanging students with Kansai Gaidai for a number of years, and the program has worked out well.

APSU currently offers three different opportunities for learning outside of the traditional classroom through trips to Africa, Britain and Mexico.

If the student exchange program with Japan is implemented, it will follow the basic format of the other Study Abroad programs at Austin Peay.

While in Japan, the student can choose to either live in a residence hall or live with a Japanese family who does not speak English. This is so the student will learn the Japanese language quicker, and experience a different culture.

Christian said that a student would be able to choose between spending a year or a semester studying in Japan. The student would pay Austin Peay tuition, room and board, and they would take courses relating to their majors here at Austin Peay.

Christian also said that in order for a student to study in Japan, they would have to take a course in the Japanese language here at Austin Peay.

The course may be offered as early as next fall, and tentative plans are to have a graduate student from Kansai Gaidai come to Austin Peay to teach the course.

"If the course in Japanese is taught next year, then plans are to send the first group of students to Kansai Gaidai the following year," Christian said.

Yamamoto is planning a visit to the Austin Peay campus on Feb. 8. He will be meeting with APSU President Dr. Oscar Page and possibly signing a contract to initiate the student exchange program.

Republican candidates for Congress hit the stump

By JEFF GRIMES

news editor

Seven Republican candidates for Congress spoke at Austin Peay Jan. 26 in the Gentry Auditorium of the Kimbrough Building before a crowd of about 60 people.

The candidates were brought to campus by the APSU College Republicans to present themselves before the public. They are seeking the Republican nomination for U. S. Rep. Don Sundquist's District 7 Congressional seat during the Aug. 4 primary elections.

Candidates who appeared were: Ed Bryant, Henderson; Patrick Hales, Spring Hill; Maida Pearson, Memphis; Charles Salvaggio, Germantown; Willard Summers, Ramer; Aaron Tatum, Memphis; and J.R. Witt, Germantown.

Bryant completed his undergraduate and law studies at the University of Mississippi in 1972 and is married with three children. He served as a lawyer in the military after he graduated. In 1991, he was nominated as U.S. Attorney for West Tennessee by then President George Bush.

Two issues Bryant said were very important were term limits on Congress and crime.

"I am going to stand for those mainstream ideas and the traditional ideas this country needs," Bryant said.

Hales received a bachelor's degree from the University of Tennessee and is married with one child.

"My goal is to change the direction of Congress, slowly, but surely," he said.

He said the government needed more accountability in its spending of tax dollars.

Pearson was the first woman to receive a degree in business administration from the University of Mississippi in 1958. She served as the Tennessee Republican National Committeewoman from 1984-92 and was vice-chair of the Republican National Convention in 1992.

She wants to rebuild the national character, restore the economy and restore the public trust in the government.

Salvaggio has served as mayor of Germantown since 1990. He was the vice-mayor in 1988 and served as a city alderman in 1986. He is married and has two children.

"I'm proud we've had the safest community in Tennessee with the lowest crime rate. I am the only candidate in the forum ever elected to public office," he said.

Summers is a retired school teacher and the former director of the Youth Conservation Corps in Shelby County. He received his bachelor's and master's degree from Memphis State University, and he ran for Congress in 1974.

"I'm against abortion, homosexuality, crime. We are serving as (criminals') slaves," he said.

Tatum said he stood for cutting taxes, spending cuts, prayer in school and he is against homosexuals serving in the military.

He also slammed the current administration for not addressing what are real issues.

"Their idea of solving the crime problem is to take away our guns," Tatum said.

Witt graduated from Memphis State where he majored in public administration and political science. He is married with two children.

Witt said his main priority would be to fight a Clinton health care plan that could hurt small business and reduce the number of available jobs for people entering the workforce.

'Voice of the Govs' resigns as general manager of WDXN-AM

By LAURIE ROGERS

assistant news editor

Lon Sosh, the "Voice of the Govs," has resigned his position as general manager of WDXN-AM (540) radio, effective Jan. 28.

Sosh will continue, however, to announce APSU basketball games for the station until the end of the spring 1994 semester, according to Jeffery Stanfill, comptroller of WDXN.

"Lon Sosh's resignation will not affect Austin Peay in any shape, form or fashion," Stanfill said.

Stanfill said the comptroller's position will assume management of finances for both WDXN and its paper, The Broadcaster.

He also said Susan Ash, WDXN program director, will add management of the air personalities to her regular duties.

Reached at his home, Sosh confirmed he is no longer general manager of the radio station but refused to elaborate on the circumstances. He referred all further questions to Tennaire Communications Inc., owners of WDXN.

Stanfill later confirmed the resignation, adding that Sosh would be issuing a press release Monday.

By press time late Monday, however, Stanfill had not received any further information.

Stanfill was unable to comment on whether or not a $1.05 million sexual harassment/sex discrimination lawsuit filed against Sosh and WDXN in January 1994 was a factor in Sosh's resignation.

Dr. Oscar Page, president of APSU, was also surprised Monday, Jan. 31, by news of Sosh's departure from WDXN.

He said he had spoken with Sosh Friday evening and had not been told of the change in management.

Last week, before Sosh's resignation was made public, Page had noted that the lawsuit is a civil suit not directly involving the university. "We have to assume innocence until proven guilty."

Monday, Page re-confirmed that Sosh would finish the athletic season as announcer for APSU athletics, "unless something comes out that's embarrassing to the university."

The lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court in Nashville by Michelle Broadway, former director of public relations at WDXN.

The suit alleges Sosh asked Broadway for dates, made sexual remarks about her and touched her and other female WDXN employees in a sexual manner.

According to the suit, Broadway made an unsuccessful attempt to lodge a formal complaint against Sosh in a meeting with Tennaire's board of directors in August 1993.

Broadway was hired by Sosh in late June 1993, and by Sept. 7, was no longer employed at the station.

Sosh refused to comment on the suit and repeated what he has previously stated.

"The allegations are completely unfounded and are totally untrue," Sosh said, "and by advice of legal counsel, I have no further comment at this time."

The contract between APSU and WDXN expires at the completion of the current athletic season, and will be prepared for re-bid in March, according to Dr. Kaye Hart, director of athletics for APSU.

Sosh said his future with WDXN, after the current contract expires, is up to the company. "I would say for the benefit of all concerned, I think you need to get the story from them."

said the victims' deaths "could be characterized as execution style."

Harlan said the victims were each shot between five and seven times and there was a total of 48 entrance and exit wounds on the bodies.

Three of the victims were found in the back of the restaurant and one was found near the kitchen.

Montgomery County District Attorney John Carney said the state would probably seek the death penalty in this case.

"Our office would certainly seek that maximum penalty under the law, if the evidence is there to warrant those charges, to include the death penalty in this case,"

Carney said.

Klopp was the assistant shift manger and services for her will be held in Illinois.

Wyatt was enrolled in Draughtons Junior College. A joint service will be held for her and Campbell today at 1 p.m. at First Baptist Church.

Funeral arrangements for Price, a mother of five, had not been made when this story went to press. Price moved to Clarksville from Knoxville because she feared for the safety of her children in the neighborhood where she lived.

Taco Bell set up a memorial fund for the victims' families, but information on that also was not available at press time.

California earthquake disrupts classes for students at several campuses including Cal State-Northridge

By DIANA SMITH
College Press Service

It isn't often that an all-nighter can save your life, but two California State University-Northridge students are alive today because they weren't sleeping when everyone else was.

Amy Miller, starting pitcher for the CSU-Northridge women's softball team, and third-base player Shannon Jones were wide awake and chatting about 4:30 a.m. in their first-floor apartment when the 6.6-point earthquake jolted the San Fernando Valley, crumpling freeways and buildings and creating a hellish scene of gushing water and fire caused by broken water and gas pipes.

One of the women had gone into the kitchen to prepare a snack and the other was in the bedroom when the earthquake caused the ground to leap up as much as 12 feet near the epicenter, creating a jackhammer effect particularly devastating to bridges, roads and buildings.

The upper floors of the apartment complex crushed the lower floors just as Miller and Jones were scrambling to safety.

"One student went out of the front door, and one went out the back window, and that is how they survived," said Kaine Thompson, a spokeswoman for CS-Northridge.

However, a third Cal State student was not so lucky. Jaime Reyes, 19, of the Los Angeles area, was killed when the apartment complex near the university collapsed.

Most of the people who died in the apartment complex were sleeping in apartments on the lower floors, although it was not certain on which floor Reyes was located, Thompson said.

The 6.6-point earthquake caused damage estimated between $15 billion and $30 billion. Nearly 5,000 people were injured during the earthquake, or shortly thereafter, from falling debris and broken glass. The death toll had climbed to more than 50 as of Jan. 21.

Perhaps the most unnerving aspect of the disaster was hundreds of aftershocks, some registering more than 5.0 on the Richter scale, that kept survivors on edge in the days and nights that followed.

Many people chose to sleep outside at night rather than wake up in the dark to the kind of roars and crashes that accompanied the first tremor.

The aftershocks also made assessment difficult because buildings that were inspected and declared safe after the initial quake were further weakened or damaged by more shaking, said Bruce Erickson, director of public relations for CSU-Northridge.

colleges and universities.

"The campus is at or on the epicenter. Our buildings have sustained substantial damage. We are out of business for a couple of weeks," Erickson said. He handled emergency telephone lines, along with 100 senior university employees, including the president and vice presidents, who huddled in a makeshift tent on the university grounds.

All campus buildings were closed until they could be inspected further.

A 2,500-vehicle parking garage collapsed, while fire destroyed two floors of a main science building. The library also suffered significant damage.

The 27,000-student campus's classes may be delayed, depending on how badly the buildings have been damaged.

College of the Canyons, a community college located in Santa Maria, Calif., sustained a minimum of $250,000 in damages because of the earthquake, according to hasty estimates forwarded to the board of governors for California Community Colleges.

"Interior spaces are in shambles," read one preliminary assessment of damage, which noted that the costs could be much higher since the lack of electricity has hampered inspections. "Many pieces of equipment are smashed."

Ventura College reported structural damage to a gymnasium, while Moorpark College reported ceiling damages of about $40,000.

Erickson said the earthquake turned the contents of most buildings upside down, particularly in buildings like libraries where shelves collapsed and thousands of books tumbled into piles on the floors. "It's like being taken into a tumbler and shaken up," he said.

Lynda Fulford, public relations coordinator at California Lutheran University, said toppled shelves and a burst water pipe in a dormitory were among the main damages that occurred at the 3,000-student campus in Thousand Oaks.

Classes started Jan. 18 on schedule at California Lutheran, although two satellite campuses in North Hollywood and Woodland Hills were closed until Jan. 31 because of damages.

Classes were canceled at a number of colleges and universities in the vicinity of the earthquake while inspection teams went from building to building to determine structural safety.

The University of California-Los Angeles canceled many of its Jan. 18 classes after issuing a statement that the campus "sustained relatively little damage."

Zhirinovsky gathers underprivileged's ballot

The "DEF-CON" light (which signals increased danger of nuclear warfare) must have upped a notch at the Pentagon when Russian election results were tallied in December.

Though incumbent president Boris Yeltsin was the

By

victor, the ugly head of fascism reared its head in self-described dictator Vladimir Zhirinovsky, who took a considerable chunk of the vote with his hard-right politics.

Using the ever-erupting chaos, so prevalent in the former Soviet Union, as his fuel, Zhirinovsky fired up enough poor, unemployed and underfed Russians to gobble a substantial percentage of the 55 million votes cast.

Needless to say, surrounding European nations (such as Germany) are less than thrilled that a man who has been linked to anti-semitism and given to nuclear detonation threats is gaining such popularity in Russia. They should be concerned--Russia is politically, economically and socially unstable, a combination that could prove explosive if Yeltsin can't get it together.

This sudden upsurge in popularity for Zhirinovsky can be greatly, but not totally, attributed to protest voting.

The Russian people are tired of astronomical inflation and high unemployment. A pound of meat would cost the average Russian a month's wage. But they are also exhausted with a system that cannot provide the things that have been promised, not just in Yeltsin's presidency, but in Gorbachev's as well. They are tired of empty promises.

The Russian people are not the first to decide to rebel against the regime. Do we all recall the recent American presidential election and the Texas billionaire-gone-political good ol' boy that threatened our two-party system?

The pathetic living conditions of the former Soviet bloc are not directly the fault of Yeltsin, but he asked for it, did he not? Former Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev certainly didn't invite Yeltsin to stage his little coup.

Now, Yeltsin sees his friends turning against him and his enemies are gathering strength. While the voters did choose a new parliament, it is liberally sprinkled with the kind of men that Yeltsin has worked so hard to boot.

Two former Kremlin leaders were returned to parliament, along with several right-wingers who were members of the parliament Yeltsin forcibly dissolved in September.

However desperate the situation is, though, it doesn't warrant supporting a politician who advocates the use of nuclear arms to keep people in line.

We need to be very watchful of a man who has threatened WWII with Germany because they wouldn't allow him to visit their country. We need to quake at the thought of a man who threatens to "create new Hiroshimas and Nagasakis."

Zhirinovsky, who would under normal conditions be considered a radical with no place in politics, may have come to his own in Russia just in time to use the democratic system he so despises for his own ends-- a return to dictatorship.

Letter to the Editor

Condom condemnation misses facts from CDC

Dear Editor,

The 1990s, I had thought, were to be an era where people stopped passing the blame and actually took a stand in confronting the problems facing our society.

Mr. Morgan's letter to the editor, concerning the distribution and usage of condoms, has taken the position that condoms should be the source of heat we burn in our fireplaces. In his words, the "popularity of the condom has increased in direct proportion to the decrease in the didactics and cohesion of the family unit."

I have a question for Morgan. Does he know a surefire way to stop people from having premarital sex? If he does, then he needs to tell us, for I am sure the whole world awaits his answer.

As it is, people are having sex, but should they have to die for it? I don't think so. Condoms, at this point in time, are the best protection available to the public according to the Center of Disease Control in Atlanta. Although it is a fact that 10 of the AIDS virus can, side by side, fit through the pores of condoms, without a condom, the passing on of sexually transmitted diseases and pregnancy is inevitable.

The best way not to get pregnant or contract AIDS is to abstain from having sex. But if you do have sex, the CDC recommends the use of condoms along with the pull-out method. This is still not as safe as abstinence but it is safer than using either method alone or using no protection at all.

Health departments are trying to make protective sex less embarrassing by handing out free condoms. Some schools pass out condoms in the sex education classes. Maybe we should not pass out condoms alone to students. Maybe with each condom passed out information on pregnancy, AIDS and other STDs should be handed out. People who are willing to talk openly about sex and its consequences might can make more headway in convincing teenagers not to have sex as opposed to people who condemn teenagers because of their sexual promiscuity.

I do have a couple of questions for Mr. Morgan. First of all, how do condoms "condemn a person to a life of hardship or even death?" I thought the purpose of a condom was to stop unwanted pregnancy and further hardship. I also thought condoms were to help protect against fatal STDs.

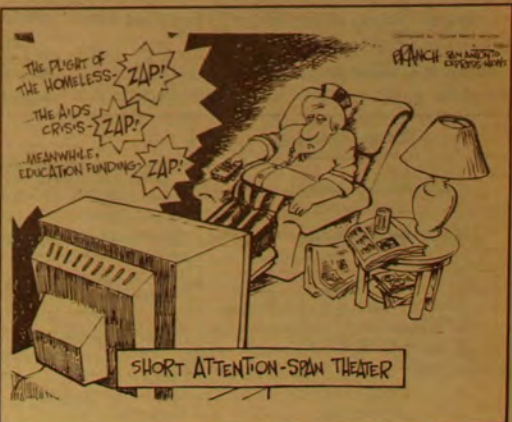

Another question I have concerns the uncaring nature of the condom activist that Mr. Morgan addresses. The whole point of giving out condoms is to help people be safer and more prepared for a choice they have already decided. How can people handing out condoms be considered uncaring when they are looking out for the safety of their fellow man?

Condoms are not a promotion of sex, they are a promotion of safe sex. They reduce the spread of AIDS and protect against unwanted pregnancy. How these little pieces of rubber have brought about the moral decay of a country puzzles me.

In the October edition of the HIV/AIDS report put out by the CDC (available in the library), research shows that heterosexual women was the only category that has increased its percentages of reported AIDS cases. That means people are having sex and some are contracting a deadly disease. Until the American population is convinced not to have sex, condoms and education are the best devices available to the public. I would like to reiterate the fact that the safest sex is abstinence, but I, unlike some people, do live in the real world.

Enter a certain Rev. Louis Farrakhan, leader of the Nation of Islam. For the last few years, Farrakhan has been parading around the country preaching his sermons of anti-semitism and overt racism. He has had much political success.

Recruitment for his organization, the Nation of Islam, has increased dramatically. Farrakhan has also succeeded in striking a "sacred covenant" with the Congressional Black Caucus, bringing the integrity of this group of mostly Democratic legislators (there is only one Republican) to a new low.

But Farrakhan does not do all of his dirty work. He has henchmen. Khalid Abdul Muhammad, a spokesman for Farrakhan, recently spoke at Kean College in New Jersey. In his speech, he harassed homosexuals and Jews, and even offered advice to blacks in South Africa once they achieve total power.

Muhammad said, "We kill the women. We kill the babies, we kill the blind. We kill the cripples. We kill them all. We kill the faggot. We kill the lesbian."

Muhammad should win an award for his effort at Jew-bashing. In his appearance at Kean College, he did much to perfect the age-old art. He did the usual routine of the average anti-semitic, calling Columbia University "Columbia Jew-niversity" and New York City "Jew York City."

More troubling were his views on the holocaust. Clearly, his goal was to place the blame on the Jewish community.

Muhammad said, "They went in there to Germany, the way they do everywhere they go, and they supplanted, they usurped, they turned around, and a German in his own country would almost have to go to a Jew to get money." This would fit very easily within the text of "Mein Kampf"—Hitler's book that would eventually whip Germans into a frenzy and annihilate several million Jews.

Muhammad's speech was greeted by cheers of approval from the student audience, and many faculty members vehemently supported his views.

Scary indeed. But it should be no more frightening than that gala of white-bashing Austin Peay subsidized in the fall of 1992. Anyone remember Sister Souljah's visit? Her speech was accompanied by a wave of hysterical cheering and applause that is comparable to a reception Adolf Hitler would have received in Berlin at the height of his reign.

The administration's reaction to her visit was as equally reprehensible. Not only did they fund the event (Souljah received several thousand dollars for her appearance), they remained silent after that hideous night of character assassination.

Farrakhan and the rest of his henchmen have done a great deal to damage the reputation of the civil rights movement. Simply, if "never again" means anything at all, vendors of hate such as Farrakhan must be prevented from infiltrating the minds of extremely impressionable college students.

Justice means judgment left to jury, not public

Justice in America is founded on the principle of "innocent until proven guilty." Well, here's an irony for you.

USA Today took two public opinion polls: one on Lorena Bobbitt, the manicurist who admitted to mutilating her husband's genitals; and one on Tonya Harding, the Olympic skater in the middle of a controversy over an assault on skater Nancy Kerrigan.

Forty-five percent of the voters in one poll said Bobbitt, who definitely attacked her husband, received a fair verdict of not guilty. However, 52 percent of the voters in the other poll said Harding, who at the time wasn't proven guilty of anything, should not be allowed to compete in the Olympics.

Both polls were taken before Harding's Jan. 27 admission that she withheld evidence about the attack on Kerrigan.

What was that principle of justice again? Let's review.

Lorena Bobbitt cut off her husband's penis and threw it away. She did it. And we know it.

Innocent UNTIL proven guilty, right? Well, we proved her guilty. It wasn't self-defense, because if it were, Bobbitt's lawyers would have had her plead that way. Yet Bobbitt was found not guilty because she was "temporarily insane."

Well, I have a problem with the insanity plea, the "I was caught up in the moment" plea, and the "I am a victim, so I deserve a break" plea. Many of us have been victims, caught up in the moment, or temporarily insane, yet we somehow managed to stay within the confines of the law.

Bobbitt should have received a sentence commensurate with her crime, either in jail or a mental hospital. No book deals. No movies. No praise. Just jail.

And no, I don't care about Bobbitt's husband John. That's a different case and a separate trial, and it should be judged accordingly.

INNOCENT until proven guilty, remember? No one said it would be easy.

But wait, I promised you irony.

The voters who would force Harding to withdraw from the Olympics are clearly punishing her, yet for what? At the time of the poll, they didn't even know she had withheld evidence of the attack.

Innocent until PROVEN guilty, wasn't it? Apparently not for Harding. She was tried and convicted by the public without proof of anything. Nothing like standing behind the spirit of truth, justice and the American way. Of course, it was a little warm behind Harding; too warm, obviously, for the public.

Harding didn't win public support like Bobbitt did because she failed to play the role of vulnerable victim that never fails to blur our vision of right and wrong with tears of, "That could be me."

Heck, Harding was even sentenced by the press: people who should know better.

The Nashville Banner, in a Jan. 25 editorial about Olympic ideals, said Harding should bow out to avoid tainting the spirit of honorable competition, fair play and sportsmanship. As though the Banner writer knows what they are.

The Milwaukee Journal said although Harding may not have known about the attack beforehand, she stands to gain from it, so she should not compete. With that reasoning, every female skater except Kerrigan stands to gain from the reduced competition, so everyone should be thrown out? Pitiful.

The moral is this: "innocent until proven guilty" means just what it says, and as a society, we need to quit saying, "Yeah, but..." Short of self-defense, there is no "Yeah, but..." Not for the defendant, and not for the plaintiff.

If we lose the principle behind the justice, we no longer have the justice.

Govs win fourth straight; Enter important road trip half-game behind Racers

By BYRON SHIVE
sports editor

With a five-game road trip "dead" ahead, including the annual trip to "Death Valley" to play Eastern Kentucky and Morehead State, the Govs will leave Clarksville with a 6-1 OVC record.

The Govs moved to within a half-game of conference-leading Murray State with victories over the Racers on Saturday, and over Southeast Missouri State Monday night.

The Govs utilized balance scoring in disposing of the Indians, 75-69, in a very physical affair.

Tyrone Beck and Marcus Moore each scored 16, with Habib Maiga scoring 13 and Jermaine Savage notching 11.

Austin Peay got off to a slow start, trailing by five after five minutes of play.

However, Maiga entered the game early in the first half to kick-start the faltering Austin Peay offense with two dunks on his way to eight points in the first stanza.

The Govs would get 23 points off their bench in the first half, as they led 36-30 at the break.

Moore also scored eight points off the bench in the half, as APSU shot over 45 percent.

The Govs came out strong in the second half, opening up their largest lead of the game at 46-36 with five minutes gone.

Maiga

However, following a technical foul on Maiga and a 3-pointer by Curtis Shelton, the Indians pulled to within two at 49-47.

It was nip-and-tuck the rest of the way, until Moore hung in the air for a jumper and drew a foul with just under four minutes left in the game.

His ensuing free throw gave the Govs a three point lead.

SEMO scored seven straight to pull within one, but would not score again. The Govs hit five of eight free throws in the final two minutes to ice the victory.

The win upped the Govs' record in conference play to 6-1, including a perfect 5-0 at home.

With six out of the nine remaining conference games on the road, the Govs will need to win away from the friendly confines of Dave Aaron Arena to pull off a regular season title.

Austin Peay will travel to UT-Martin Saturday to play the struggling Pacers, before heading to preseason OVC favorite Tennessee State Monday night, a team the Govs defeated in Clarksville earlier in the season in their Ohio Valley Conference opener.

Following the TSU game, the Govs will play a make-up game at Eastern Illinois Feb. 10 before invading Kentucky for perennially tough games at Eastern and Morehead.

The Govs will not play at home again until Feb. 16 when UT-Martin visits Clarksville.

On Saturday evening, Austin Peay handed Murray State its first conference loss of the season with a thrilling 83-81 win before a season-high crowd of 5,300.

TAKE THAT, REF!—Tyrone Beck, the Govs' starting center, slams home a ferocious dunk despite a personal foul called on Austin Peay in the Govs' hard-fought win over conference-leading Murray State Saturday evening. The 83-81 win moved the Govs into second place, just a half-game behind the Racers. The Govs must survive a treacherous five-game road trip to stay in the OVC race. (photo by J. Daniel Cloud)

Bubba Wells, who was named the OVC Rookie of the Week for the second week in a row, led the Govs with a career-high 27 points, but it was Savage's two free throws with six seconds left that secured the win.

With the game tied at 81 in the final minute, Savage attempted a 17-foot jumper for the win, but was fouled by Murray's Antwan Hoard.

His ensuing free throws and the Racers' missed shot at the buzzer set off pandemonium in Dave Aaron Arena as fans poured onto the court in celebration of the win.

Tyrone Beck scored 17 to go with 14 rebounds, while Savage finished with 12 for the game.

The loss dropped Murray to 6-1, leaving the Racers with a slim half-game margin over the Govs.

Lady Govs inch toward OVC postseason berth

By BYRON SHIVE
sports editor

The Lady Govs inched closer toward an OVC postseason berth with an 84-69 win over Murray State Saturday night, but watched their chances dampen Monday following a 76-66 setback to Southeast Missouri State.

With only the top seven teams advancing to the OVC Tournament March 7-8 in Nashville, the Lady Govs settled into a sixth-place tie following the Murray contest.

However, with the loss to SEMO, the team is left with a 2-5 conference mark (5-11 overall), with a five-game road trip upcoming.

Following a non-conference match-up with East Tennessee State tomorrow night, Austin Peay will travel to UT-Martin Saturday, Tennessee State Monday and then into Kentucky to play Eastern Kentucky and Morehead State.

The Murray win moved the Lady Govs out of the OVC cellar, with APSU already having faced the top four teams in the conference.

The win was never really in doubt for the Lady Govs, who led 42-26 at the halftime break.

The lead stretched to 19 with just over 11 minutes remaining on Sonja Cox's bucket.

Murray would get no closer than nine at 66-57, as the Lady Govs coasted down the stretch to win going away.

Cox, who finished with 14 points, was one of four Lady Govs in double figures.

Kerri Wilburn led the team with 25 points, while Sonia White scored 21 and Georgie Vaughn pitched in with 17.

On Monday, SEMO broke open a close game with eight minutes left in the second half to defeat the Lady Govs, 76-66.

It was back-and-forth in the first half with numerous lead changes and four ties, with no team leading by more than three until SEMO went up by five with a minute left.

The Lady Otahkians would lead at the break at 34-29.

The Lady Govs utilized their improved defensive play early in the second half to knot the score at 38 following Colleen Polzin's lay-up off an assist from Wendy Kincaid.

It remained a close game until SEMO began their late surge with about six minutes remaining.

The Lady Otahkians led by 10 with 2:29 left and the Lady Govs could get no closer than six on Vaughn's free throws with two minutes left.

With Austin Peay forced to foul, SEMO hit its charity shots down the stretch to secure the victory.

Vaughn paced the Austin Peay attack with 20 points.

The Lady Govs also got 17 points and 13 rebounds from Polzin, a freshman from Minnesota.

White, one of the Lady Govs' starting guards, pitched in 10 points before fouling out, while Sonja Cox contributed 10 rebounds, four assists and four blocked shots to go with her six points.

Tennis squads prepared for run at OVC titles

BY BYRON SHIVE
sports editor

After a couple of successful seasons last year, both the men's and women's tennis teams return intact, looking for a run at a conference title.

The Govs, fresh off a second-place regular season OVC finish, finished at 17-5 last year.

The team wound up in third place following the OVC tournament.

"We've got everyone back, so we're looking to build on last year," said David Boyd. "We'd like to have a better conference showing."

With no player younger than a sophomore, experience will play a key in any APSU success.

"We're more experienced now," said Brian Coons. "So we'll know what to expect."

Along with Boyd and Coons, the Govs return Rodney Way, Cristian Duma, Rick Stoller, Mattias Ericsson and Trey McFarlin.

The actual line-up will be determined prior to the first match Friday afternoon, with practice times this week the determining factor.

"Both teams had winning records last year," said Coach Lou Weiss. "If we can stay healthy, then we can be as well or better this year."

The Lady Govs are fresh off a season opening loss to Auburn-Montgomery, the top-ranked NAIA team in the nation last year.

"Even though we lost, it was a good match for us," said Coach Weiss. "It allowed us to get a feel of what we can do and how we're going to be. We played very well against them."

The Lady Govs finished third in the OVC last year, but eye a higher finish this season following last year's 14-5 overall output.

"We're a little better than last year," said Coach Weiss. "We're playing well right now. If we stay healthy and no one gets injured, then we can be as well or better than last season."

The Lady Govs return Susan Sheather at No. 1 singles, a former conference champion who was named OVC Player of the Year two years ago.

Also returning is Martine Edwards, who won the OVC at No. 2 singles last season.

Rounding out the squad are Andrea

Hede, Angie McLean, Stacy Holman and Emily Powers.

Coach Weiss added that Hede and McLean have the potential to win the conference at their positions, while Holman and Powers are "playing much better this year."

After practicing three hours a day, five days a week, both teams are looking for more support.

"We had the winningest record of any Austin Peay team last year," said Coons of the Govs. "As a matter of fact, everyone on the team had a winning record last year."

"We don't get any support," said Stoller. "We could get more support if we had more publicity."

Both teams participated in a developmental fall tournament schedule that included trips to OVC members Tennessee Tech and Middle Tennessee State, as well as tournaments in Jackson, and Knoxville.

Both squads will sandwich five matches around the Eastern Kentucky Invitational Tournament in Richmond.

Also on the schedule is the spring break trip to Hilton Head, S.C.

This year's tournament includes Evansville, Missouri-Kansas, Carolina and Georgetown.

Both squads will be in action Friday afternoon when Southern Illinois Carbondale visits for a 2:30 p.m. match.

With expectations high this season, Boyd encourages everyone to "come and watch."

"If we can get some support, come out and support us . . .," said Coons.

Following the trip to Hilton Head, Vanderbilt will visit from the tennis team of the Southeastern Conference before OVC play begins.

The all-day OVC Tournament is scheduled for April 24-25.

"Some of the teams that we lost to last year," said Boyd, "we can beat this year."

"But some of the teams that we lost to," said Stoller, "can beat us this year. It's a pretty competitive schedule."

The squads will be on the road much of the OVC season. Tennessee State is scheduled at home for both teams, while the Lady Govs will also host SEMO.

NPC sororities boast Rush success, 39 women accept bids

By DARC HARTZ
features editor

At high noon Saturday morning, 39 excited rushees ran up the steps of Ellington to be greeted by the women who they will soon call sisters.

After a week of parties, skits and trying to fit a name with a face, Alpha Delta Pi, Chi Omega and Kappa Delta have added new names to their chapter rolls.

Kappa Delta Sorority's new pledges include Jennifer Bruce, Melissa Hagler, Tammy Higham, Tish Holt, Sharon McRee, Angel Person, Jodi Porter, Clara Sviben and Elizabeth Weakley.

Chi Omega Women's Fraternity's spring pledges are Janie Bagwell, Jenny Banzhoff, Stacey Burney, Jennifer Gibson, Amanda Hall, Kimberly Hendricks, Allison Housley, Heidi Nussbaumer, Neely Quist, Melissa Rogers, Amanda Sears, Kristy Shelton, Sarah Washburn, Cynthia Willard and Ellie Woodard.

Alpha Delta Pi's alpha members are Jennifer Alexander, Kelly Applewhite, Lucia Burke, Katie Broyles, Becca Carmack, Angelia Church, Rebecca Coppedge, Jill Dever, Daneshea Duke, Ashley Hageman, Janis Mize, Dara Miller, Anita Sellers, Michelle Wasden and Jessica Webb.

Not only do these women have many new sisters in their own sororities, but many say the best thing about Rush was meeting new people.

"I made new friends not only in Chi Omega, but also in ADPi and KD," said Amanda Hall, Chi Omega.

Throughout the week rushees were helped by special Rush Counselors called Rho Chis.

Becki Fulghum, Chi Omega; Dana Miller, Alpha Delta Pi; and Mary Beth Young, Kappa Delta; directed rushees to parties and listened to any problems or confusions rushees had.

"The best thing about being a Rho Chi was getting to know all the girls during this memorable time for them and helping to make rush as much fun as possible," Miller said.

Melissa Cannon, Kappa Delta, served as Panhellenic Rush Chair.

"I thought all three sororities did a great job with Rush and got great girls," Cannon said.

IFC fraternities, Kappa Sigma, Pi Kappa Alpha and Kappa Sigma are holding their Rush this week. Preference dinners began last night and bids will be extended on Friday.

English earl argues his ancestor was man behind Shakespeare

A stimulating discussion questioning the authenticity of Shakespeare's writings is slated for Feb. 3 at Austin Peay State University.

Charles Vere, Earl of Burford, will put forth his allegations at 12:30 p.m. in Trahern Theater.

Free and open to the public, his presentation is co-sponsored by APSU's Visiting Speakers and Artists Committee and the Heritage Program.

Burford is a descendent of Edward de Vere, the 17th Earl of Oxford, believed by many to be the man behind the name Shakespeare.

The authorship controversy, simmering for more than 200 years, has come to a boil with mounting evidence that it wasn't Bacon, Marlowe or Derby who wrote the poems and plays attributed to Shakespeare.

Instead, say many, they are the works of the Earl of Oxford, a poet, playwright and patron of the arts at the court of Queen Elizabeth.

Articles on the subject have appeared in the "Harvard Magazine," "The Smithsonian," "The New Yorker" and "The National Review."

Moderated by William F. Buckley, an authorship debate was broadcast in 1992 by VisNet to universities nationwide.

Burford is a dynamic, authoritative advocate of the case for Oxford. He enjoys the challenge of debates and question-and-answer sessions.

He has spoken to more than 100 audiences in the United States, including a capacity audience at the Folger Shakespeare Library.

He has spoken at numerous universities, including Harvard, Yale, Duke and Smith.

He has appeared on many radio and television programs, including a PBS-Frontline documentary, "The Shakespeare Mystery," which explored the case of Oxford.

Invariably, his appearances generate local media interviews, news stories and television reports.

Professor Woodland Hastings, Harvard University, said, "Burford's presentation was impressive both in style and content; it certainly is appropriate for Harvard and other educational institutions to be open (and eager!) to entertain new or different ideas or interpretations."
