

Coed sexually assaulted at APSU

By Billy Fields

An Austin Peay coed, aged 20, was allegedly raped last Tuesday at approximately 6:30 p.m. by an unidentified black male.

The young woman had left her car which had been parked on Marion St.

near the northwest corner of Sevier Hall. While in route to her dormitory room, the black male accosted her and allegedly raped her.

"The investigation has been intense since the rape happened," Bill Singerhoff director of public safety commented. "There have been four or five Austin Peay police detectives and officers on the case since last week.

The evidence collected from the victim and from the scene has been sent to the Tennessee Bureau of Criminal Investigation in Donelson, TN. However, the report will be delayed for several weeks since the criminalist at the Donelson office is the only one in the middle Tennessee region. The report will take at least one month due to this problem.

According to Singerhoff, various individuals answering to the description of the assailant and identified as being in the area at the time of the rape have been picked up, questioned and released.

The investigation of the incident has been coordinated with Attorney General Jack Hestle, FBI agent Mike Bowers and local city and county police. The Austin Peay department of public safety has spear-headed the attempt to apprehend the alleged rapist.

The victim was taken to a local hospital for treatment and observation. Campus police said that she sustained only minor injuries in the assault.

The rape has ignited an outbreak of rumor including one dealing with other sexual assaults which are not true according to authorities.

The Student Government Association at Austin Peay took it up on themselves to serve the student body as extra security people. The group has offered their services as a student patrol which will serve as extra "eyes and ears" for the campus police. Their duties will include escort service as well as helping identify suspicious events on campus.

"I have been here at Austin Peay since Feb. 13, 1978 and I can unequivocally say that there have been no other reported rapes," Singerhoff stated.

"Anyone coming in contact with the student patrol should cooperate," Singerhoff commented. "This will help them and us."

The patrol was established to deal with the present problem at Austin Peay.

The ironic side of the incident was the fact that a "Rape Awareness" program in one of the female dorms had been scheduled the night after the alleged rape. Eighty-five women attended. The program was administered by Sgt. Jack Prout of the campus police. The program included three films and several self-defense demonstrations. Questions were fielded by Prout as well as Dr. Bob Nettles, director of student services.

"We need to keep it in perspective for what it is. There is no one on campus who wants to get the case cleared up more than me," Singerhoff concluded.

Who is out there?

Preventative measures can be taken

Editor's note: This story was written with the help of Tish Birkby, Kathi Bennett, and Sgt. Jack Prout. Materials used included: The Problem of Rape on Campus from the Project on the Status and Education of Women and Development of Medical Center Rape Crisis Intervention by Sharon L. A recent rape on Austin Peay's campus has sent the women scurrying for shelter and the men looking over their shoulders. The campus police are working day and night trying to find more vital information. The campus community has not completely panicked, but there is a mild hysteria brewing in many persons.

Rumors are running wild at Austin Peay. According to the latest gossip, there have been as many as 11 rapes in the past week. Campus police quickly say this is untrue, but the rumors persist.

What can be done to deal with the problem that has finally come to Austin Peay?

There are many myths which accompany the thought of rape. The overwhelming thought is that women who are raped are "asking for it" or "had it coming." In almost all cases this is not true. No woman wants to be abused both physically and mentally, the way most rape victims are.

Next, one must consider that 50 percent of all rapists have a normal sex life. The rape is not the road to sexual gratification. It is a way of forcing the feelings and thoughts on an unwilling person.

The key to dealing with this problem centers around awareness. That is, women must realize the potential problem and must be prepared to deal with the event if it happens.

The following are some preventative measures against rape. The information is taken from a pamphlet from the Office of Crime Prevention, the Kentucky Department of Justice.

Psychological Preparedness

- Accept the fact that you are a potential rape victim.
- Educate yourself concerning rape prevention tactics.
- Consider your alternatives if confronted by a rapist.
- Become aware of localities and situations where rape might occur and avoid them.

In Your Home

- See that your home or apartment door is equipped with a door viewer and dead bolt lock.
- All windows should have secure frames and locks.
- All entrances and garages should be well lighted.
- Trim bushes and shrubbery so no one can hide in them.
- Never hide a key over the door frame or in a flower pot.
- If single, don't put your first name on your mailbox or in the telephone book, use two initials and your last name.
- Do not admit strangers to your home. If an unexpected repairman calls, check his identification and have it slipped under the door.

On the Street

- Don't burden yourself with packages and a bulky purse.
- Dress sanely; cloths and tight clothes hinder quick movement.
- Walk near the curb and away from alleys and doorways.
- Do not give directions or other information to strange men.

In Your Car

- Always lock your car when entering and leaving it.

Myth: Any woman could prevent the rape if she really wanted to, since no woman can be raped against her will. "You can't hit a moving target." Rape victims are asking for it.

Fact: In 87 percent of rape cases, the assailant either carried a weapon or threatened the victim with death if she resisted him. The primary reaction of most victims is fear for their lives.

- Look in the back seat before getting in to see if anyone is hiding there, even if the door is locked.

- Have your keys in your hand so you don't have to fumble before entering the car.

- If you have car trouble, raise the hood, lock yourself in, and wait for the police. If a man stops and offers help, do not get out of the car; ask him to call a service truck for you.

- Do not stop to offer help to a stranded motorist; stop at the next phone booth and call the police or highway patrol.

- If you suspect that someone is following you, drive to the nearest public place (gas station, all-night restaurant) and blow your horn.

Hitchhiking

- Hitchhiking is against the law. Law Enforcement officials urge you not to hitch because of the high risk involved.

Babysitting

- Check with friends who have sat for people with whom you are not familiar.
- Leave their name, address, and phone number with your family and the time you are expected back.
- Once inside the house, lock all doors and windows.
- If you hear strange noises outside the house, call the police.

If Attacked

- Despite all precautions, should you be faced with a rapist, you still have such options as:

- Distracting him; rapists often follow the same pattern

Sexton building completed

By Valerie Stewart

A new building on the campus, identified as the Earl E. Sexton Traffic Safety Education and Driver Licensing Center, has been completed and selected staff members from the Department of Health and Physical Education have moved into the complex. A portion of the building is being utilized as a licensing center by the Tennessee State Department of Safety. In the area to be used by the University are office space, a multiple purpose room, and classrooms.

Offices in the building are to be utilized by staff members who are assigned the responsibility of developing and implementing programs which will be conducted within the center.

The multiple purpose room may be utilized for conferences, as a work place for graduate assistants, for seminars, for classes, and for planning and development activities. One of the classrooms will contain a sixteen place driving simulation installation. A driving simulator is the mock-driving compartment of a vehicle.

Programmed instructional packages are used to assist the student in learning basic driving skills: steering, braking, signaling, etc. Special emphasis is placed on the development of perceptual skills. A multi-media system will be installed in the other classroom. The system includes a series of films and filmstrips that enable the instructor to introduce students to a variety of traffic situations and then have them study the scenes, respond to questions about the scenes, and analyze the responses.

The center is to become the focal point of numerous activities. The driving simulators and the multi-media equipment will be utilized in the instructional program designed to prepare high school driver education teachers. Additionally, local school systems driver education students will come to the center and receive instruction in these areas.

Seminars will be conducted for local driver education teachers so that they may become familiar with the equipment. Additionally, the multi-media may be utilized by the health and physical education faculty and other interested faculty. Seminars and workshops are to be conducted in the center for special groups, i.e., school bus drivers, traffic violators, elementary teachers, enforcement personnel, community health groups. Research activities which focus upon instructional methods and techniques and driver performance are to be conducted through cooperative efforts of the university, the Tennessee Department of Safety, and selected agencies in federal government.

In addition to the complex, the university is in the initial stage of the development of a multiple-car driving range which will be located behind Burt School and across from the center which is on Eighth Street. The multiple-car range is a paved driving area which has numerous configurations that enable the student to practice driving maneuvers, i.e. left and right hand turns, backing left and right; angle and parallel parking, offroad recovery, and skid control.

The center is one facet of the University's efforts in the area of occupational health and safety. Mike Davis, dean of the college of education and human services, and Joe Brown, chairman of the department of health and physical education have selected new staff members, given direction to course revisions, and initiated development of new programs. Joe Miller, who has a background in health education, and Wayne Chaffin, who has experience in safety education, have joined the faculty.

Various courses have been revised so as to include units of instruction relative to the new facilities and equipment. A new graduate curriculum in the area of occupational safety has been developed and courses from the program are being offered this quarter. A new program in the area of community health is being developed and will be offered to various university committees for consideration in the immediate future.

LAID BACK--Dr. Solie Fott takes a long draw from his pipe during a discussion of the semester change.

Kirkpatrick named nurse manager

Upon the Nov. 3 resignation of Carol Daniel, nurse manager of Austin Peay State University's Infirmary Vera Kirkpatrick was appointed to fill that position.

Kirkpatrick has worked at various hospitals since she was 16 years old when she began her 28 year career in a small hospital in Illinois. In 1954, Kirkpatrick took the state test to become a licensed practical nurse and in '68 she received her registered nurse's degree from Washington State University.

Since that time Kirkpatrick has worked in the Montgomery County Hospital (now The Clarksville Academy) where she was the head of the newborn nursery, did volunteer nursing in Germany as well as the Fort Campbell Hospital, and worked in Montgomery County's General Care Convalescent Center. In 1960, Kirkpatrick and her husband were stationed in the Philippines where she organized a volunteer nursing organization for crippled children (the "Pink Ladies") in Mary Johnston Hospital, the volunteer group still exists today. In January of 1978, Kirkpatrick accepted the position of resident nurse at Austin Peay.

Kirkpatrick explained that her double position as resident nurse and nurse manager was a first. She said that she would hold both positions until June, when it will be discussed whether or not changes should be made.

Kirkpatrick expressed the importance of making

Austin Peay students aware of the services of the infirmary. "We offer various services ranging from free blood pressure checks and allergy injections to tuberculosis and tetanus injections (which are sold at cost to students). We offer family planning services for all students, faculty and staff with cost according to income, on the second and fourth Monday of each month."

Kirkpatrick explained that the clinic is open to the students at all hours for emergencies.

Dr. A. R. Boyd is available for the students each morning at 7:30 and the nurse manager is available from 7 a.m. - 3 p.m. each day. Two relief nurses are also employed at the infirmary. "When we feel that students require overnight care, we have five beds to accommodate them," explained Kirkpatrick.

Kirkpatrick expressed her feelings about her new position by saying, "I truly enjoy my new position. Having had three teenagers I feel that I can relate to the students. I just love to play Mom. I love talking to all of the students."

Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping recently began a visit to the United States, symbolizing the further opening up of China.

Teng's visit is the first ever to the United States by a Chinese Communist political leader and it promises to be one watched by people the world over. Nearly 1,000 reporters from around the world applied for permission to cover the visit to the White House.

Teng is scheduled to visit several major factories in cities across the United States, including an automobile factory, airplane factories, and the space center in Houston. Media coverage of the visit will be telecast to China to give the people a look at what Teng hopes for in their country.

The visit by the Chinese leader is intended to display President Carter in a light in which no recent president of the United States has been shown. Carter will be displayed as a leading figure on the world stage and as one who is capable of further opening up relations with the world's most populated country.

This visit, although it will be a major breakthrough in US-China relations, is not expected to yield any agreements between the United States and China in the areas of military involvement or trade with the country.

What is more likely, it seems, is that Teng's visit will open the door to possible later agreements, which may begin in February when Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal visits China.

The improvement of relations between China and the Americans has initiated extreme concern on the part of the Soviets. President Carter announced that Russian President Leonid Brezhnev contacted him directly last week to get assurance that the United States would not sell arms to China.

Such an act on the part of the Russian president shows the country's fear of the modernization program in China, as well as of the contact between China and the United States.

At least six hours of private conversation between Carter and Teng have been scheduled during the visit, supposedly to lay the groundwork for Chinese-American cooperation in economic and political matters.

During his first real week in office, Governor Lamar Alexander gave two speeches, one last Thursday and another on Friday. His speech Thursday centered around one of the number one issues facing the governor—what to do about former Governor Ray Blanton's marathon signing session two weeks ago, which granted clemency to 52 persons, 24 of whom were convicted murderers.

Alexander has recently ordered the detention of sixteen convicts who were granted "time-served" commutations by Blanton. These persons are presently eligible for release as a result of Blanton's action and their being held is receiving much criticism from some attorneys.

Attorneys for several of the prisoners still being held have accused Alexander of defying a 1977 state Supreme Court Ruling, which states that the governor has the absolute right to grant commutations as well as paroles.

Alexander stressed during his speech Thursday that he is being very careful to see that the people of Tennessee and the people "behind bars" are both treated fairly. He emphasized the fact that he will give "the same kind of equal and fair treatment to one person as to another."

State Attorney General William Leech has said that there is no restriction on the number of commutations a governor may grant, but he also has said that a succeeding governor has the authority to block the action before it is completed.

Alexander has set forth six recommendations for changes in the pardon and parole system in the state, including mandatory minimum sentencing and a complete restructuring of the Board of Pardons and Parole.

Alexander stated in his speech that there is a "crisis" in the administration of justice in the state. He explained that the situation demands "careful scrutiny" and he will give it just that. He urged the General Assembly to do the same.

Tuition at Austin Peay State University has increased 43.4 percent since 1972, a report from the Tennessee Student Assistance Corp. shows.

The report listed several public and private institutions in Tennessee, and the average increase (among both public and private) since 1972 is 42 percent. Private institutions averaged an increase of 53 percent, public about 34 percent.

How does Austin Peay compare to other public universities?

MTSU's increase was 23.4 percent, TSU's increase was 31.6 percent, and UTK's increase was 27.8 percent. Despite the fact that Austin Peay's percentage of increase was greater, only one of the above-mentioned schools has lower tuition. Tuition at MTSU is $14 less-$442 per year as compared to Austin Peay's $456 per year.

The Montgomery County Heart Association held a fund-raising dinner last Thursday evening at the St. Mary's Center in Clarksville.

Former Governor of Tennessee Winfield Dunn was on hand for the dinner. Dunn is now senior vice president of Hospital Corporation of America and is chairman of the Middle Tennessee Heart Drive this year.

Dunn explained in his brief talk that some 26 million persons in the United States are affected by heart or vascular disease, and stressed the fact that heart disease is only one of the areas in which researchers are now making headway.

"I want to issue a challenge (to the people of Montgomery County) to be a part of the tremendously successful campaign to fight cardiovascular disease," Dunn said. He urged persons to become involved in volunteer activities for Heart, "to produce as Montgomery County has not produced before," and to help make Middle Tennessee play an active part of what he called "this record-breaking year."

Alumni of Alpha Phi sorority are heading all Montgomery County Heart Fund activities this year. Contributions to the Heart Fund may be sent to the Montgomery County Heart Fund, P.O. Box 3082, Clarksville.

Attitudes about rape must change

Rape?
"You can't rape the willing." "I should be so lucky."

We've all heard these or similar comments when the subject of rape comes up in a conversation. And they are usually spoken by young women.

As long as the attitudes implied in those statements exist, the crime of rape will not be taken seriously by men, other women, police agencies, or the judicial system.

Almost always, rape is believed to be a sexually motivated crime. However, according to a study by the Project on the Status and Education of Women, "psychologists have noted that rape is an act of physical violence, generally motivated by feelings of hostility, including rage, hatred, contempt and the desire to humiliate."

The consideration of rape in this context is hardly a joking matter. In essence, every woman, simply because she is a woman, is a potential victim of a crime of violence.

In our society, most people have the attitude that "it can't happen to me." This is true even in the case of rape. But last year, in Nashville alone, the ages of victims in reported rape cases ranged from three to 87 years old. There is no average age of rape victims. The major motive for rape is aggression, anger and hostility, not sex.

The idea that a woman can prevent a rape or the no woman can be raped against her will are horrifying. The truth, in fact, is that in 87 percent of rape cases, the assailant either carried a weapon or threatened the victim with death if she resisted him. The primary reaction of most victims is fear for their lives.

Women are in a precarious situation. One does not have to be a victim of rape to be affected by rape and the fear of rape. The threat of rape can prove damaging. Some women even begin to structure their normal daily activity around avoidance of crime.

The key to rape prevention is AWARENESS. Women must be aware of the fact that each one of them is a potential victim. Women must be aware and alert when they are in high risk areas, such as parking lots and garages, poorly lit open spaces, empty buildings, and deserted laundry rooms.

Women must be aware that not one site is immune; rape can occur at any time of day in the most public of places.

When rape is discussed, it must be discussed seriously because it is an extremely serious subject. Just tale to a rape victim, there is no humor in her voice. The trauma that one must endure lasts a lifetime.

Though treatment of rape victims has improved, only psychologically strong women are able to successfully cope with the scars left by such a brutal, terrifying experience.

The All State believes that attitudes about rape must be changed. As long as rape jokes are told, rape will be a joke. As long as women are not concerned with the threat of rape, the threat of rape will not exist, but rape will.

SGA restores paper's faith

Our faith in the SGA Senate has been restored. The impromptu meeting called two weeks ago was ruled out of order by SGA Vice-President Van Ruggins. As stated in the SGA Constitution, senate members must be notified at least 24 hours in advance of a meeting.

The special meeting was called so that a resolution expressing the SGA's support of the quarter system could be voted on. The vote taken at the meeting was also ruled out of order, and the resolution was reconsidered during last week's regular senate meeting.

Though there was some debate on the issue, the resolution passed. In effect, it becomes the official student body opinion in reference to the proposed semester change.

We are relieved to see that the proper steps were taken to allow for discussion and consideration of the controversial proposal. Professionalism has not been sacrificed to impulsiveness.

letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

I have a grievance to air that concerns a certain sales organization that has been using Austin Peay facilities gratis for many years.

A comparable state of affairs would exist if a shoe salesman posted advertisements on all of our available bulletin boards and sold shoes out of a study room in the library. Does that sound ridiculous? Then why do we allow the International Meditation Society free run of the campus?

I am not opposed to meditation. Its values have been documented subjectively and objectively. But there is no secret in learning to meditate; anyone who'll spend 30 minutes researching the topic will find that to be true.

I am not opposed to people doing foolish things with their money, either. But what rankles me is to see this organization make sales on our campus while using its facilities free of charge.

How about it, fellow Peaybeings?

Allen West

raped on Austin Peay State University's beautiful campus, newly decorated with trees and carpet.

I am not one to beat around the bush, so I will ask you right out, "Security, where in the hell are you?" Oh, I forgot, you have parking tickets to write.

Somehow I thought the meaning of security was to secure, you know—to secure the welfare of people, things, etc. You know, now that I think of it, I believe my sister and I made the right decision, the parking tickets rather than depending on you for any type of protection.

Maybe the RAPE of one young lady (as of this year) does not disturb you, and maybe you feel sitting in a parked car in front of the Old Gym or Cafeteria will protect a person while being brutalized in any manner.

I have only one last question, Security Guards and Superiors, Can you handle it??? Think about it while taking one of your longer breaks.

Sincerely,
Bonnie Andrews

Dear Editor,

Last year my sister and I paid a total of $167 for parking tickets, give or take a few dollars. Tonight I have learned we were paying for the welfare of our lives.

You see, we both shared a room in one of the finer dorms, Harned Hall. Being college students and receiving close to zero financial aid, there was (as) a necessity to work.

We did not get off work until 1:30 a.m. and the majority of the time the only vacant parking spaces read RESERVED. As we all know the infirmary is not open at 1:30 a.m. (or is it?). So whether alone or with one another, we parked in these RESERVED spaces to keep from being molested on a dark secluded hill.

As I stated earlier we paid for the security of our lives at APSU, more than twice. I say this because I have just learned of a young lady who has been

A little over a year ago I began attending classes at Austin Peay. At that time the price for a small cup of coffee at the Gove's grill was 20¢. Last week the price of a small cup of coffee was hiked up to 32¢. This well over a 50% increase within one year.

It seems rather odd to me that while market coffee prices appear to be going down, SAGA can justify jacking up their prices. It also seems odd that while the price of a small cup of coffee was raised, the price of a large cup stayed the same.

That does not make any sense unless one is trying to eliminate selling small cups of coffee. After all, by purchasing a large cup, the students definitely get more for their money.

But what if you don't have time for a large cup

- and disrupting his script might give you time to escape.
- Women have been known to dissuade a potential rapist by screaming, claiming to have VD or cancer, reciting nursery rhymes or scriptures.
- The choice of whether or not to physically resist can only be made by you. If the rapist is armed, your options are limited; there is no way to predict his actions.
- If your choice is to resist physically, take advantage of "weapons" you may have in your purse: hair spray, finger nail file, etc.
- If Raped
- If you are actually raped, there are still things you can do to help yourself.
- Try to keep a cool head.
- Notice everything you can about the rapist: his speech, his hair, his clothes, any scars, the direction he takes when leaving, etc.
- Try to determine his height in comparison to you or a door.
- If you are raped somewhere other than home, (a car, a strange apartment) remember everything you can about the setting. Try to leave your fingerprints everywhere you can. Try to leave some small personal item such as a button, earring, lipstick—anything which can be traced to you.
- Immediately call the police, and be willing to prosecute.
- Preserve all physical evidence carefully. Do not bathe or wash clothing. Do not touch any object handled by your attacker.

Campus rapes occur in several areas. Since the college campus is usually considered a "rapist's paradise," women must be very careful. The easy accessibility, the large concentration of females and the fact that they normally travel in a pattern route all contribute to the idea of a campus being a paradise.

Rape can occur at any time and to any person. On the campus the most likely areas are parking lots, poorly lit open areas, empty academic buildings, deserted laundry rooms as well as campus basements.

According to studies the hours between 5 p.m. and 5 a.m. are when most rapes happen. Women who attend night classes are very much in danger if proper precaution is not taken.

While there is no standard age for rapists, the average age is late teens and early 20s. While there is a high number of rapes committed by students, the number of non-students involved is relatively high, also.

There is a type of rape known as the "date rape." This involves a woman who is out with a male she knows, but not very well. The rape can be triggered by a male's anger when she decides not to have sex with him. The pressure not to report the rape often causes the female more problems.

"Gang rapes" are another sort of campus-related assault. This happens when more than one male attacks a female. The biggest fear in this type of rape is that there is a likelihood of violence.

There are steps which can be taken by the college to help fight the possibility of rape. Leaving classroom lights on, frequent patrolling, stationing of guards at selected points on campus, the implementation of escort services, as well as other measures can help ward off the rapists to a big degree. However, even with the most innovative measures the rapists can and will find ways to circumvent the precautions.

No campus rape prevention program can be a success without publicity and educational programs. University publications can help in this area by informing the campus of what is going on. Progress reports must be relayed to the student body. Presentations and pamphlets must be added to to campus community in order to make females and males aware of the potential problems of rape.

Self-defense programs can also be of help. At a recent "Rape Awareness" program conducted by Sgt. Jack Frost of the AFSU Department of Public Safety, a demonstration was presented by Tony Pratt and Robert Gleichman. Their particular method of prevention was Tae Kwon Do karate. At this time the two are starting a self-defense class for women. More information can be obtained by calling 647-7785.

The final point which must be realized—there is no solution to the problem of rape on this college campus or anywhere else for that matter. There is nothing the Austin Peay Department of Public Safety can do to guarantee the total security of the campus despite their constant effort. The campus community can help themselves by being aware of the dangers which may exist around a corner.

No one female is safe from the savage attack of the rapist. No one can tell you what to expect because it is different every time. The only thing that can be said is be careful and watch your step. Otherwise, that step may be your last.

It was also brought to my attention by a faculty member, Dr. Buddy Grah, that the teachers and staff enjoy a 50% discount on coffee in the teacher's lounge. They pay 15¢ per cup and have a private lounge to drink it in.

I can see certain privileges being afforded faculty members such as a private lounge. But I can't see charging the people who have already finished school, who are holding down good paying jobs, (some paying up to and over $18,000 per year), only half the price of what a student on a fixed income of much less has to pay.

before classes? Why should we as students have to be limited to only one choice? If the current price trend continues, this situation may soon become a reality.

To use a popular phrase, the students of this campus are being "ripped off" and we will continue to be ripped off as long as we allow SAGA to do it.

It is within our power as students to do something about this. SAGA was contracted to serve the students, not to steal their money.

If we organize against these current price increases we can bring them down. By bringing your own coffee to school in a thermos and brown-bagging, we can beat these "rip offs" at their own game.

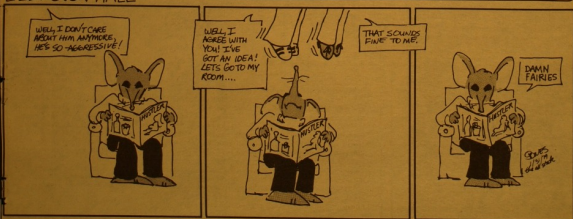

I am asking for the support of all student organizations to help stop these price hikes now, before it gets any worse.

As a member of the SGA senate, I can promise that the price hike will be officially looked into. As president of the Psychology Club, I am asking all of its members to boycott buying food products in the student center and urge that all the organized clubs on campus do the same. It is about time we the students take a stand against SAGA.

I don't care what kind of contract they have, if enough students get together on this we can either get the prices lowered or get rid of SAGA!!!

"Movie, Movie" reminisces '30's

"Movie, Movie," the ITC Film for Warner Bros. release, is an affectionate and gently humorous 1970s look at the kind of film fare which was so popular with audiences during the 1930s.

Heading the cast of the unique film, constructed in the form of a classic double feature, is George C. Scott, who plays different roles in each of the "features" as well as appearing in the previews of coming attractions which separates "Dynamic Hands," a "hard-boiled" boxing story, and "Baxter's Beauties of 1933," a heart-warming backstage musical.

Produced and directed by Stanley Donen from a screenplay by Larry Gelbart and Sheldon Keller, "Movie, Movie" also stars Trish Van Devere, Barbara Harris, Red Buttons, Barry Bostwick, Ann Reinking, Art Carney and Eli Wallach, most of whom play roles in both movies within the movie.

Donen, in describing the film, notes: "As with much of the movie fare of the 1930s, our film is meant to entertain and touch you at the same time. Though the stories appear less realistic than what is current today, we ask you to laugh and enjoy, and also to get your emotions caught up in our two stories. We hope that people will not laugh at the film but will laugh with it, as we did while making it."

Hurley performs lead

Richard Hurley, a junior speech and theatre major at Austin Peay State University was recently chosen for the title role of Pippin, Fort Campbell Cabaret Dinner Theatre's newest production.

Pippin is the son of an actual king, King Charlemagne or Charles the Great of the Holy Roman Empire. The play depicts his search for complete fulfillment. Pippin tries war, women and sex, politics and love. After exhausting all these possibilities, the lead players, who have belittled and heckled him throughout the play, almost persuade Pippin to commit suicide. It is at this point that love triumphs over all as Pippin realized that although love isn't perfect, it is the best this world has to offer.

Pippin is called a rock musical. Hurley explained that this meant the songs were of contemporary style. "It's a beautiful musical, my favorite as far as musicals go. The plot is unusual. There are quite a few magic tricks involved," Hurley commented.

Hurley's past experience includes work on "almost every technical aspect of Austin Peay's theatre." He is currently make-up designer for Peter Pan. Hurley believes his most outstanding performance to date was his premier at Austin Peay as Renfield in Ted Tiller's Count Dracula.

Hurley stated, "in many aspects I'm like Pippin, but I know what I want to do. I promised myself if I ever got a chance I'd try out for this play. I usually wouldn't try out for anything but Austin Peay shows, but I really like this one. My priorities are set."

Pippin opens to the public Feb. 9 with shows on Feb. 9, 10, 16 and 17 at 6 p.m. Tickets are $6, including dinner. Reservations can be made by calling 796-2722.

Hurley said, "I hope everyone will come see Pippin, but I urge them to make reservations ahead of time. If enough reservations are made, the show will run longer; which, of course, I hope it does."

GMAT

Test registration today

Registration deadline for persons who plan to take the Graduate Management Admission Test (GMAT) at Austin Peay State University on March 17 is fast approaching.

Jane Southard, testing program coordinator at APSU said, "Those wishing to take the GMAT in March are to submit their registrations to the APSU Testing Center, 125 McReynolds Hall, before Jan. 31."

According to Southard, if the center receives 25 or more applications before the registration closing, then the GMAT will be administered on the APSU campus March 17.

If less than 25 registration forms are received, they will be forwarded to the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, NJ, and each applicant will be assigned to a nearby testing site.

Special testing requests for persons with qualified handicaps should be made individually with the testing program coordinator.

Bulletins of information describing registration procedures and registration forms may be obtained from the APSU Testing Center, 125 McReynolds Hall.

Minimum wage

Are students underpaid?

A lot of students have been wondering why they didn't get a raise this month when minimum wage was increased, according to Student Financial Aid secretary, Beth Seay.

The federal minimum wage established by the Department of Labor was increased from $2.65 to $2.90 per hour effective Jan. 1, 1979. However, state institutions such as Austin Peay are not covered by the minimum wage requirement. The only wage regulations that the university has to comply with are those the US Office of Education sets concerning the college work study program.

Once again, because Austin Peay is a state institution, it does not have to comply with the established sub-minimum wage paid most college work-study students. The school is simply required to pay work-study students at rate that is consistent with other wage rates on campus.

Both general campus workers and work-study students are presently paid $2.30 per hour.

It has only been three years since federal courts ruled that state institutions were not covered by the provisions in the Fair Labor Standards Act. Up until that time, the university had either paid minimum wage or a sub-minimum wage that was 85% of the minimum wage. If students at Austin Peay were paid that present sub-minimum wage they would be earning $2.47 per hour.

John Bratcher, the director of financial aid at Austin Peay, recommended last March that wage rates be increased but was told that the university could not afford it.

"There haven't been any budget conferences yet this year," Bratcher said, "However, I'll recommend again that they (wage rates) go up."

MTSU forms horse school

The Middle Tennessee State University Horse Science School will be conducted at Austin Peay State University at the McCord Building starting Feb. 30. The school runs for eight nights on consecutive Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p.m.

The school is open to anyone interested in horses. It should be of particular interest to the amateur horseman who would like to acquire more basics in horse science.

The school is being sponsored by the MTSU department of agriculture and public service horse science program in cooperation with the APSU agriculture department.

Topics for the school include training, preventive medicine, hoof care, reproduction, nutrition, selection, first aid and several other management areas. The class will incorporate demonstrations and lectures. Students will be given a horse-science handbook containing lecture notes and publications relative to horse science.

Ten MTSU horse science and agronomy staff, area veterinarians, trainers and a farrier will serve as instructors. At least two of the sessions will be spent with a farrier and trainer with live horses in a demonstration-type presentation.

Last year schools were conducted in Chattanooga, Cookeville and Nashville. Dave Whitaker, director for the school, said "Response to the schools was tremendous. Evaluat-tions by the participants were most complimentary of the course and we had a maximum number of participants in each location."

For a free brochure, contact Gaines Hunt at the department of agriculture, APSU, (615) 646-7272 or Dave Whitaker, MTSU, (615) 898-2832. Cost for the school is $15. Deadline for registration is Feb. 15.

Intern named

By Elizabeth Dole

Dr. Linda Rudolph, an associate professor in the Psychology Department, will serve a one year internship as assistant dean in the College of Education and Human Services under the Administrative Internship Policy, this year.

Assisting Dr. J. Michael Davis, the dean of the college, Rudolph will be receiving experience at the administrative level, which is the primary objective of this program.

"It's a relatively new program that is going to work out well," Rudolph commented. Her statement concerned the administrative internship policy here at Austin Peay and her internship assignment.

Rudolph describes her responsibilities as being variety of duties, made available to her by Dean Davis, to help her understand what is going on in his office. In addition to this internship, Rudolph assumes her regular faculty responsibilities as a psychology professor and Coordinator of the Counseling Program in the Psychology Department.

Enjoying her internship and describing Davis as being thoughtful and understanding, Rudolph said it is helpful being able to see the problems that Davis has to work with.

Rudolph also commented that the program promotes understanding and communication between the faculty members and the administrators.

Students study "sticks"

By Paul E. Wandler

The LDS Institute Program is now in full swing at APSU. Mormon instructor Ricky Rich has issued the call for all interested APSU students to come to institute class and bring their "Sticks." Sticks is a Biblical word for Holy Scriptures.

The Institute Program is the arm of the Institute of Religion Department of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon). "Its purpose is to edify and strengthen college students morally, ethically, and emotionally. It centers around the Gospel of Jesus Christ and the message of the restoration," Rich said.

The course of study for Winter Quarter is Religion 130, Sharing the Gospel. All Institute courses are non-credit college level courses. Rich described the class as being more relaxed than the regular college classes but he went on to emphasize that it was a course of study and not a Sunday school.

There is no deadline for starting the class which meets Tuesdays at 6 p.m. in room 116 of the Claxton building. All interested persons may attend, although it is primarily designed for APSU students. There is a $3 fee for reproduction materials and another $2 fee for the manual. Students who plan to attend should bring their scriptures with them. Rich said there will be a great deal of discussion concerning moral ethics.

The Institute program provides a focus point for LDS students. It strengthens them and helps them to live better lives. "It's not necessarily that a person is known by the company he keeps" but "that a person is made by the company he keeps." Rich went on to say that the LDS Institute Programs gives the college student "the opportunity and means to improve himself by association, with people who have high and perhaps even heavenly goals."

Its basic gospel purpose is to make "bad men good and good men better." Through the study of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, we realize that it is difficult to be idealistic and live in a world that emphasizes the practical. Rich stated "if the world is sick and if there is physical and moral sickness in the world then the medicine is the fullness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The cure is people with healthy attitudes and self-mastery."

Mormons are noted for their thrift and industry and for their ability to withstand personal hardships. They are also famous for taking care of their own members. Mormons were responsible for developing large areas of the Western United States and they currently have the world's largest genealogical research center," Rich said and continued to say that more members of the Mormon Church are in Who's Who than any other religious or philosophical group.

Rich is an instructor in the APSU College of Business. He is a native of Tennessee. He was born in Lebanon and raised in Mt. Juliet. Rich joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in May of 1972 while he was a senior at Memphis State University. After receiving his Bachelor's degree, he attended graduate school at Brigham Young University where he received his masters in August, 1978.

Choir to perform at Opryland Hotel

By Dinah Jill England

Another honor has been bestowed upon an Austin Peay vocal group. The choir has been selected to perform for the regional meeting of the Music Educator's National Conference, which will be held at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville Feb. 28 thru March 3.

"The convention will consist of seminars, clinics, and concerts, and it offers an opportunity for those present to learn from one another," according to Dr. George Mabry, director of the group.

About 5000 are expected to attend the affair. The 74 member Austin Peay choir will be performing for the general session meeting March 1 at 8 p.m. The performers were chosen by an audition tape which was submitted a year in advance. Forty-nine college groups from fifteen states auditioned, and only three were chosen. The Austin Peay choir was the only college from Tennessee to be selected for the honor.

This is the second consecutive year the APSU group has appeared for an MENC gathering. Last year they performed for the Tennessee Music Educators Association meeting at Opryland.

On March 3, Mabry will be directing a session on choral conducting-analysis/style. The Dickson County High choir, whose director, Cindy Freeman, is an Austin Peay graduate, will be the demonstration choir for Mabry.

Any student interested in becoming a member of the group is invited to audition for Mabry. It consists of students from a great variety of academic concentration. The group gives a concert each quarter, with the next performance scheduled for March 11.

Heart campaign kicks off

The Austin Peay Alpha Phi Epsilon Omicron Chapter kicked their 1979 Heart Fund Campaign Tuesday night with a "Heart Desert" in the hallroom of the Joe Morgan University Center.

The Alpha Phi Chapter at Austin Peay has been helping hearts for years and 1979 is no exception. Last year alone, Peay's Alpha Phi Chapter contributed $1,100 to the American Heart Association in the name of the Alpha Phi Foundation. They did all of this through their sale of Heart Lollipops, shoot tosses at basketball games, and their recent basketball dribbling marathon. Their contributions go to the Alpha Phi Foundation where it is given to the Children's Hospital of Los Angeles in the Alpha Phi Cardiology Fund. Another fund is provided by them also. The Department of Pediatrics Cardiac Aid Fund at the University of Minnesota Medical School is yet another program benefiting from Alpha Phi's generosity.

At the recent Alpha Phi Convention, Austin Peay's Chapter was recognized with two distinguished international awards. They also received one of the three highest awards given, Best Project Benefitting the Alpha Phi Foundation for Heart Projects. They received special recognition for their donations of more than $1,000 in the name of the Alpha Phi Foundation.

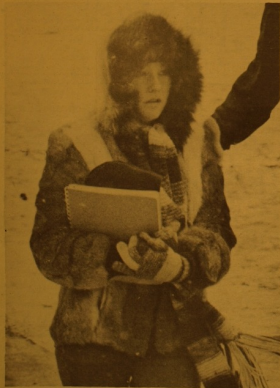

After all of their hard work and many awards, Joi Lyons, Epsilon Omicron president, told the crowd at their Heart Desert.

"None of this would be possible, however, without the help of concerned individuals like yourselves . . . and to the students and administration of this University, as well as the citizens of Clarksville, we owe our success, thanks to their continued support," Lyons said.

According to a chapter official, Alpha Phi will need the support of the student body in their continuing goal of "Helping Hearts."

Clemmer speaks for ill

By Leslie North

Major communication breakdowns are making it increasingly difficult for patients, especially those with mental illness, to obtain appropriate treatment, contends James Clemmer, assistant professor of English at Austin Peay State University.

Clemmer presented this problem in a speech to a joint session of the Schizophrenia Association of Greater Washington and the Hypoglycemia Association, Inc. The meeting was held at Columbia Union College, Tacoma Park, Md., Jan. 21.

Clemmer's lecture, entitled "The Patient's Role in Recovery," dealt with communication problems currently affecting doctor-patient relationships and the medical professions as a whole.

Hypoglycemia occurs when an abnormally high level of glucose (sugar) is present in the blood. This compound provides energy for the body's cells.

Schizophrenia is a psychosis which splits the personality. When it occurs, the patient may become withdrawn and have delusions.

Because of personal experiences with hypoglycemia, Clemmer has been involved with research in this field for four years. During that time, he co-authored several articles concerning the illness.

In addition to writing experiences, Clemmer helped found the American Academy of Orthomolecular Therapists. He currently serves as the vice-president of the board of directors for the organization.

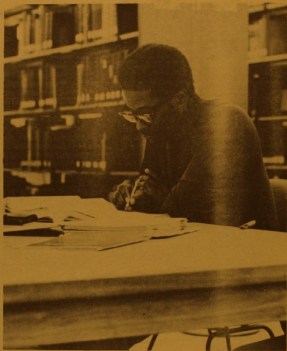

Clemmer accredited the invitation for this speaking engagement as well as several previous dates, to a published account of reactive hypoglycemia. The story appeared in Prevention magazine, the most widely circulated parametic magazine.

Clemmer is a member of both the Schizophrenia Association and the Hypoglycemia Association. Both organizations are Washington-based and are non-profit. In a recent public information release, it stated that both are "designed to provide educational services and other kinds of help to patients with schizophrenia, hypoglycemia and related illnesses."

The session was attended by 300 laymen, doctors, nurses, medical technicians and officers of the organizations, Clemmer said. He added that the address lasted two hours and involved both lecture and question/answer periods.

The speech will be one in a series of lectures which the organization is sponsoring. Cassette tapes of these lectures are available from SAGW, Wheaton Plaza Office Bldg., North, Wheaton, Md. 20902.

Mostly colds

Few have flu

By Dinah Jill England
Relax all you sniffing and coughing students, for you are not under the influence of some foreign flu, according to Dr. A.R. Boyd, campus physician.

"If you had the flu, you would know it. With true influenza, the temperature goes up to about 104 and you'll have violent chills and severe muscle aching," Boyd said.

He explained that what is ailing so many APSU students are viral infections. Unfortunately, there is no cure for this type of illness.

"Viral infections have to run their course," Boyd said. "All we can do is try to relieve their symptoms." But he emphasized, "Penicillin doesn't cure everything. Sometimes we prescribe too much antibiotics, and people begin to expect them."

Boyd said that of course the infirmary sees many more patients this time of the year, but he added, "I don't think the sickness is any worse this year than in past years. The past three years have been rather mild." He partially attributed this to the absence of a flu epidemic.

He also said that the lower the temperatures are outside, the fewer students the infirmary sees. The worse conditions seem to be the rainy days with the temperatures fluctuating between 30 and 50 degrees.

Boyd, who has been working with the university health service intermittently since 1970, arrives at 7:30 a.m. Monday through Friday and stays until all of the patients have been seen.

In the first match West was pitted against Andy Cruse. West defeated Cruse in the first two games. Wills defeated Jim Robertson two straight matches to move her into the finals against West.

Hester calls it "quits" today

James W. Hester, superintendent of operations and maintenance at Austin Peay State University, will retire today after 32 years of service.

"I can't really believe that it is time for me to retire. I have mixed emotions about it. They say that this is what you work for so I guess I'm just going to take it on and see what happens," Hester said.

Austin Peay has literally always been home to Hester and his family. The university provided housing for the Hesters on Castle Heights for eight years. Then they moved into the white house on Marion St. across from the Municipal Stadium. The Hesters lived there for 24 years while they raised two girls.

"I couldn't think of a better place to raise a family," Hester said about campus life. "When we first moved to the campus, my wife Helen and I were young and very involved in the things going on around here. And as our children grew up there was always something going on for them."

Hester recalls one night when a peeping tom was standing on the carpet peering into his daughters' window. He searched for his gun. When he found it the magazine was missing. His wife had hidden it separately for the girls' safety.

"After a few minutes it became pretty humorous that I had a gun but nothing to shoot in it. So I opened the door and yelled to the peeping tom that I had a gun and he'd stay where he was I'd come out and shoot him as soon as I found the magazine. You should have seen him run," Hester chuckled.

Hester has served under five presidents at Austin Peay. The major change has been in the size of the school. Hester said he thinks the present faculty of 200 probably outnumbered the students enrolled when he began working for APSU.

Dr. Fred Williams, vice president for administration and finance, said currently Hester heads a physical plant staff of over 100 employees with a $1.5 million budget.

"It will be impossible to replace Mr. Hester because of his tremendous expertise in the workings of the APSU physical plant. We were extremely fortunate to have him with us during our development. He saw to it that things were done right the first time. Our lack of major physical plant problems is a tribute to Mr. Hester and his work," Williams said.

The Hesters have moved to the Regency apartments where Mrs. Hester is now resident manager. "I'm a freelancer now," Hester laughed.

Hester will stay busy after his retirement with a part-time job, his golf game and his walking. He and his wife walk a mile and a half every day. "Helen got me started and I plan to keep it up. You just can't quite you know, you've got to keep right on going," he said.

New society

Journalists organize

The Society of Journalists was officially recognized as a student organization at last week's SGA Senate meeting.

According to the society's newly elected president, Billy Fields, students need not be actively pursuing a career in journalism to be members.

"We want to provide an open forum so that students interested in communications and its effects will have an opportunity to discuss those interests," he said. The other two officers of the society are Tish Birkby, vice-president and Elizabeth Dale, secretary-treasurer.

The total number of votes cast this year was 356, representing "a large increase in voting over last year," reported the SGA Election Board.

National Peay programs aid Peay

Austin Peay State University received $1.24 million from the four major federal financial aid programs during the 1977-78 fiscal year. The four programs are the National Direct Student Loan (NDSL), $248,175; Supplemental Education Opportunity Grants (SEOG), $58,374; College Work-Study Programs (CWSP), $204,667; and the Basic Education Opportunity Grants (BEOG), $841,660.

A total of 1,366 students received aid from the four major federal financial aid programs. BEOG topped the list with 1,129 students.

The total financial aid report for 1977-78 shows 2,462 (63.82 percent) of 3,858 full-time and part-time students received aid totaling $2.33 million from sources related to the university. These figures do not include funds received from Veterans Benefits, Vocational Rehabilitation, Social Security, private scholarship donors and civic organizations. The university received $30,447 in federal funds for use in administration of the federal programs listed.

John Bratcher, director of student financial aid at Austin Peay, said that due to changes in financial aid programs under the Middle Income Student Assistance Act, 100 percent of the college students are now eligible for some type of financial aid.

Under this act, effective August 1, 1979, students whose family income is less than $25,000 a year are eligible for BEOG funds. Bratcher estimates that this will affect approximately 90 percent of the students in Tennessee.

The Tennessee Guaranteed Student Loan (TGSLL) program was also affected by the legislation. Any student taking a minimum of six hours may apply to a private lending institution for a loan of $2,500 a year for a total of $7,500 for undergraduates and $10,000 for graduate students. The government will pay the interest on the loan while the student is enrolled and no payments are due while the student is enrolled.

The Middle Income Student Assistance Act removed the restriction of a $25,000 family income ceiling on the loan program. During the 1977-78 fiscal year, 181 students participated in the TGSLL program for funds totaling $244,285.

Thirty-five out-of-state students received $45,000 through similar programs in their home states.

Bratcher stated that he is still handling applications. He processes applications all year round. As long as money is available, the applications will be processed, he said.

While there were 3,553 individual awards, they were received by only 2,467 students because many students received assistance from more than one of the sources listed in the report; thus, the "unduplicated" number reflects the total number of students aided.

Chamber singers tour region

By Dinah Jill England

Some students will work through the spring break while others play. The Austin Peay Chamber Singers will have a mixture of both in a vacation that will be anything but dull. March 5 will mark the beginning of a week long tour that will take the group to Washington, D.C.

Dr. George Mahry, director of the Chamber Singers, said, "The main purpose of the tour is to sing for as many high schools and colleges, giving as many performances under different environments as possible."

This effort will get underway with concerts at Antioch and Glendick high schools in Nashville on the first day, followed the next day by two performances for Knoxville schools and one in Asheville, North Carolina, at T. C. Roberson High. Sunday will be a day of rest in Williamsburg, Virginia, as the group takes a break from their busy schedule to view some of the historic sights. Then they travel on to Washington.

The highlight of the tour will be two Sunday morning performances at the Saint Michaels' Roman Catholic Church, which is the largest diocese in the state of Virginia. Here they will be singing for an audience of about 4000 souls.

Monday will be devoted to sight seeing, this time in Washington. Tuesday will mark a trip to Charlotte, West Virginia, and another concert. Wednesday will complete the trip home, stopping for a performance at Eastern Kentucky University before arriving in Clarksville that evening.

Other concert tours have taken the group to such places as Atlanta and Chattanooga.

Mahry said, "The group always comes back tired but revitalized, and singing better than they did before they left."

About thirty-two people will be making the Washington trip, including soprano Sharon Mahry and tenor Patrick Woliver, who will be guest performers with the group.

History students form chapter

Austin Peay's Phi Alpha Theta Chapter is now taking applications for membership. Phi Alpha Theta is a National Historical Society established for students majoring or minoring in history.

Phi Alpha Theta benefits its members greatly. Upon graduation, points are awarded to Phi Alpha Theta members on their Civil Service Exams. The organization provides an outlet for written materials of the members in their magazine, The Historian.

The main requirements for membership is an interest in history and a good grade point average. Austin Peay's Phi Alpha Theta has been planning a good year for their local chapter. For more information concerning Phi Alpha Theta: contact Dr. Thomas Winn of the History Department.

Criminal incident reports insufficient

There have been difficulties with the criminal incidents reported lately to the Department of Public Safety, which have acted to the detriment of successfully completing the follow-up investigation; to identify the perpetrator(s) and/or recover private and/or state property.

The first problem identified is that incidents are not being reported in a timely manner, some even being reported hours, days and even longer after the incident occurs. This reduces the effectiveness, since offenders may still be in the area, and the potential for identification and recovery of property is greatest when reported rapidly.

The second problem identified is the lack of identification of all property which is stolen. The "Operation Identification" is in full swing and officers of the Department of Public Safety are working on some aspect of the operation at least twice a week. This service is available, and those desiring to sign up should contact the Department of Public Safety any time during Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., at 648-7786 or -7787.

The assistance of all faculty, staff and students, according to director Bill Singerhoff is of the "utmost importance if we are to be an effective department."

Rape patrol formed

A resolution to establish a student volunteer rape prevention program was presented and passed at last Thursday's SGA Senate meeting.

The resolution, submitted by Senator Kathy Dial, SGA President Dave Mason, and Senior Secretary Jim Holder, provides for the establishment of "a program of student volunteers to patrol the Austin Peay campus in an attempt to prevent and detect the occurrence of violent crimes against the inhabitants of this campus."

The program has been set up as a reaction to the rape that was reported last Tuesday.

Two two-person teams taking four hour shifts have been patrolling the campus since last Friday. Identification badges have been provided by the Department of Public Safety.

Volunteers are still needed, so anyone interested in helping secure the campus should contact the SGA office in the University Center.

The program has been coordinated with the Department of Public Safety and the division of Student Affairs.

Austin Peay to face Vandy

Austin Peay Tennis coach Dennis Emery is looking forward to a very tough struggle Feb. 6 with Vanderbilt University in the Dunn Center.

Emery will send his young group of athletes against a very talented and experienced Vanderbilt squad paced by 1978 All-American Chip Tollison and SEC champion at no. 2 singles Peter Lamb.

Vandy coaches Bill Glaves and Terry Neudacher are expected to use Tollison at the singles position and come back with Lamb in the doubles teaming with either Tollison or no. 3 man Charles Bath. Austin Peay is expected to use freshman Kurt Williamson to counter Tollison in the singles.

On the ladies side it could very well be an all freshman struggle as Jan Maxey a freshman from Johnson City is expected to pace the Commodores.

Emery is still trying to choose who will play singles for him. The choice is between two freshmen from Ohio Mary Kobb and Sherry Harrison. They seem to be even and will probably trade the no. 1 position back and forth all year.

One thing Harrison has in her favor is that she beat Vanderbilt's no. 2 player in a fall match and in the same match Kobb and Harrison beat VU top doubles team in a very close match.

"I'm hoping we do well in the girls' event and the mixed doubles because on paper Vandy's men's team as the advantage but who knows anything can happen with this scoring system," Emery commented.

The match will be played under the same format that World Team Tennis follows with each school receiving points towards its running score for each game it wins.

If Austin Peay wins the men's singles 6-4 and loses the men's doubles in a tie-breaker 7-6, Austin Peay would be leading 12-11 going into the women's competition. There will be five matches played: men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles, and mixed doubles. Each match will consist of only one set.

"Tennis is one of the few sports where men and women can compete together in such a manner and with all this Title IX stuff going around whose to say that soon college won't be forced to play in this matter to comply."

—Robert Thomas

SUPERMAN—Sophomore forward Tim Thomas drives to the basket. Thomas outshined his teammates in Austin Peay's 68-65 come-from-behind win over Murray State.

Lady Gobs fail in second half

After an outstanding first half effort, the Lady Gobs fell in their bid to win their first Ohio Valley Conference basketball game ever when the Murray State Racers roared back to swamp Austin Peay, 77-54.

The real tale of the game must be considered in rebounding. Murray State outrebounded the Lady Gobs by 10 (43-32). The two were deadlocked at the half at 18 apiece, but by game's end the Lady Gobs were well

Murray State looked like a different team in the second half as did the Lady Gobs. The Lady Racers came out hot-handed and outshot Austin Peay.

Fans are in for a treat

Saturday night will be very interesting for those Austin Peay fans who go to the Dunn Center for the weekly game; however, the game will be a bit different than usual.

covering all fields

By Billy Fields

Rather than seeing the Governors of the Lady Gobs taking the court, Austin Peay supporters will see the Nashville Wheelcats take the floor against a Chattanooga opponent.

This is not that unusual except all of the players will be in wheelchairs. The game will be one which very few people at the Peay have ever seen before, the techniques are as good and the skills possibly better than most teams. You see these guys have to do things better since they play under different type of circumstances.

The game will be sponsored by Austin Peay's Alpha Phi Omega fraternity. APSU has a special interest in the game since student Doyle Mann will be in uniform.

Game time is Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Winfield Dunn Center.

Last week several prominent Tennessee athletes were inducted into the Tennessee Sports Hall of Fame. Inducted were Dr. Andrew Kozar, assistant to UT President Edward Boling; Dr. Billy Jones, president of Memphis State; George Tyrce; William Gipton, former Nashville Pearl High coach; and pro athlete of the year Ross Grimsley a pitcher for the Montreal Expos.

It was with a glad sigh of relief that most people excepted the men's basketball first round victory of the year last Saturday against Murray State. The Gobs had been having trouble all year, but Gobs had been having trouble all year, but finally Sunday? Howard's record breaking (only rookie to make a TD reception in Super Bowl) catch for the Dallas Cowboys against the Pittsburgh Steelers was used in the movie which was about a plot to destroy the Super Bowl and people in attendance.

It is nice to see Peay-ple on television even if it is for a fleeting moment.

Speaking of television, the Governors will play on the Ohio Valley Conference "Game of the Week" this Saturday at 12:30 p.m. Their opponent will be Tennessee Tech and will be seen from the new arena on the Tech campus. Remember "The Ed Thompson Show" is still seen on WZTV-channel 17 at noon on Saturdays.

Thomas leads Gobs past Murray State

Governor forward Tim Thomas, playing the role of superman, led the Governors past the Murray State Racers 68-65 which was the Gobs first win on the road.

"We pulled together in the second half," said Thompson, "that was the best second half efforts we have had all season."

Austin Peay's success seems to stem from their addition to the full court press in their defensive repertoire. Thompson added the defense Friday in the team's final full court bout before Murray State.

The first half was dominated by Murray State's John Randall. He paced the Racers in the half with 20 points. His play brought the 4,600 fans in attendance to their feet on several separate occasions.

Thomas was the real star, however, as he led the Gobs out of an early deficit to a lead late in the game. He hit 10 of 11 field goals attempted in the second half and added 6 of 7 free throws. Randall was held scoreless in the period.

The Governors doubled their fieldgoal percentage in the second half from the first. Austin Peay hit 30.3 in the first half and 61.5 in the second which have them a 53.1 for the game. Murray State hit 65.3 percent in the first half and 40.0 in the second for a 52.1 average for the contest.

Alfred Barney added 15 points for the Governors whose record moves to 2-4 in the Ohio Valley Conference and 7-11 overall.

The Governors face a team from California, Culver Stockton, tonight at 7:30 in the Dunn Center. All students are to enter the front door of the Dunn Center facing Marion St. A valid ID must be presented at the door.

Mann leads Wheelcats in Dunn Center

By Jim Rector

"Just a bunch of guys playing basketball" is how synchroes head and P.E. major Doyle Mann describes his wheelchair basketball team, the Nashville Wheelcats. Mann and his Wheelcats, currently ranked second in the Southern Conference with a 4-2 record, are taking on a tough Chattanooga team Saturday, Feb. 3, 7:30 p.m. at Austin Peay's

Winfield Dunn Center.

A victory Saturday night will grant the Wheelcats a "good shot at some playoff action" and assures the fans of a real "meatier" according to Mann.

Most people attend the games out of curiosity, but find that the style of basketball is very similar to any other game. Mann says, "The passing must be more accurate and you have to think constantly" especially with the Wheelcats' highly successful fast-break offense.

Having been with the Wheelcats for three years, Mann is currently the team's leading scorer with 15 points per game.

One unique aspect of wheelchair basketball is the player classification system. Each player is assigned a class number (one, two, or three) according to his medical qualifications. Paraplegic are ones or twos and amputees are threes.

Each team is allowed only five players with a combined class point total of 12 or less on the court at one time. This serves to equalize the teams and give players with more serious handicaps a better opportunity to compete. Fouls are called for basic basketball infractions.

And, as in all sports, the presence of injuries and mishaps are common. Knocked out spokes, mashed fingers, and collisions are not new to Mann and his team.

Although the Wheelcats have given Mann the identity of being a good basketball player, he enjoys other sports as well. Bowling and tennis are favorite pastimes of his while possibilities of participating in the Wheelchair Olympics and playing softball exist this spring.

Tickets for the game are $2 for students and children and can be obtained through Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity members, APO winter pledge class members, of whom Mann is president, or by sale at the door.

Pool closed

Unfortunately for aquatic enthusiasts, the swimming pool in the Recreation complex was closed Jan. 20 due to possible health problems caused by a broken filter.

The parts are on order, but until further notice the pool will remain closed.

Although pool activity has slowed down, the basketball season is just getting into gear with games being played for public enjoyment every night except for Fridays and weekends.

In the Open League SEC standings, F-Troop (3-0) comes in first, while Pikea (2-1), ATO (2-2), APO (1-2), and ROTC I (0-3) file in respectively.

In the Big Five League, the standings are as follows: Little Sticks (3-0), Track & Thangs (3-0), Sets (1-2), Ellington Hall (1-2) and the Killer B's (0-4).

Big Sticks (3-0) lead the OVC while the Celtics (2-1), Projects (2-2), Hawks (1-2) and finally the Sons of Satan following at 0 and 3. In "Under Six Feet" NBA action, Rawlins Hookers (3-0) lead while Nets (2-1), Black Byrds (2-2), Crimson Knights (1-2) and F-Troop (0-3) trail behind.

The High Rollers (4-0) are at the top while Slayers (2-1), Sigma Chi (2-1), ROTC II (1-2) and APO (0-3) wander behind in the ARA divisions.

In the first week of women's play, there was a three-way tie (1-0) among the Ebony Angels, Seven Stars, and Chi Omega for first.

Hard to repeat according to Haines

By Mike Lynch

Joey Haines is in a position that many men might envy. Last fall he took over the job as head coach of the Austin Peay track team, the defending Ohio Valley Conference indoor track champions. However, Haines realizes that this is a new season and that things have changed since last year. He predicts that it's going to be hard for his new team to retain their title.

"They won the championship on depth and we don't have the depth they had," said Haines referring to last year's members. "A good number of last year's squad did not return because of academic problems," continued Haines, "instead of just holding these people back, out of competition, we just decided to let them go."

Haines is counting on what he terms "several outstanding individuals" for the strength of this year's squad. Haines thinks he has as many as six or eight athletes who have the potential to win the OVC championships in their individual events and qualify for the NCAA Division I Championships.

Any depth that the team will have will come from several freshmen and sophomores on the squad. Haines stated that all of his freshmen and sophomores have improved since last year and he's counting on them to score the fourths and fifths that are needed to win the OVC meet.

Having these outstanding individuals paid off for the team two weeks ago when they competed in the Southern United States Track and Field Federation Championships in Jackson, MS. Austin Peay placed sixth out of 40 schools competing in the meet. "We were really proud of the way we placed. The meet was very close."

"As a matter of fact we were in first place going into the final event, the mile relay, where we just didn't place," Zafar Ahmed and Chris Bedard, who according to their coach are both outstanding distance runners, placed first and third respectively in the two mile run. Glenn Colivas, the OVC record holder in the pole vault, placed second with a jump of 6'8". Mike Howard set a new OVC indoor school record and placed second in the meet with 51'3" in the triple jump. Doug Finley placed third in the 600 yard run. Johnny Williams and Covack Moody turned in times of 6.1 seconds in the sixty yard dash.

With a team whose strength lies in individuals, Haines said his team should place better in the larger tournaments.

"The more schools we're competing against the better off we're going to be, as opposed to competing in a tournament with only five or six schools. There depth is not important. The more schools you have, the more outstanding people you have, like the meet at Jackson. The second round people don't score that many points," Haines commented.

Haines is trying to keep the pressure of being the defending champions off his athletes. "We've been trying to downplay the indoor championship really. The kids know that last year's meet was one of those type meets that was a story book type thing. They just had a meet where everything fell into place. They won things that they should have won and things that they weren't supposed to win."

This year Haines thinks more people will be watching his team, especially teams like Middle Tennessee, Western Kentucky and Murray. Haines said these will be the toughest opposition in the conference this year. He cites such as having a lot of depth especially in the distance events where he feels his team might be weakest.

"It's going to be very hard to repeat but we feel like we'll be strong. We're going to give them a shot at it."

Haines, who held the head coaching job at David Lipscomb College for seven years before coming to Austin Peay, said there will be few changes in the squad except for its size. About the only other change will be in recruiting.

"The biggest change we're making is that we're going toward more quality people. We're attempting to take our scholarship money and instead of trying to divide it up and get two people we're going to take it and recruit the best people we can recruit."

The Residence Hall Council Pantry in Killebrew Hall Lobby is now open for use of the Austin Peay campus.

Items included are cigarettes, soups, detergent, chewing tobacco, candy as well as ice.

Other groceries will be added as the year progresses.
