Hardaway, Grear Awarded U.T. Grants; First Science Assistantships In History of Austin Peay

Thomas Hardaway

Johnny Grear

By Roy Rogers Price

For the first time in Austin Peay history, two biology majors received graduate assistantships at the University of Tennessee in the field of botany.

Thomas Hardaway, and Johnny Grear were awarded the assistantships by U.T. this past April 15. The assistantships will go into effect next September. Hardaway and Grear graduate from Austin Peay this quarter.

In the field of botany, they will work toward advanced degrees of Master of Science and perhaps Doctor of Philosophy. The assistantship is good for one year, and it is subject to renewal.

It provides an annual stipend of $1000 plus all fixed fees, with the exception of charges for the diploma, thesis, and academic costume.

The assistantships were awarded on a competitive scholastic basis. Students from colleges throughout the nation competed for the assistantships. Floyd Brown, of the A.P.S.C. faculty, said that approximately eight assistantships were awarded by U.T.

Grear had applied to four different schools and was accepted by all four. U.T. said Mr. Brown, is considered a very excellent school for botanical research due to its proximity to the Oak Ridge national laboratories and the Great Smoky Mountain National Park. Hardaway and Grear will have opportunities, under the assistantships, to work in botany labs and engage in some phase of botanical research.

Duties assigned them will allow a course of study equivalent to approximately three-fourths of a normal load.

Student Council Sponsors Annual Cancer Drive

Science Contest Held At Austin Peay

By Roy Rogers Price

The Second Annual Science Achievement Contest was held April 17th at Austin Peay.

Among the competitors were students from approximately 50 high schools in Middle Tennessee, said James Wootley, president of the Science Club.

Austin Peay's Science Club and Science Departments are sponsoring the event with four major objectives in mind:

First, to recognize students of superior scientific ability and achievement. Second, to stimulate interest in science.

Next, to provide an opportunity to compare science training of U.S. areas with that of other areas in the United States. Last, to provide a basis for awarding science scholarships to qualified students.

The contest was divided into 4 divisions, biology, chemistry, physics, and general science. Awards were to be made in all four divisions. First-place winners received full-tuition scholarships to Austin Peay; they also received handsome engraved trophies.

Second and third place winners will receive keys. Their scores will be used as one basis for awarding partial scholarships. All winners will receive certificates showing their achievements.

Only high school seniors were eligible for the contest. They must rank in the upper 50 percent of their class. Also, they had either completed two years of science or they must be presently enrolled in the second year. The other requirement of a participant was that he show a definite interest in one of the three specialized fields.

All contestants were required to take the general science test and one of the three specialized tests. The specialized tests were administered from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. General science tests were given from 1 to 2 p.m.

All the clubs who have turned in their constitutions for the ALL STATE Trophy Committee must also turn in their progress or achievement lists by April 30th. These must be turned in to Doug Stone.

The lists will be reviewed by the ALL STATE Trophy Committee and the winner will be announced in the last issue of the ALL STATE on May 27th.

To: Editor of All State and A.P.S.C. Student Body.

I wish to express my gratitude to the student body for your vote of confidence in me for the President-Elect of the Student Council for the year of 1958-59.

With this great responsibility as Student Council President in mind I intend to observe even more closely the efforts of the Student Council so that I will be better prepared to work with you next year.

I would especially like to express my thanks to my very staunch supporters who did the actual campaigning for me, thereby enabling all other votes.

Again I would like to pledge my energy and capabilities to each and every Austin Peay State College student.

Sincerely,
Gordon "Peanut" Jackson

The Cancer Crusade will again be sponsored by Austin Peay's Student Council this year.

Plans for the Crusade were discussed at a recent meeting of the council. The date isn't definite yet, but is expected to be either April 27 or April 28, preferably April 27.

Christian Fellowship Gives Devotional

The Austin Peay Christian Fellowship (formerly Noon-Day Devotional) met, with Miss Meacham giving the devotional.

"We are physical beings and we are also spiritual beings. The two cannot be separated," Miss Meacham told the gathering.

"If we are poor in spirit it will sooner or later show up in our faces," she continued.

"We must have spiritual growth as well as physical growth. Often we cannot comprehend some of the things we read in the Bible or see in the world because our spiritual self has not developed enough to understand," she said.

Miss Meacham said that the Bible referred to the heart as the seat of our feelings and thoughts and our spiritual self is what our thoughts are.

"As a man thinketh in his heart he cannot help revealing himself," she stated.

She went on to say that as a man thinketh in his heart he is. As a man thinketh in his heart God will see him; As a man thinketh he will make his way in the world; as a man thinketh he effects other spirits.

"We have a lovely life spiritually. We must each develop our own spiritual self. If we try to mold someone else's spirit we kill it. This is one thing that only we can do ourselves," Miss Meacham stated.

The council considered other matters at the meeting also. A Student Council sponsored intramural softball tournament will be held. Gordon Jackson, Don Alsop and Charles Gearhiser are members of the intramural committee.

Plans were made for the Student Council banquet, the re-writing of the Student Handbook, and purchase of Student Council emblems.

Clarence Speight, the chairman of the Montgomery County Cancer Society, was present at the meeting. The council will obtain the assistance of about 300 A. P. S. C. students to conduct the crusade throughout Clarksville's white residential areas.

Zoning and organization plans were discussed. Two faculty members and two Student Council members will do the zoning.

The crusaders will distribute cancer information also, in an effort to let people know of cancer symptoms, the importance of regular checkups, and other matters.

Mr. Speight made the statement that the death rate caused from cancer has been reduced by about 25 percent in the past few years.

Date for the Student Council banquet has been set for April 24. Members of the Student Council, new officers of the council, and several faculty members will be in attendance. They may have dates. Tentative plans are to have the banquet at the Stagecoach Inn.

Boys on the council are ordering silver key chains with the Student Council emblem; girls decided on a ring with the council emblem.

Austin Peay Hosts 800 Students

Approximately 800 college and high school students throughout Tennessee gathered at Austin Peay Friday, April 10th.

The event was the annual Student National Educational Association and Future Teachers of America state convention.

Dr. J. A. Barksdale, president of the Tennessee Education Association, delivered the opening address of the morning and the subject "The Challenge of Our Times." He said the challenge is "to create within ourselves" applicable especially to teachers. He applied the words of Jesus to the challenge, saying, "What does it mean for a man to gain the whole world and lose his soul?"

Robert Neil, director of the National Education Association, followed Barksdale. Neil spoke on the subject "The Challenge of the Teacher in a Free Society." He emphasized the role of the teacher in the future and said the future is widely influenced by how the teachers do their jobs.

In the afternoon Dr. Harold Pryor, one of a group of teachers who made an educational tour of Soviet Russia last summer, spoke on the subject "The Challenge of the Soviet Education System." He said the Russians are using education as a tool in their efforts to control the Western world. He related some of the observations he

Cheating - Where Should The Blame Fall?

It has been said that at least 80% of college students cheat or have cheated at one time or another on exams, and everything else concerning school for that matter. And in almost all the cases the student has been blamed and condemned for it. But where should the blame truthfully fall?

Since the ALL STATE is a student newspaper and is supposed to reflect the opinions and views of the students, we prefer to defend or at least defend, but not condone, the students who cheat.

First question "Where should the blame truthfully fall?" has been posed, and here is our answer: SOCIETY AND ITS ECONOMIC SYSTEM.

Where and how does cheating get its start? First, probably, it starts in the home. Parents kind of "help" their children get "original" ideas. Homework, in a lot of cases, is done by the parents, and in a lot of the same cases, the pupils would have received a better grade if he had done the work himself. This type of "help" could and has become a habit. From their parents the children branch out and seek help from other sources in order to get more "original" ideas.

Grade schools are breeding grounds for cheating. And one of the situations conducive to cheating is the seating arrangement. First, the teacher seats the pupils side-by-side at a common table and then has the call to caution them not to look on their neighbors' paper. Where else can the eyes wander?

Next comes junior high school and high school. Here the parent usually puts the emphasis on grades, and here it is that the student becomes aware of his ability, or rather, he becomes self-conscious of it; that's why he cheats. Because his parents want him to do exactly what they did when they were in school, only better, and because he feels that he is inferior, which is sometimes true, he cheats. And who is to say that he only cheats himself when he cheats? He probably wouldn't think so if he got the desired results — praise from his parents, teachers, and classmates.

Now comes college. If grade schools are the breeding grounds for cheating, then college is where the harvest is reaped. Here all the experience gained is employed. By now the student has it firmly implanted in his mind that cheating does pay, for he took how far it has got him, and that the end justifies the means. Because some teacher has been too chicken-hearted to flunk him when she knew that he was not doing his own work in grade and high school, he has accepted the idea of cheating. Then, too, that diploma has become a necessity before one can gain much success in our society and economic system. Since some students have come so far by cheating they can't improve their abilities anymore, so they improve their eyesight so that they can look on their neighbors' paper. The instructors don't help matters any. In fact, they aid cheating in many instances. Going off and leaving a test blank or in the office doesn't exactly improve the test, but they do. A drowning man will clutch at a straw to save himself — and so will a flunking student! To say that teachers don't realize this is hardly believable

The Naked Truth

We finished an amazing campaign with a wordous array of modulations. The lesson to be learned from any election were especially significant to us. It is quite evident that specific regulations should be established to conduct such elections with the functions of an election commission only secondary. I must encourage that future elections leave each and every student free to campaign for the candidate or candidates of his choice, free from shams and derogatory remarks.

The fox came out of his hole one morning. Calls and sounds of the hunt were heard afar. What happened to the fox? Did he go back in his hole or did he get shot?

Now that is a revised version with a subtle substitution I'm sure and hardly creditable to them. Another thing that doesn't discourage cheating is the curve grading system. Somebody has to flunk. Well, you can bet your green apple that somebody's not going to flunk if he can cheat, and cheat he will.

Something else that's not exactly "cricket" on the part of the teacher is this business of going off and leaving an old or decoy copy of the next exam out in open sight, hoping some opportunist would pick it up. That's the latest cruelty joke if there ever was one.

Some college students have been known to keep a file of all the tests given by some instructors. Austin Peay students don't have a file, officially, but it's common knowledge that there are enough tests going around to keep Austin Peay in heat for a winter. Granted that the instructor can't keep giving an entirely new test every year over the same material, but it can be modified or varied.

Cluck up one more black mark for the instructor. Since people generally measure up to what you expect of them teachers, in a lot of cases, have themselves to blame for the cheating. On the first test the instructor immediately puts the student on the defensive by saying, "Alright, let's everyone move away from your neighbor. I don't want you cheating." So the students think, "Well, if that old fossil thinks I'm going to cheat why disappoint him? Whether I do or not won't matter to him."

And so cheating has become an art, highly specialized, and an art that requires nearly as much concentration as it would take to actually study enough to pass honestly.

Well, today they were playing baseball over there and I heard someone say, "Turnip got picked off second again!" Yes my friends, Coach is mowing humps without a license. Whenever a country or an organization or even a small group attempts to set up and adhere to a democratic form of government, then it becomes the moral obligation of the people to do their best to maintain it. However, we often find that if their limits are extended because of the democratic rights allowed them the people will stretch them a little farther by taking advantage of them. This is illustrated by the reactions to attempted improvement in the democratic manner by one organization on our campus. Admittedly, that every member of every governing council is not the most impartial and unprejudiced person in the world, but in order to maintain a spirit of unity and co-operation the people must try to get along with them whether they like what is being done or not.

The work of a student governing body is not an easy task. It takes patience and know how. It also entails the toleration of sarcastic remarks and diatribes of the people. Responsibility rests heavily on the shoulders of such people and if what they do is unsuccessful or worthwhile they must take the reprimands and punishments of their superiors.

When the leaders' work is constantly being torn down by the students who deliberately break the rules and regulations, then they must suffer the two-fold penalty of un-cooperativeness on the part of the students and punishment on the part of the higher-ups.

There can be no unity and no success when each person is pulling in his own direction. And the leaders become of no effect because they are caught in the middle of the web.

Besides if a student doesn't like what his leaders are doing then he has the right to say so and at best offer a better suggestion. The opportunity is always given to those who gripe and complain about how things are being run to go to their council's meetings and try to show them what the students need and want, and in this way help themselves and their council.

I, personally, can see no reason why there, has to be friction between the leaders of the students in any of our organizations on campus. If every act or law that is made is first, considered with regard to its relative merit and then put to a vote by the students, informing them of all its aspects, first, then nobody would have a legal right to complain nor a moral right. And as far as I am concerned only those objections which are legal should be given consideration. If all the leaders become concerned with the general gripe and complaints of all the students, then nothing of any value could come from a student government.

We have to admire those students who are willing to accept the responsibility and frustrations of leading a group of students their own age. Personally conflicts become involved even more so than they do with adults. Students do not like for someone their own age to tell them what to do and this situation makes for a difficult time on the part of the leaders. This situation can be remedied by the realization of every student that he must accept the moral obligation to try to help himself by smoothing the path for his leaders to work. But if he immediately rebels with, "I won't do it," and quickly tries to see how many rules he can break, then he only makes it harder on himself.

And that brings up the point of always trying to select the best leaders possible. If we put people in an office, by virtue of this fact, we expect certain things of them. And if we expect to get these things, we must put those people in whap can give us more of what we want.

And if we do this, then there should be no problem. By our selection of leaders we have indicated that these are the people who can give us what we want and then we must stick by them.

Thus, there are two aspects of the situation to consider. And being one of the mass of students, I see, first, my side in relation to my leaders' side.

But I'm saying that in order to create a unified, co-operative, working organization, the student must see the question from the leaders' position. Then, and only then can he possibly understand the weight of responsibility on their shoulders and the obstacles which they encounter.

McReynolds Male

By Peanuts

The men of McReynolds met April 14 to elect new officers and also carry out some other important business items.

The newly elected officers who will take office next fall consist of the following: Graham Sagg, president; Jerre Nichols, vice-president; George Bray, secretary-treasurer; Joe Crunk and Jim Alberta, councilmen for the second floor; and John Kinchloe and Dan Buckner, councilmen for the first floor.

Other items of business consisted of the following: The Dorn will cooperate in partially sponsoring a Beauty Pageant for the Miss Tennessee for the Miss Universe Contest; the secretary-treasurer will have charge of the Minutes; correspondence with alumni of McReynolds and a fund for flowers for an immediate family death of any member of McReynolds; and a constitution will be drafted by the new officers and councilmen to submit to the residents in the near future.

"No Exit" Plays For Three Days

By Roy Rogers Price

"No Exit" had its first showing Thursday 16. The one-act play was produced by the Austin Peay Playhouse. It is having three showings; from April 16 through 18.

It was, according to director J. G. Griffin, an experiment in existentialism. The philosophy of life originated and introduced by the Frenchman Jean-Paul Sartre.

Certain time, according to the playhouse, was "Infinitesimal Segment of Eternity." In common language, the play started at 8 p. m. Tickets sold to adults for $1.00; students' tickets were $.50. The one act lasted about an hour and 20 minutes.

The cast was composed of four characters. Russell Hooks was Crudeau; Walter Gray portrays Beethoven Jr., the bell boy; Ines Serrano was depicted by Gayle Lester; and Estelle DeLaury was played by Leila Coe.

Anna Hughes was in charge of stage properties, and she assisted in set work and publicity. Walter Gray assisted in set work and was in charge of makeup.

Others assisting with work on the set were Russell Hooks, Marion James, and Tommy Markham. Nancy Gill is promoter, and David Hall worked on the program cover. Dick Stricker and Gary Wesner were in charge of lighting. Bobby Richardson assisted Miss Hughes with the publicity.

Charles M. Waters, an associate professor of English at Austin Peay, recently underwent an operation.

The local hospital removed some cysts from the right side of his chest. Waters is director of public information, alumni relations, and student publications. When great news occurs at Austin Peay, he is instrumental in releasing the news to the local press and other sources.

The Alumni News is a quarterly bulletin put out by Mr. Waters. The student publications which he sponsors are known to all A P students; they are the All State (which was for one issue the All State) and the Farewell and Mail.

ATTENTION!

The ALL STATE is hard-up for material. We're usually pretty stingy with our money. In fact, we're so stingy with it that our business manager makes us breathe through our nose to save the wear and tear on our false teeth! But since we are so desperate for material we're going to spend five or six dollars for cigarettes and give away a carton free to the writer of the best letter-to-the-editor in the next two issues.

Here are the rules: 1. NO PROFANE LANGUAGE. 2. Reasonable length. 3. Legitimate subject. 4. Must be submitted to the ALL STATE office by May 1 for the 15th issue and May 20 for the 16th issue. 5. Winners for both issues will be given a carton of their choice of cigarettes. 6. Athletes are not eligible because they don't smoke.

This Is The College; Here Are The Students

Austin Peay will lose one of its most picturesque, picturesque students when Ros Hooks receives his diploma this June.

Or one might say when he is graduated for the second time.

Ros is known as the only alumnus of Austin Peay that hasn't graduated. When he was here before, his name was put in the list of graduates without his ever applying for a degree, and it was put on the graduation program. The college still has the empty diploma cover that would have been his.

Ros came to Austin Peay from Princeton, Kentucky, in 1933. In the two years and two quarters he was here he made quite a name for himself. "I worked on the All State all the time I was here," Ros said. "They made me circulation manager, for they knew I was always in the office. I spent most of my time asleep behind my desk. Whenever there were any visitors in the office, Mr. Waters would wake me up and send me to the safe. Then I would sleep on the cement floor in there."

Ros left Austin Peay his junior year to attend the University of Kentucky Law School. After going there for one semester, he left because he "was too immature for anything like that place."

His father decided that it was time Ros had a job. Ros tried to join entirely every branch of the armed services, but they would not even accept him when they drafted him.

One of his major ambitions has been to go to South America. He had a chance to go that summer, but by then he had a full time job at the Peensalt Chemical Corporation on Kentucky Lake. Two years there was all he could take, so he is now on a leave of absence from there to finish getting his degree from Austin Peay.

Ros has a major in history and a minor in speech and drama. He hasn't decided yet what he is going to do with his talents in the future. He has an application for foreign service in at the State Department — South America is still calling him.

And if that doesn't work out, he is considering going to Riverside, California perhaps to do some studying in dramatics at UCLA.

At the present he is more interested in getting a job this summer somewhere in the Clarksville area.

When asked what his hobbies were, Ros said, "I guess you couldn't call anything I do a hobby; I just piddle around in almost everything. If you want to call anything my hobby, I suppose it would be other people."

His friends all agree with him on that point. He is interested in everything that goes on at Austin Peay and in the rest of the world.

He participates in politics, and dramatics writes love poetry, collects records and prints of paintings and enjoys traveling.

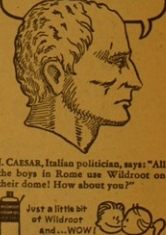

At one time or another Ros has belonged to the band, the choir, the MENC, and the Circle K.

He appeared in the Austin Peay Productions of "The Hasty Heart," "Oklahoma," "Carousel," "The Curious Savage," "No Exit," and three productions of Governor's Galettes.

The more one gets to know Ros the more one is amazed at his many-sided personality. His exploits are many and varied. Quite a few of them are better suited for reminiscent conversation than they are for print.

The name on the diploma will read "S. Roswell Hooks" when to the satisfaction of some and the relief of others, Ros Hooks finally is graduated.

Editor of NEA Journal Speaks at State Convention

Dr. Mildred Fenner, editor of the National Education Association Journal, delivered the banquet speech for the PTA-SNEA State Convention held yesterday at Austin Peay.

Her speech was "The Challenge of Thorough Preparation for a professional career" (in teaching). It was the climactic speech of the convention theme, "Teaching for Slavery or Freedom."

In her speech, Dr. Fenner took a backward glance at the teachers of her day, and the teachers before that. She contrasted the teachers of the past with those of today. According to her, teachers of the late 1800's and early 1900's were greatly lacking in training. Such isn't so true today.

She said that there are four items necessary for a good program for the education of teachers. One is a good foundation regarding the subject matter to be taught.

Austin Peay's Madrigal singers, under the direction of Miss Nancy Norman, preceded Dr. Fenner's speech.

About 500 were present at the banquet. Toastmaster was Dr. C. O. McKee of AP; the invocation was delivered by Bob McGhee. The banquet was held in the college cafeteria.

A second necessary item, she continued, is the learning of the prospective teacher to be able to "come to grips" with the purposes of life, aims of teaching, and similar matters.

Third, information about child growth and development must be made available to prospective teachers. She said that teachers must know what makes children tick.

A knowledge of how to go about teaching was the fourth item pointed out by Dr. Fenner. Teachers must know how to teach.

Dr. Fenner listed two challenges in the teaching profession. First, there is a challenge as a person. "Don't become a teacher if it isn't what you want to do more than anything else in the world," she commented.

The second challenge is as a member of the teaching profession, Dr. Fenner said. She commented that an individual teacher could do very little to further good education methods; as a member of an active group, however, much could be done.

She closed with the statement that "The responsibility belongs to all of you."

made while in Russia and contrasted the American and the Soviet systems.

If America is to compete with Russia in education, he said, then America's future teachers and students must assume personal responsibilities.

Dr. Pryor used pictures to illustrate his talk.

A banquet was held that night in the college cafeteria. Some 500 delegates were there addressed by Dr. Mildred Fenner, editor of the NEA Journal.

Do You Think for Yourself? (THIS TEST WILL GIVE YOU A CLUE! *)

1. If your parents exhibited "baby pictures" of you to a friend, would you be (A) embarrassed? (B) merely interested in your friend's reaction? (C) just plain annoyed?

A ☐
B ☐
C ☐

2. You are making a speech—and suddenly find you have a large hole in your clothes. Would you (A) excuse yourself and leave? (B) pretend you didn't know the hole was there and finish the speech? (C) cover up the hole with a handkerchief?

B ☐
C ☐

3. Would you rather have the characteristics of (A) U.S. Grant? (B) Thomas Edison? (C) J.P. Morgan?

B ☐
C ☐

4. You have taken your date to dinner and find you haven't money to tip the waiter as well as take your date home. Would you (A) ignore the waiter? (B) take him aside and tell him you'll tip him next day? (C) tip him and walk your date home?

B ☐
C ☐

5. Mathematics is your poorest subject, yet you are fascinated by the idea of being an atomic physicist. Would you (A) try to overcome your difficulties with math? (B) pick an easier occupation? (C) ask yourself if it's physics you like or its glamour?

B ☐
C ☐

6. Your roommate is a nice person, but suddenly takes to asserting an ability to foretell the future. Would you (A) notify the authorities? (B) ignore the whole thing? (C) give him tests to prove to him he's wrong?

B ☐
C ☐

7. Do you believe the maxim "It's a long lane that has no turning" is (A) a complete non sequitur? (B) a well-known fact? (C) an allusion to a common phenomenon?

B ☐
C ☐

8. Would you rather have as a birthday present (A) something expensive? (B) something long-lasting? (C) something beautiful?

B ☐
C ☐

9. In choosing a filter cigarette, would you pick one that (A) claims it filters best? (B) merely says it tastes good? (C) gives you a thinking man's filter and a smoking man's taste?

B ☐
C ☐

If you're the kind of person who thinks for yourself . . . you use judgment in your choice of cigarettes, as in everything else. Men and women who think for themselves usually smoke VICEROY. Their reason? Best in the world. They know that only VICEROY has a thinking man's filter and a smoking man's taste.

*If you have checked (B) in three out of the first four questions, and (C) in four out of the last five . . . you think for yourself!

Richard Bowles

The band played under the direction of Lew Bodine and Aaron Schmidt. Doctor Tom Cowan acted as master of ceremonies.

Special guests for this program were the band members from Clarksville High School and New Providence Demonstration School.

"Radical" Monasco

Quiet, genius at work! For the first time in his college career Estelle Monasco appears to be working. We think this picture was posed, though.

17 Attend BSU Convention

Seventeen A. P. S. C. representatives attended the Tennessee Baptist Student Convention held at Knoxville April the 3rd to 5th.

All but three local officers were included in the group.

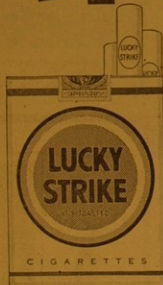

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Brown accompanied the 15 students.

The group resided in the St. James Hotel in Knoxville during their stay. The convention was held in the First Baptist Church of that city.

Theme of the convention was "Disciplined for Today's Demands." Bill Roper of A.P. served in the capacity of Music Chairman.

Among the various speeches made were "The Meaning of Christian Self Discipline," "Disciplined to Win," "Disciplines for Champions," "Christ as My Coach," and a panel program on "Christian Courage on the Campus."

THINKLISH

English: NEARSIGHTED PROFESSOR

Thinklish translation: This fellow has so many degrees, he looks like a thermometer. He's so myopic, he needs glasses to view things with alarm. Though quite the man of letters, the only ones he favors are L.S./M.F.T. "I take a dim view of other brands," he says. "Give me the honest taste of a Lucky Strike!" We see this chap as a sort of squintellectual (but remarkably farsighted when it comes to cigarettes).

HOW TO MAKE $25

Take a word—television, for example. With it, you can make commercial TV (sellevision), loud TV (yellevision), bad TV (smellevision) and good TV (swellevision). That's Thinklish—and it's that easy! We're paying $25 for the Thinklish words judged best—your check is itching to go! Send your words to Lucky Strike, Box 67A, Mt. Vernon, New York. Enclose your name, address, college or university and class.

Around Campus With The Flying Frenchman

The Flying Frenchman takes us first to the Student Center filled with athletes and people. "Suds" Martin, Jack "Bush" Bushinsky, Clifford Sims, Sid Ingram, Poppy Key, John McKay, Howie Harris, Tom Schropp, T. T. Gilmer, Wayne Long, and Bobby Tue are in there someplace . . . You pick 'em out.

The top picture is Roy Mosier and Jo Anne Crockarell and the bottom one is Burt Simpson and Glynnda Clement. The only thing we can say for certain that they're doing is smiling "Colgath."

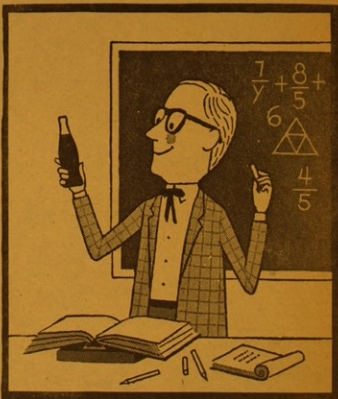

No, Ralph Combs isn't drunk, just enjoying himself at the last dance we had.

"Hang Down Your Head, Tom Dooley," sings Dr. Boswell before an overflow crowd.

From the Student Center we go to one of the Boys' Dorms where we find Freddy Brown cleaning up the room. The mop handle is directing Stan Pitka and thinking with a Viceroy in his hand is Don Ross.

Q.E.D.

Yes, it's been demonstrated time and time again, that for real refreshment it's Coke every time! Add up that cold crisp taste, that lively lift and you really have a drink worth going after. So whenever the crowd has a multiple thirst, make the high sign of good taste . . . pass around the Coca-Cola! Quod Erat Demonstrandum!
