Progress means patience for students

The end is in sight for campus construction but there is still a lot more to be done.

Perhaps the most anxiously awaited building is the new science building.

Since its groundbreaking ceremony on July 28, 1998, the science building has survived many obstacles on the way to completion.

One of those obstacles was the unforgettable tornado that ripped through campus in January 1999.

Fortunately the tornado barely touched the science building, missing all the concrete columns and just skimming a retaining wall.

"We were really lucky [the tornado] didn't do more damage than it did," says Brian Carter, chief contractor of the new science building.

The building is scheduled for opening in late November.

It is 280,000 square feet and will boast three floors of the most advanced technology in the state.

"It's very high tech," Carter says. "It's really almost automated."

The most innovative feature about the new science building is its heating and ventilation system.

It has 10 air changes per hour to control possible air contamination. The airflow automatically adjusts to accommodate the number of people working with bio-hazards at the fume hoods.

With this ventilation system there is virtually no risk of chemical explosion or toxification.

There are also many other features in the new science building that will make it accessible to students.

Several communication outlets are installed on each floor so students can easily connect their laptops to one of the many data ports.

Both the lighting and ventilation systems are programmed to turn on and off automatically, a cost-effective measure, which Carter says, "will save energy in the long run."

Through all the hassles of construction all over campus, the workers on the sites are pleased with how students are reacting.

"We appreciate students bearing with us and the construction fences," says Bobby Gann, chief contractor of the amphitheater and new University Center.

Gann says some of the construction fences should be removed by the end of this week, once again allowing students to congregate in front of the cafeteria.

The amphitheater should be available to use in the next two to three weeks. It will be well lighted for various outdoor concerts and events.

The new UC, set to open in October 2001, will have better kitchen facilities, offering students a more spacious and comfortable dining experience. Unlike the amphitheater and the science building, the UC is the only building being built with student funds.

"We appreciate students bearing with us and the construction fences."

Who's Who book seeks nominees

by Holli K. Froemming
editor in chief

Austin Peay State University is once again taking nominations for the National Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges book.

The Office of Student Affairs will be sending applications to all eligible students this week.

Eligible students are currently enrolled full-time seniors (at least 96 credit hours complete upon entering the fall semester) with a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or higher. The student does not have to graduate by May, however, to be eligible.

"Students have been selected in the past who weren't graduating yet," says Barbara Phillips, assistant vice president of student affairs.

In addition, the student needs to have demonstrated leadership on and off campus, as well as been committed to community service of some kind.

The application consists of an informational letter, an application form and three reference forms. Each applying student must have an APSU faculty member recommendation, along with references from a student organization advisor and community service leader.

Once the entire application, including reference forms, is submitted, the Honors and Awards Committee will review each student. The committee is chaired by Barry Kitterman, professor of English.

At that point, the top applicants will have their applications sent to the department chairperson for their major.

The chairperson will then review the candidates and select the people he thinks most qualified.

Each major is allowed to pick a certain number of students for this honor.

The number is based on the percentage of applicants eligible to apply in their department.

The major with the most spots to fill is Interdisciplinary Studies (or education) with 17 spots. Next on the list are Nursing and Business (including all areas in the school of business) with eight places each. Some majors, such as chemistry, have only one spot available.

If, however, a department does not fill all their available spots, other departments may use them for other qualified students.

Austin Peay is allowed to send in the names of 63 students; approximately 500 students are eligible.

In the informational letter, Phillips says previously selected students from Austin Peay "have indicated they consider this to be a high honor, one that is easily recognized by potential employers, friends and family members."

Carrie Slaymaker, a freshman journalism major, was a member of Who's Who for all four years in high school as well as two in junior high, says participating in the pro-

Chemistry society is "Outstanding"

Austin Peay State University's student chapter of the American Chemical Society received a ranking of Outstanding - the highest category possible - for its chapter activities during 1999-2000.

Students in APSU's chapter are among more than 8,000 students in 900 colleges and universities throughout the United States and Puerto Rico. Selection is made for Outstanding, Commendable or Honorable Mention based on annual reports.

Among the 31 chapters receiving an Outstanding ranking, APSU will be recognized at the 221st ACS National Meeting in San Diego on April 1, 2001.

In a letter to Dr. John Foote, chair of APSU's chemistry department, Daryle H. Busch, president of ACS, commended Dr. Ron Robertson, chapter advisor, and student members for "setting such a fine example for other chapters."

"Ron Robertson...deserves special commendation," he writes. "Few faculty members are willing to make the great commitment of time and energy a successful chapter requires."

"(His) efforts represent the best in undergraduate science education and mentoring around the country."

"Ron Robertson has worked for eight years to attain this recognition," says Foote. "And Dr. Todd LaFrenz has helped the last few years. It is a fantastic accomplishment."

Voices of Triumph hold reunion

Members of Voices of Triumph, past and present, will have a chance to meet, interact and learn from each other during Homecoming Week.

Voices of Triumph is a student choral group dedicated to singing spiritual numbers and is organized to encourage each other in faith.

A panel discussion, speakers and a chance to socialize is slated for Friday, Oct. 13 in the Kimbrough Auditorium. The meeting starts at 7 p.m.

At 9 a.m., Saturday, Oct. 14, group members will assemble at the Music/Mass Communication Building for the Homecoming parade.

At 2 p.m., Voices of Triumph sing the National Anthem before the football game.

At 5 p.m., the group will hold a choir rehearsal and dinner at First Baptist on Trenton Road.

At 10:30 a.m., Sunday, Oct. 15 in Clement Auditorium, the group will have Sunday services.

At 4 p.m., also in Clement Auditorium, the group will give a closing Homecoming concert.

The events are free and open to the public.

World Wide Web gives options for university degrees

The World Wide Web is changing the way universities and colleges offer courses, and Austin Peay State University is riding that wave.

The idea is still in its infancy, but the Tennessee Board of Regents, along with APSU and other TBR schools, is taking the first steps to offer a degree that can be earned totally online through the Web.

TBR wants to have its degree online by Fall 2001.

"The idea is that the degree would come from a TBR institution," says Dr. Stan Groppe, executive director of APSU's Office of Extended Education. "Details are not yet finalized, but it could mean students could earn residency credit at any TBR school participating in the program and apply it to that TBR degree."

As an added bonus under the plan, Austin Peay would get to count those students in its enrollment numbers if students take TBR courses through APSU.

Tom Moseley, APSU's coordinator of distance education and off-campus programs, Groppe and Dr. Linda Rudolph, interim vice president for academic affairs, are putting together a budget to enable APSU to offer 10 courses in the TBR degree program.

While the details are still being hammered out, here's one example Groppe envisions under such a program: A soldier at Fort Campbell was to get a TBR degree and as many as 90 credit hours from other institutions. That person would have earned approximately 120 hours, or one-fourth of the needed hours, at a TBR institution, which could be earned via the Web.

"And, of course, the thought also is that a student could earn all 120 hours for a TBR degree on the Web," Groppe says.

There's also the example of a former APSU student now stationed in England who has inquired about earning a degree through the Web.

Under the TBR proposal, Groppe says, "She could earn her degree as a TBR degree while she's wandering all over this globe."

In addition, Groppe is working with the U.S. Army as it moves to offer courses using the Web.

Groppe recently attended an Army program providing information for those interested in providing classes through the Army's program.

"The Army has a vision that one organization made up of a consortium of schools and universities might be able to offer courses to all Army personnel anywhere in the world by using the Web."

The Army will begin the program next January by picking two or three Army posts initially.

Honor

gram looks good on a resume and she appreciates the honor of being selected.

She says, however, "being nominated by my teacher was more important to me than the national recognition."

Some students said they felt "Who's Who" was more like buying a title because they thought some financial obligation came with the honor.

This, however, is not the case for this "Who's Who" book.

"There is absolutely no cost to the student at all," says Phillips. "The students have the option to buy the book with their name in it but that is not required."

Each chosen student gets their name printed in a book with a small biographical blurb. In addition, they receive a certificate stating they were selected.

Both of these services are free of charge. The book, if purchased, carries a fee. Phillips says the fee is used towards the cost of the search and printing the book.

Phillips also says there is no financial reward for being selected; however, employers recognize the "Who's Who" honor and participants have an edge over the competition.

If you feel you are eligible for this honor but do not receive an application by Friday, contact the Office of Student Affairs at 221-7341 or stop by their office on the second floor in Ellington.

Phillips says they send applications primarily to campus P.O. Boxes but occasionally they send them to the permanent address and sometimes the addresses in the computer are outdated.

The application deadline is Oct. 27.

Alumni Association sponsors two Homecoming events

The Austin Peay State University National Alumni Association and Ajax Distributing Co. will sponsor the 22nd annual Homecoming Golf Tournament at 9 a.m. Friday, at Eastland Green Golf Course, Sango Road.

Cost is $50 per player and a light lunch is provided.

The format is a four-person scramble with a shotgun start. The tournament field is limited to the first 120 players.

The Alumni Association will also host a Homecoming 5K run at 7:30 a.m. Saturday.

The race is open to the public and pre-registration fees are $12 per person and $15 on race day.

Race day registration begins at 6 a.m. in the McCord Building.

There will be a $50 cash award to overall male and female and master's male and female winners, along with awards to the top three places in 11 age groups from 19 and under through 70 and over.

The course starts on College Street and runs through the campus and downtown Clarksville.

To get more information and/or registration for either event, call the Office of Alumni and Annual Giving at 221-7979.

Rifle, women's tennis score big

Austin Peay State University's rifle team finished first and second in its season's opening match Saturday.

The Lady Govs won the women's team competition with a 1458, outpointing both Morehead State and Tennessee-Martin.

Overall, they finished second in the mixed competition behind Tennessee-Martin but ahead of Morehead State.

A fourth team, Mercer, failed to show.

Junior Kelly Priebe led the way with 374 while junior Stephanie Schmidt was next at 363 and Carol Guerra, the only senior, shot 362.

Sophomore Kelly Peters shot 359.

APSU will return to action next Saturday when it plays host to Murray State in an 8 a.m. match during homecoming weekend.

Another team did quite well this weekend as well.

The women's tennis team swept all the singles matches en route to an 8-1 win against David Lipscomb

Saturday at the Governors Tennis Center.

Judy Liwanpo got things rolling with a 6-3, 6-3 win at No. 1 singles.

Jessia St. John, Celeste Tompkins, Zarinah Brown, Kim Laub and Jessie Mills followed with other singles wins.

In doubles, the Lady Govs' team of Liwanpo / Tompkins lost to Lipscomb's Lori Taylor / Jessica Brown before Veronica Carr / St. John and Laub / Brown won their matches at No. 2 and No. 3, respectively.

Fan's family establishes scholarship

The late Ricky Hollis was a devoted basketball fan, never missing a Governors game.

In his memory, a scholarship has been established at Austin Peay State University and awarded to an APSU senior.

Vanessa Hollis of Clarksville established this endowed scholarship in memory of her husband who died in 1997.

Wayne Abrams, a friend of Hollis, is sponsoring the scholarship.

"Ricky and I enjoyed going to Austin Peay basketball games, and Wayne thought this would be a good way to keep Ricky's memory alive," says Hollis.

"I was delighted with the idea," said Hollis.

"Ricky was one of my closest friends. My motivation for wanting a scholarship is to keep Ricky Hollis' name alive at Austin Peay," says Abrams.

Hollis graduated from APSU in 1978 with a business degree. In April, a paved Hollis Lane, which leads to the Pace Alumni Center at Emerald Hill, was dedicated.

"Ricky loved all sports, but he had a special love for basketball. He never missed a game, even away games," says Abrams.

"Before he died, Coach Loos presented him with a basketball signed by all the players, including Bubba Wells. That was very special to him,"

Joey Tuck, son of Gary and Jo Ann Tuck, of Lafayette is the first recipient of the scholarship.

He is a senior at APSU majoring in prephysical therapy. Tuck graduated from Macon County High School in 1996.

Tuck was a member of the Governors basketball team for four years. Last season he played in all 28 games, starting in seven.

Tuck averaged 4.4 points-per-game and shot 40 percent from three-point range.

Tuck has been named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll each semester, the OVC Commissioner's Honor Roll four times and the Dean's List three times.

The scholarship is a one-time award to a fifth-year men's basketball player. Interest from the endowment will be used to award the scholarship annually.

For more information about the scholarship, call the Office of University Advancement at 221-7127.

Homecoming week a busy one for athletes

Homecoming week promises to be a busy one for APSU athletics.

In addition to Saturday's 2 p.m. homecoming football game vs. Charleston Southern, APSU will be hosting a variety of contests.

It all starts Monday and Tuesday when the APSU golf teams hold the second Precept Golf Invitational. On Thursday, the Lady Govs volleyball team will play host to Tennessee-Martin in a 7 p.m., OVC match.

On Friday, the unofficial start of the 2000-01 basketball season will take place at Midnight Magic.

Activities will begin at 10:30 p.m. before fans will get a chance to meet the Govs and Lady Govs at midnight.

Then on Saturday, APSU's rifle team will kickoff homecoming day's activities by playing host to Murray State, 8 a.m.

The APSU cross country teams will serve as host to the APSU invitational, 10 a.m. at Ft. Campbell.

Football team loses again

Austin Peay football fell behind 21-0 in the first quarter and could never recover as Dayton downed the Governors 42-7, Saturday, Oct. 7.

The home game, taking place in Governors Stadium dropped the Govs to 0-5 for the season while Dayton stands 5-1.

The Flyers dominated the action, gaining 534 yards to 225 for the Govs.

APSU quarterback Brian Baker struggled in his second start since returning from a shoulder injury.

He completed just 13 of 30 passes for just 87 yards and three interceptions. APSU's only score came late in the fourth quarter on a 63-yard John Shephard to Michael Farrell TD pass.

Men's, women's golf host tournament

Austin Peay men and women's golf teams were host to the second Precept Invitational Monday and Tuesday, at the Clarksville Country Club.

Two years ago, APSU coach Mark Leroux came up with the idea to develop a tournament that featured schools who had both men and women's golf programs, especially those coached by one person.

With the help of Precept, the Bridgestone Sports golf ball brand, and the Clarksville Country Club, the idea became a reality.

Last year seven schools brought both their men and women's teams

Two others competed in just the men's while one other school bought just their women's program.

This year, the tourney has expanded to 10 schools bringing both their programs: Tennessee Tech, Belmont, Samford, Evansville, Oakland (Mich.), IUPUI, Montevallo, Mercer and Bowling Green.

Jackson State brings just its women's program.

Austin Peay musicians perform musical review

As part of Austin Peay State University's Homecoming celebration, a fast-paced, fun-filled presentation called "Some Enchanted Evening" will be held this Saturday and Sunday.

The event features the University Concert Choir and Chamber Singers under the direction of Dr. George Mabry, professor of music.

The groups will be performing music from some of America's greatest Broadway musicals.

Of special interest will be cameo appearances by Sharon Mabry, Allen Henderson, Valerie Oyen-Larsen and Thomas King, all members of the voice faculty.

This electrifying production will include music from "Annie Get Your Gun," "Kiss Me Kate," "The Music Man" and a special salute to the British composer, Sir Andrew Lloyd Webber.

Webber has written some of the most popular Broadway musicals such as Cats and Phantom of the Opera.

In addition he has written several requiems and choral pieces.

The orchestra is under the direction of Dr. David Steinquest, professor of music.

Admission is $12 for adults, $10 for senior citizens and groups of 10 or more and $5 for students; all seats are reserved.

Tickets may be purchased at the Music Ticket Office between 10 a.m. - 3 p.m.

Reservations may also be made by calling 221-7001, but payment in full by cash or check must be received by Friday to secure a telephone reservation.

Any remaining tickets will be on sale at the Music Ticket Office one hour preceding each performance.

The two performances will take place at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, and 3 p.m., Sunday, in the Concert Theatre of the Music/Mass Communication building.

This musical review is presented by Austin Peay's department of music and the Center of Excellence for the Creative Arts. For more information call 221-7876.

Caedman's Call performs in Nashville

by Holli K. Froemming
editor in chief

Caedman's Call, who came to Austin Peay State University two years ago, is back in the area.

The seven-member group, which is known for its acoustic guitar rhythms and use of garbage cans in their percussion section, is touring in order to promote their new release "Long Line of Leavers."

This is their third nationally released album; it follows "40 Acres" and their self-titled debut album.

The new album, however, is different than the previous two in their experimentation with different sounds.

They have incorporated styles from Brazilian percussion, "smokey 40's lounge jazz" and have produced a few songs without any acoustic guitar.

They started out as primarily a "college" band playing in local coffee shops and other venues in Texas, but have since become a band with nationally acclaimed music.

They have had five number one singles and Billboard recognition.

In addition, they received

"The title of the album expresses our depravity and how aware of it we are as a band" guitarist. "We love imperfectly and we're flawed in our picture of what love is."

Essentially, it means they realize they must rely on God for everything. This reliance extends to needing God even for the ability to love properly.

Joining them on the tour are Nichole Nordeman and Justin McRoberts.

Their stop in Nashville will be Thursday at Lipscomb University at 8 p.m.

Ticket proceeds from this concert will go to the Kaia Jergeson Fund.

For more information or to purchase tickets, call (615) 297-2021.

Professor uses experiences in Italy to write book

An Austin Peay State University professor has worked in Italy bringing that country's theatrical history to an English-speaking audience.

Dr. Thomas Pallen, professor of theatre history at Austin Peay, has been writing, translating and signing, using two faculty professional development assignment leaves to conduct research in Italy.

"The two leaves from the University have been of great help. They give me a longer period of time to spend doing research and more opportunities to get to know people," Pallen said.

Pallen used his first faculty professional development assignment leave to begin working on his book "Vasari on Theatre," which was published in May 1999.

He looked at modern Italian scholarship and translated material into English for the book.

Giorgio Vasari was the first person to write biographies of artists. Although an artist himself, he is equally known for his biographies.

"Art historians rely on Vasari, but theatre historians do not know as much about him. I am trying to make Italian scholarship known in English," Pallen says.

Pallen used a second faculty professional development assignment leave to conduct research in Italy for an upcoming book.

He visited libraries and archives in northern and central Italy, compiling research for a book about the Commedia dell'Arte, a well-known form of Italian Renaissance theatre.

The Commedia dell'Arte was the earliest theatre to be sold as a product and not just as a form of entertainment.

He also translated an Italian scholarly article, which soon will be published in the "New England Theatre Journal."

As a result of his research

Italy

in Italy, Pallen was invited to give a paper at an international theatre conference in July at the University of Florence.

The conference was the last in a series dedicated to the general theme of images of theatre.

"It is not only the information you learn at conferences," says Pallen. "The contacts are important and helpful."

In addition to conducting research, Pallen sang in a prestigious recording in Italy with "Corale Zefferini," the "Little Breezes Chorus."

In Nov. 1999, he participated in the recording of "Laudario di Cortona," a collection of religious songs written by laymen during the 13th century.

This three-CD collection plus CD-ROM was published in April and is based on the original manuscript and style.

"This was a very important project. I feel honored to be part of this recording," Pallen says.

"I would not have gotten these opportunities without the faculty development leaves," Pallen said.

Faculty professional development assignment leave is designed to strengthen the scholarship and academic excellence of the university, to foster the professional growth of the faculty member and to enhance the university's curriculum.

Faculty members design projects that best suit their field of study.

Austin Peay awards young composers

The 2000 winners of the 14th Annual Young Composer's Competition were announced recently by the Austin Peay State University Center of Excellence for the Creative Arts.

The competition encourages young composers by providing professional-level performances as well as a financial incentive with the hope that this kind of professional recognition will create a greater community awareness of these young composers.

The competition was open to students composers who were citizens or permanent residents of the United States; enrolled in accredited public, private or parochial secondary schools, accredited colleges or conservatories of music; engaged in private study of music with recognized teachers and who had not reached age 30 by May 15, 2000.

A panel chosen from qualified university faculty and composers served as judges.

Gregory J. Hutter, Chicago, Ill., was awarded first prize for "Three Pieces" for clarinet and piano.

Hutter earned his bachelor of music degree from Western Michigan University in 1994 and holds a master of music degree in composition from University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Hutter is pursuing his doctorate in composition at Northwestern University.

His music has been recognized by ASCAP and performed at conferences and academic settings throughout North America and Europe.

David McMullin, New York City, was awarded second prize for "Li Bai Songs" for baritone, violin and guitar.

McMullin earned his bachelor of music degree from Yale University and is pursuing his doctorate in music theory and composition at New York University.

McMullin also received the 2000 Aaron Copland Award.

D.J. Sparr, Ann Arbor, Mich., was awarded third prize for "Woodlawn Drive" for chamber ensemble. He is a graduate of the Baltimore School for the Arts in guitar and performance and studied at Eastman School of Music.

Sparr is pursuing his doctorate at the University of Michigan where he has a Regents Fellowship. He received the 2000 BMI Award and Honorable Mention in the Third International Guitar Composition Competition Rodrigo Riera.

Berkshire Symphony, the Young Musician's Foundation "Debut" orchestra and other groups have performed Sparr's music.

Student can get things done with- out SGA

Mat Lavigne
Opinion Editor

The last I heard is that it is still unsure whether or not SGA is going to do G.O.H.S.T. this year. I think it is too important of an event to just sit around and twiddle our thumbs waiting for SGA to get their act together.

The students do not need SGA to get things accomplished around here. If it is something that a majority of the students want, then we can get it done ourselves.

I myself would like to see SGA get back on top of things. We need a Student Government that is going to address the concerns of the students. Run by students with student interests in mind, not what someone else tells them to do. Until that happens though, we as students, are just going to have to do things ourselves.

If SGA wants to get involved with this event, that is fine with me. If SGA decides they are going to support the event this year, then they need to let the students know what is going on.

A few students involved in some of the organizations on campus have already begun this process. We are trying to get interest in the event, donations, and university approval; however, we need the backing of other students, and organizations to make this a success.

We would like to see all the student organizations get involved. That is how we are going to get the university to approve the event.

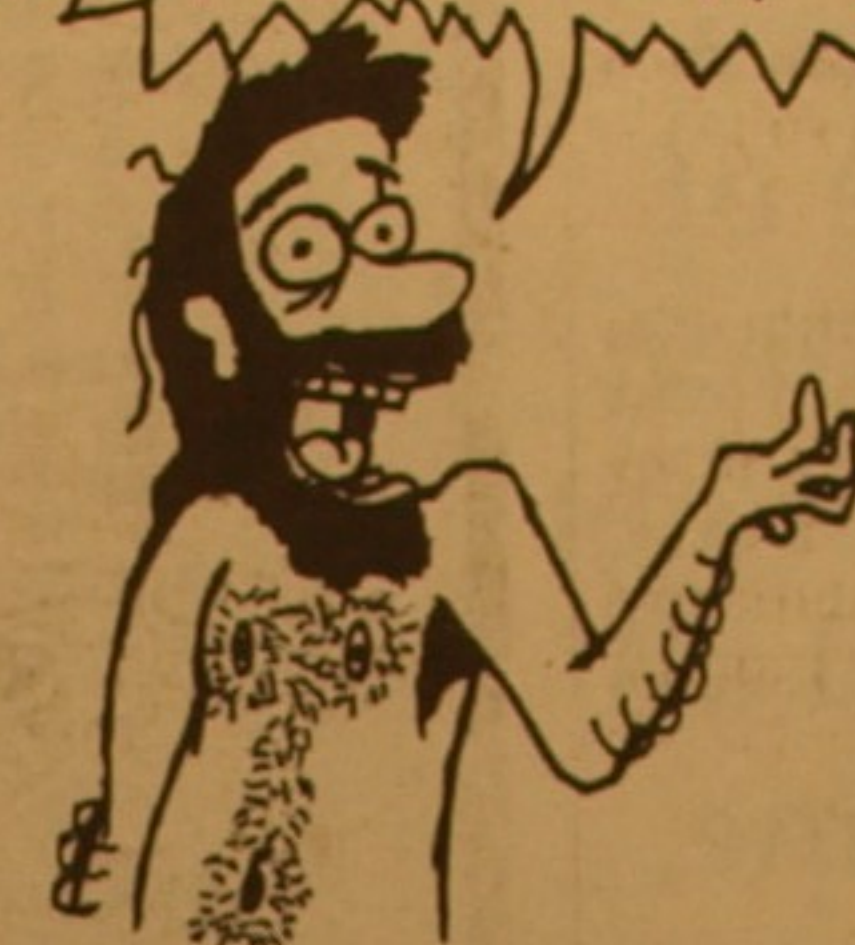

The event has been tentatively planned for Oct. 27. That is only a few weeks away, so we need to get serious about making this happen.

Any organization or individuals interested in volunteering or donating goods can contact me at the All State, or at Sigma Tau Delta in Harned Room 230.

Hummm?

Homosexuality is a Sin. It is Plain Wrong! God made
Adam and Eve not Adam and Steve!
Gay marriages are Wrong too. They will must be stopped
They ruin everything

Homophobic!

Christians have an outdated mind set
They are hypocritical,
Self-righteous and think they know what's best for everyone. Who do they think they are with all their Pointless traditions?
They ruin everything!

Christophobic?
