Not even the falling leaves nor the rain kept the boys from coming back—either for a visit or to enter school. There was George Stinner, back from across the seas, who spent several days around the campus. To those who had known him before, it seemed like “old times.” He was in civilians, too, and has plans for entering the University of North Carolina.

Recently Nevyn McKinnon, former Navy test pilot stationed at Fort Bennett Field, New York, paid us a flying visit.

And one here to stay, at least for a quarter or two is Earl Bradburn, Earl registered at the mid-term period.

Seen at the Halloween party was Smithie Keel, wearing five gold stripes on his sleeve and two silver bars on his shoulder. Upon release from service, Smithie plans studying Foreign Relations at Notre Dame.

The list of discharged alumni is growing so rapidly that I find it a difficult task indeed to keep up with them. At practically the same time, Charles “Lollipop” Darnell, Dan Peterson, “Mop” Martin, and Fred Gustin donned civilian clothes.

Pred is registering at the University of Tennessee before long.

Although we’re getting back old attendants of the College, we’re still losing one now and then to the service. The one spoken of now is Roy Lander, who left for the Navy recently. Best of luck, Roy!

City Council Votes Against Gas Station On College Street

With but one dissenting vote, the City Council voted down a request by Ashley Dabbs to change the zoning law restricting building on College Street. Mr. Dabbs and Sheriff Maury Sanderson desired to erect a filling station on the south side of College Street on the corner of Drane Street. The opposition was represented by Western Grisard, who spoke for the property owners on College Street, and Dr. P. P. Claxton, who spoke for the State Board of Education in behalf of Austin Peay State College.

Banquet Reassembles Members of College Alumni Association for Interesting Meeting

Gathering for their first meeting since November, 1942, approximately 100 loyal alumni, faculty members, and friends of Austin Peay State College assembled at the College Cafeteria on Friday evening, October 26, 1945, for a gala evening replete with good fellowship, good food, and fun.

Since James Gibbs, the association's president, was absent, Dr. P. P. Claxton presided. A banquet was held by Dr. Harley Pite, associate dean, preceded the delicious three-course dinner. President Claxton extended a cordial welcome to all the guests, and recognized the presence of several faculty members and former students who have recently returned from military service. He expressed pleasure that one of the guests, Major H. Lee Harville, is expected to be back as dean of the college soon.

Directed by Professor Guy Lunn Hague, the college choir rendered several musical numbers which were greatly enjoyed by those present.

Social Studies Conference For High School Teachers Is The First Of A Series

Sponsored jointly by the College and the State Department of Education, Division of High Schools, a conference of teachers of social studies in high school was held at the College on November 20, from 6:00-9:00 p.m. The conference was presided by a banquet at the College Cafeteria, beginning at 6 o'clock. Professor Harley L. Law of the geography department presided. This was the first of a series of such conferences, which is planned to include English, science, mathematics, and other high school subjects.

Invitations were sent to all high school teachers of social studies. The program included a welcome by President Claxton, a statement of the purpose of the conference by Professor D. H. Pite, and talks by outstanding teachers in the region. Mr. Howard Kirksey, former principal of Clarksville High School and now high school visitor for Middle Tennessee, closed the meeting with a talk on plans for a systematic program for the improvement of teaching the social studies.

Conference Held For Board Members

The General Education Board and the Tennessee State Department of Education are jointly sponsoring a series of conferences for school board members. These conferences are under the direction of Mrs. W. W. Harlin, of Franklin, Tenn. Mrs. Harlin is president of the Tennessee Association of Public School Board members.

The purpose of these conferences is to discuss problems of education in Tennessee and ways of meeting them. One of these conferences was scheduled for Austin Peay State College on November 13, 1945. The counties represented at this conference were Dickson, Houston, Montgomery, Robertson, and Stewart.

President Claxton Estimates The Buildings Needed By The College In The Near Future

Mark Twaine once said that any one could make a prophesy a thousand years ahead; to prophesy for the near future is more difficult. But it is quite as easy to prophesy an average attendance of 750 students at Austin Peay State College within the next few years if preparation is made for them in buildings, equipment, organization, and teaching in education, as in some other things, supply helps to create the demand.

In replying to the request of Burgen E. Dosselt, State Commissioner of Education and Chairman of the State Board of Education, for the statement of buildings needed at Austin Peay State College within the next few years, I submitted the following:

1. A Science Building to house lecture rooms, laboratories, offices, and store rooms for chemistry, physics, biology, sociology, botany, geology, home economics, art, culture, geography, and for the present a few class rooms for some other subjects. For this building sketch of plans has been made by Speight and Hibbs, Architects. The cost is estimated by the architects at $550,000.

2. Health and Physical Education Building with Swimming Pool. Probable cost, $112,000. For this the college had made and paid for plans in 1932, but all funds not contracted were reverted to the Treasury by the Legislature of 1933. Use of the army and the municipal stadium across the street for contests makes this building more necessary, but makes unnecessary a building as large as would otherwise be needed.

3. Dormitory for Men to cost approximately $125,000. This should be equipped with student lounge room and other modern conveniences for such college buildings.

4. Addition to Workshop to be equipped for metal work. Cost of building and equipment estimated at approximately $80,000.

5. Building to replace Castle Building (now under construction) old to house administration, student union, library, museum, and lecture rooms, laboratories, offices, and store rooms. Department of Education, History, Sociology, and Economics.

6. Building to replace Stewart-Waddell Buildings, to provide assembly hall to seat 800, lecture rooms, offices, and store rooms, practice rooms, for English, foreign languages, commerce, mathematics, art, music. Probable cost, $475,000.

7. Heating plant for new buildings repaired and enlarged to meet new requirements.

8. Either the college or the county (Continued on Page 5)

Dr. Norman Frost Of Peabody Faculty Addresses Students

On October 26, Dr. Norman Frost of the Peabody College faculty addressed the students and faculty of Austin Peay State College. He extended the challenge that “any good teacher, at least those in the countries and towns of less than 25,000, can be worth one million dollars to the community in which he is.”

Dr. Frost proceeded by giving numerous examples of teachers, who have done much. An instructor of a school in a small New Mexico town raised the standard of living considerably by introducing flower boxes into the school. Another in southern Illinois started the raising of asparagus in her section. In conclusion he said, “Make the best practice the general practice. If you can do this, you can leave behind you a better community.”

Conference At A.P.S.C. On Visual Education

A conference on Visual Education was held at Austin Peay State College November 6, 1945. This conference was sponsored by the Division of Extension, University of Tennessee, and is under the direction of Mr. J. E. Arnold. All counties near Clarksville sent representatives to this conference.

The program which began at 3:45 p.m., was as follows: Greetings—Dr. P. P. Claxton, President, Austin Peay State College.

Address: “Visual Instruction at the Threshold of the New World”—Mr. Dennis Williams, United States Signal Corps, Photographic Center, New York.

Demonstration: “Utilization of Classroom Films”—Mr. J. E. Arnold, University of Tennessee.

Screening of Classroom Type of Educational Films—Mr. C. R. Kraken, Educational Consultant, DeVry Corporation, Chicago.

Address: “Evaluation and Selection of Audio-Visual Teaching Material”—Mr. Crokes.

Short Talk: “Good Projection and Film Care”—Mr. Frank L. House.

Commercial Department Shows Much Success In Training Secretaries

The Commercial Department of Austin Peay State College was organized in 1932. At the beginning, Mrs. Garnett Ladd was the only teacher. The first year two departments of Education, History, Sociology, and Economics. A number of excellent courses are offered. At the prospective commercial student, such as beginning and advanced shorthand, typing, stenography, secretarial practices and office practice, business English, accounting, business law, investment and business insurance. The department offer a short secretarial course, which may be taken along with the primary and secondary courses if one prefers this. Commercial work studied in connection with the primary and secondary enables the student to go into the business world with a far better knowledge of the commercial world than the student who has had only the commercial training.

A few of the students who have profited by their commercial courses are: Alma Jo Webster and Mary Riley, who are commercial teachers in high school in Sardis, Tennessee and Bartlett, Tennessee, respectively; Cornelia Kennedy, a private secretary in the Intelligence Service in the American Embassy, London, England; Bess Bruce, a private secretary of the (Continued on Page 2)

Reasons Why A.P.S.C. Enrollment Will Grow

In planning a building program at Austin Peay State College for the next few years, I have estimated increase in the annual enrollment to an average of 700-800. Rightly estimated, I believe, for the following reasons:

1. The average annual enrollment as a Junior College through eleven years, including the years of drastic depression, was 485; the addition of two years of Senior College should increase this enrollment by at least 50 per cent to 732. That so much increase may be expected in normal times is clearly indicated by the fact that when a third year was added to the college, 173 third year students were enrolled. This was in 1939-40 before Pearl Harbor. The senior class of the next year was in proportion. Tennessee now has only about two thirds as many men and women in college as the average of the country at large. There is a new educational spirit in Tennessee and the state will not long continue to lag so far behind. To reach the present average will require 50 per cent more than the present number of college students. Increase in population will add to this number. Austin Peay State College should share in this increase.

2. The chief function of this college is the preparation of teachers for which it has a good reputation. Raising the standard of preparation of teachers will add to its enrollment.

3. For the next six years, thousands of men and women discharged from military service will enter Tennessee colleges. Austin Peay State College should get its good share of these.

4. College attendance is largely local. Of 28 senior colleges for white students in Tennessee, only 7, including Austin Peay State College, are west of Nashville, but 37 per cent of the population of college age are in this territory. Austeacher of American history. He spoke on "Teaching American History in the Post-War World." Mrs. Hugh Burman of the Gallatin High School spoke on "Teaching European History in the Present Era." Mrs. Burman's subject is of paramount importance in a time when the need of understanding our European neighbors is so desperate. She brought to her subject an appreciation of its importance as well as a record of successful experience with students at the Waverly and Gallatin High Schools. "Meeting the Needs of the Superior Student" was discussed by Mrs. Gladys Jackson of the Ashland City High School. After making an outstanding record teaching in the elementary schools of Cheatham County, Mrs. Jackson graduated from Austin Peay State College in 1942. Shortly afterwards she began teaching in the county high school, where she has made herself known for her successful work in providing for individual differences of students.

Miss Verda Broome, whose teaching career in many respects parallels that of Mrs. Jackson, is also a 1942 graduate of Austin Peay State College, where she majored in social science. So successful was her record in Clarksville elementary schools that she was transferred to the high school, where she has had an enviable success in teaching social science to high school students.

COMMERCIAL DEPT.

Allen Manufacturing Company, in Nashville, Tennessee; and Virginia Phillips, a private secretary to the vice president of the Ragland Grocery Company located in Nashville, Tennessee. Other students, too numerous to mention, hold splendid positions with salaries varying from ninety dollars to two hundred and thirty-five dollars per month.

Each student who has taken the commercial training offered by the P. R. C. and who has worked conscientiously is now gainfully employed in either government work or private industry.

Austin Peay State College is the only senior college in the territory over the state west of Nashville and east of the Tennessee river. With the exception of Bethel College at McKenzie, there is no senior college in West Tennessee north of Jackson. Austin Peay State College gets students from these northern counties of West Tennessee.

5. In the 13 counties from which Austin Peay State College has drawn most of its students, 1,348 white students graduated from high school in 1940, in which year 73 of our students were from these counties, 27 per cent from other counties and states. Austin Peay State College's share of these graduates should bring 250 freshmen a year.

These, I believe, constitute good evidence of the safety of my estimates.

Old Hickory's Spirit Lives On Even After A Century's Past

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the parlor of the family home of Wena Hadley, now a freshman at Austin Peay State College, there is a mahogany sofa covered in crimson velvet which once graced the parlor of the Donelson home on the road which then, as now, leads past the Hermitage, home of Andrew Jackson. It is a family piece passed on as a treasured heirloom from the days when Stuart Rachel Donelson was the beloved wife of Old Hickory.

A FIFTY-TWO

It had been a gay Christmas and announcement party for the son of the family, a captain in the army, on the eve of his departure for the battlefield. Mistletoe, holly, bright decorations and uniforms brightened the large room.

The captain and his sweetheart were alone now on the sofa with only the large wood fire furnishing light. Suddenly they looked up and were startled to see the old dignified gentleman in the oil portrait over the mantle look at the sofa and wink in a most undignified way and say, "This brings back many memories."

"Yes," replied the sofa, "I remember the gay parties in the old log house built when the country was young by pioneers on the Cumberland. I remember when I, the greatest of all fighters, Old Hickory, came to talk over the troublesome times with Col. Donelson and also to see fair Rachel. Yes, I remember how he rested his gaunt frame on my cushions; then with his brother-in-laws marched off to New Orleans."

"We moved from the log house to a new brick house where we saw many gay weddings. Then with a daughter and her husband we were moved again to live with her children and grandchildren."

"My, those children! How they bounced on my cushions—the same cushions General Jackson sat on. And that jazz and pitterbug stuff, how I long for the stately minuets!"

The old gentleman smiled. "Yet look at them now," he said, looking at the boy and girl in front of him. "At the first sign of danger to their country, the fighting blood of the old warriors stirred in them and they are off again to defend their country."

The couple stirred and the old gentleman resumed his dignified pose. The boy and girl rubbed their eyes. Did he really speak or did we dream it?

College Choir Sings At Bohemian Church

Go places and see things! Join the A.P.S.C. choir! The choir went on its first trip of the quarter Sunday, October 28. It was certainly not an ordinary or an uneventful trip. Just ask any choir member. We went to a Bohemian village near Portland, Tennessee, to sing at the Bohemian Baptist Church.

We left Clarksville about 8:45 in the morning in four cars and the station wagon. After about twenty miles one car was missing. This car had six of the girls in it. After we reached the church, we discussed their absence. "No and no and finally decided that they had gotten lost and would just wait for us to come back to Springfield. They arrived about one hour late with the announcement that they had not one but two flat tires. At least they were there to help since the last two numbers with the choir."

The service at the church was very simple and informal but most effective. Most of the sermon was in Bohemian, with some translation into English by the preacher, and even though we didn't always know what was being said, we could tell by his tone that he was sincere in his belief. He read the Bible in Bohemian.

The church itself was small and in a quiet, beautiful place. It was decorated with very lovely flowers, grown by the people themselves. After the service they very graciously presented the flowers to us as a token of their appreciation.

We stayed in Springfield to eat at the "Corner Grill."

Most of us were a little tired, so we hoped the trip home would be easy and uneventful. But our fondest hopes were dashed to earth about three miles out of Clarksville, when the same car, containing the same six girls had the third flat tire!

It was a tired but happy group of girls who arrived in Clarksville about 4 o'clock that afternoon. Everyone was glad that they thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

"For goodness sake, use both hands," shrieked Josephine in the auto.

"I can't," said Stewart. "I have to steer with one."

The Halloween Party Brings Spooks Galore To "Haunted Hall"

Weird and spooky, yet gay and colorful, was the setting of the Halloween party given in the lobby of Harvard Hall Wednesday night, October 31, by the social committee. When the guests arrived, they were met by most ghastly ghosts and soon were sent through the Hall of Horrors, from which dark and eerie caverns came many shrieks and giggles from members of the "weaker" sex.

When this ordeal was over, the guests found themselves again in the dimly lit, leaf strewn, and jack-o-lanterned lobby. For a short while they amused themselves by taking part in such games as bobbing for apples and throwing darts. All that could bear to know their future consulted the gifted fortune-teller on hand and were shaken by the prophecies for the coming years that she found in their palms.

A grand march, directed by Mrs. Marvin Lowe, started the dancing, which continued for the remainder of the evening. Between dances, the couples were refreshed with apple cider and cookies.

Dear Miss Maidenever

My dear Miss Maidenever,
I am desperate. What must I do?
Desperately,
DESPERATE

Relax. Don't be so desperate.

Dear Miss Maidenever,
I used to have a lot of girls. They came in droves but I drove them all away. What makes me like this?

Hopefully,
Mr. S.
Hub! Young man, this all sounds like a fairy tale.

Dearest Miss Maidenever,
My appearance is haggish. Why do people call me an old hag?
Haggishly,
HAGGISH

Read books on how to improve your haggish looks.

Dear Miss Maidenever,
I am madly in love with a man who is some years older than I. He's ninety-five to be exact. Should I marry him now or wait until I am as old as he?
Doubtfully,
Miss MET

Marry him now; that is if you believe him to be old enough to know his own mind.

Dear Miss Maidenever,
He is all the time beating me, cursing the children, gambling and drinking and going out with other women. I am pouring my heart out to you in hope that you will advise me on my very serious prob-

Six Students Nominated For College WHO'S WHO

Six students attending Austin Peay State College have been nominated and accorded to have their biographies appear in the 1945-46 edition of WHO'S WHO AMONG STUDENTS IN AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES. A publication which is the only free nation-wide recognition for outstanding college students. The nominees are: Jo Anne Cooper, Mary Lowe Dickson, Johnnie Givens, Margaret Kerr, seniors; Dorothy Busch, and Betty Lou Stagers, Juniors.

Besides majoring in music, Miss Cooper is editor of the college annual and a member of the choir.

Miss Dickson, English major, is editor of the All State, and president of the senior class.

Miss Givens is president of the Student Council and is taking her major in English. Mrs. Kerr, who is majoring in social sciences, is vice-president of the International Relations Club. Miss Busch is president of the junior class and is one of its representatives to the Student Council. She is majoring in English and Chemistry.

Mrs. Stagers is secretary-treasurer of the Student Council and is majoring in English. Nominees for "Who's Who" must be Juniors or seniors, and they are selected on the basis of scholarship, character, and leadership in extracurricular activities. They were nominated this year by the deans.

Mrs. Lacking N. Head
I would advise you to ignore these silly letters. They will only tend to worry you.

My dear Miss Maidenever,
Life is such a bother. I am very bothered with everybody and everything. What must I do?
BOTHERED

Take Carter's Little Liver Pills, they satisfy.

Dear Miss Maidenever,
I have a dry wit which none of the teachers seem to appreciate. How can I control it?
Puzzled,

On Teaching My First Class

A BEGINNER FINDS THAT THE TEACHING PROFESSION IS FAR FROM AN EASY TASK

On September 2, 1943, I entered a schoolroom, with only one year's general college training, not as a student but of all things, as the teacher! There's no use pretending that I was completely at ease. I most certainly was not! I was scared to death.

I walked in having no idea how to begin. What should I say first? How should I act? I looked into the clean, shining faces of about thirty-five second grade children and into the anxious faces of three or four mothers, who had come to see that their children got the proper start. I felt as though I were being inspected. I'm sure those mothers must have groaned inwardly when they saw into that room to teach their children. They must have been even more dismayed after they investigated and found that I'd had absolutely no training for the position I was attempting to fill.

Perhaps if I had known at the beginning what I soon discovered afterward, I would never have gone into that room for the first time. I soon found that the group of boys and girls I was to teach were not really second graders at all, but were still in first grade level. They had had the misfortune to have their first grade teacher a person who took her responsibility too lightly. She had dropped the teaching profession 3 months before the end of the year. A more capable teacher had taken over the last three months. I said capable, not superhuman. Even though she did an excellent job, I found that I had to teach them all over again almost from the beginning. So my task was to teach them first grade material and yet prepare them for the third grade. This was no easy task for an untrained, inexperienced person of eighteen.

I won't try to tell you how I did all that had to be done. I don't really now that myself. On looking back I find it hard to believe the whole thing even happened.

For instance, the teaching of children to read was completely new to me. I bought a complete new set of flash cards and even made some of my own. Instead of starting the children in a second half first reader, I started them in a pre-reader. Then followed the primer, two first readers and then as many second readers. The slower group hardly finished one. But at the end of the term all but three or four children were promoted to the third grade.

Even though I did my best, I couldn't have accomplished what I did without the help of a willing supervisor and a patient and capable principal. It was also with their assistance that I taught another group of children (more fortunate this time) in that same room the following year.

It was certainly an experience, but one which I highly value.

PRESIDENT CLAXTON

ty must provide building for the demonstration-practice school which will probably cost approximately $55,000. Never satisfactory for such use, the New Providence demonstration-practice school building is now outgrown. The new building, however built and wherever located, should house both elementary and high school, necessary for the preparation of teachers both for elementary schools and for high schools.

These costs are estimated on present prices of material and labor.

These buildings are not necessarily to be provided in the order named. All will be needed soon. The service for G. I. men and women may soon make necessary some of those later in the list.

I feel quite sure of my prophecy for the need of all these and the anticipated growth of the college if provisions are made in time.

P. P. CLAXTON, President.

ALUMNI BANQUET

told, to the discredit of the guests, that 123 tracer cards had to be mailed to follow up the original invitations.

Appreciation was expressed for the beautiful flowers furnished and arranged by Mrs. Garrett Ladd and Mrs. F. C. Woodward, and for the delectable dinner planned and served by Mrs. Ford, Mrs. Watson, and their caterers staff for the music by the choir, and for all the combined efforts which made the meeting a success. A number of former students, representatives of various classes, were recognized with wittily appropriate comments from Mr. Woodward.

The address of the evening was delivered by President Claxton, who, in more serious vein, reviewed with pride the contribution made by the college in training teachers for the schools of the state and surrounding countries, and the leadership given by the college in raising the general cultural level of our section of the state. The college president called particular attention to the part the college has had in the war effort, notably in cooperating with the Army and the Navy in their training program of aviation cadets. He mentioned the excellent work done in the field of teaching aeronautics under the state scholarship plan.

Dr. Claxton told of the success of the off-campus classes which have been conducted during the war years by various faculty members. He stated that classes are still being conducted at Dover, Erin, Waverly, Charlotte, and Greensboro. These classes give great help to teachers in the field, who, because of wartime restrictions on gas and tires, were unable to attend classes held on the campus.

The speaker pointed out that during the war the following faculty members have been serving in the armed forces: Dean Halbert Harvill, Dr. Marvin E. Lowe, and Dr. Royal Shankle, and that Dr. Charles Gilmore and Coach Fred T. Brown have been loaned to the State.

Speaking of the reduced enrollment during the past few years, President Claxton said that as in all colleges the enrollment had dropped severely. Here the total enrollment during the war years fell to 30 per cent of the normal number of students while the percentage of men enrolled dropped from 42 per cent of the total enrollment during pre-war years to less than 10 per cent during the war. Students were beginning to drop out of college in substantial numbers, however, and President Claxton foresees a steady increase in the number of students enrolling, as ex-service men and women could be expected to take advantage of the educational provisions of the O. I. Bill of Rights, and as wartime employment ceased. He saw no reason why it would be too and is timely to believe that the enrollment in a few years would reach the 700 mark.

The building program, the bright dream for the future of the college, was explained. Included in the program which would cost one and a quarter million dollars, were the following buildings: science building, health and physical education building with a swimming pool, wood and metal working building, buildings to replace the Stewart and the Castle buildings, a demonstration school building and a dormitory for men.

As the enrollment increases, so must the faculty be expanded, and

Dope On The Dopes

ORRECTOR, YOU LADS AND LASSIES, MOSTLY LASSIES, YOUR GARRULOUS GOSSIP GATHERER TAKES A TEN-MINUTE BREAK FROM THAT WORLD CIVILIZATION TO SLING YOU A LITTLE DIRT ON THE DOPES, speaking of dopes who could think of H. J. as a dope after the part he took in the Halloween party, but how about that date for the movies with ANNE ASKEW?

Ah, yes, those Halloween ghosts noised STEWART B. and JOSEPH PRINE BURTON dancing cheek to cheek, or rather, jaw to jaw. In same position were MARY STOKES and JACK. And who would have had two corsages to wear but MARY DRAKER?

Have you heard about the two JUSTICES and the two HANCOCK brothers? And there's HELEN and CHARLES and ELEANOR and an additional eleven faculty members would probably be needed in the future.

There were four important contributions which a lay and co-operative alumni group could make, explained President Claxton. The alumni could: (1) establish a fund to be needed scholarship fund, (2) speak a good word for the college and encourage worthwhile students to enroll, (3) organize active alumni groups in counties from which the college has had students, and (4) come back to the college as often as possible.

At the conclusion of Dr. Claxton's speech, Earl Sexton, chairman of the nominating committee, gave the committee's report, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, N. A. Link, 1948 graduate, and county judge of Stewart County; vice-president, Grace Hyde, 1945 graduate and teacher in Robertson County; and secretary-treasurer, Dixie Parker, supervisor of schools in Blount County. Professor F. C. Woodward agreed to continue his duties as sponsor of the alumni organization.

In response to the demands for a speech, Judge Link, the newly-named president, expressed his appreciation of his election to the only office in his career which had required no electioneering or "politicizing" on his part. On this point, however, there exists a shade of doubt, since certain trustworthy alumni report that the worthy judge was so slugging a very good deal to Faculty Sponsor Woodward just before the appointment of the nominating committee.

Loyal support of the college and cooperation in all alumni projects was urged, and an invitation was extended to all to be present at next year's gathering.

SOMETHING NEW WAS ADDED RECENTLY TO CALVIN HALL. FROM THE LOOKS OF HIM WE ALL WISH HE WAS A PERMANENT ADDITION TO THE CAMPUS. HOW ABOUT FIXING THAT UP, DOT ROACH! LUCKY PEOPLE!

Who could get by with slinging in Chapel like JEANNE DRAVER besides JEANNE DRAVER? Unabashed, she continued her song after the ignominious audience apoplexy. And who could have those three flat tires within three hours but BETTY WALLACE? OH, WELL, WHO WOULD MIND HELPING SIX DAMSELS IN DISTRESS?

Poor SARA BELL!! Between keeping her BILL from Fort Knox, her FRANK who has recently arrived in the States, and her PETE who is at Camp Campbell, apart and keeping them all still on her trail, she is practically a nervous wreck. THREE OF THEM AT ONCE! DID I SAY POOR?

CLARICE, is floating around in a cloud waiting for BUCK to come to Clarksville. And in those beautiful things called civilian clothes, too.

Although she and JIMMY ELLIOTT have called it quits, MILDRED doesn't seem to be pining away by any means. For instance, that "RED," who seems to be an unfeeling jitterbug. Oh, yes, and her roommate, RONNY HARPER, seemed to have a mighty scary but enjoyable time struggling through the Hall of Horrors.
