G.H.O.S.T. treats kids of all ages

by Holli K. Froemming
editor in chief

Hundreds of community members gathered at Austin Peay State University for the annual G.H.O.S.T. (Great Halloween Options for Safe Trick-or-Treating) event Oct. 31.

Students, faculty and staff members set up tables around the bowl area in the center of campus and handed out candy to a steady stream of children of all ages.

The children left with bags full of goodies, but that was not the only thing that enticed the kids.

Teddy Kitterman, 9, son of English professor Barry Kitterman, says his favorite thing is not the candy.

"[My favorite thing] is doing the little games," says Teddy, in reference to the booths set up with activities for the kids. "Second, would have to be the candy."

Students at the Kappa Sigma pledge table set up a "fishing" type game where the kids cast their line and a table volunteer would attach a piece of candy to a hook, and the children could reel in their candy.

This is not the first time some of the kids have come to campus for the event. Christy Olsson, 6, won the costume contest last year when she came as a toilet, complete with flusher.

This year, she teamed up with her sister Danica, 5, to come as Rageddy Ann and Andy.

The costumes were a major part of the festivities, although this year there were no contests. Older people came as everything from "Scary Professor Man" to clowns, prom queens to witches. Someone even came dressed up as fire.

The children's costumes were a sight to see as well. One boy came with a mask that actually bled and Dorothy from the "Wizard of Oz" was represented. In addition, Tigger was one of the most commonly seen costumes.

"The costumes are much better than when I was a kid," says Mike Van Dyke, an APSU policeman who was patrolling the area, making sure people in the large crowd were safe.

The size of the crowd was debated. Some people say it was bigger last year, some say this year's crowd was larger.

"It was a lot bigger last year; there were more kids," says April Smith-Moore, who was handing out candy for the Institute of Management Accountants. "The candy supply was greater also."

Last year, says Smith-Moore, a senior accounting major, every group participating was asked to bring their own candy to hand out.

In addition, the Student Government Association provided barrels full of candy.

This year, however, since SGA is

Students given chance to participate in ASA

by Jerome Parchman
guest writer

Students at Austin Peay State University are invited to participate in the 43rd annual meeting of the African Studies Association.

The annual meeting has grown over the years into one of the largest gatherings of Africanists in the world, with participants from America, Africa, Asia and Europe.

Every year, ASA honors recipients of the following awards: the Children's Book Award, Conover-Porter Award, Distinguished Africanist Award, Herskovits Award, International Visitors Award and the Text Prize.

The International Visitors Program funds the expenses for one international visitor at the annual meeting. The chosen visitor will interact with scholars at various institutions and universities.

A senior African scholar will deliver the Abola lecture the Saturday of the convention at 5:30 p.m.

The keynote speaker for the Women's Caucus Luncheon is Dr. Wilhemina J. Donkoh, a lecturer in African history at Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology in Kumasi, Ghana. She is part of the faculty of social sciences at the university.

In addition to speakers, ASA will sponsor a job registry to help participants seeking employment.

The conference also will feature the latest documentaries and feature films from and about Africa, exhibits, a book signing by Phillipe Wamba and an African Studies poster session.

Pre-registration is available to students (undergraduate and graduate) and costs $20.

For more information, contact Jacqueline Wade, director of the African American Culture Center, at 221-6274 or Dr. Alvin Hughes at 221-7936.

Three Austin Peay State University students were sent to Gateway Medical System Oct. 25 after overdosing on a seed called Jimson Weed.

Lee Patterson, and two others who wish to remain unnamed, were rushed to the hospital by three other students, two of whom were Bianca Jones and Mike Davis.

The students received the Jimson Weed from another student, Kick

Garcia.

Garcia took the seeds from the agricultural department, says Patterson.

Patterson believes Garcia knew the substance was lethal but instructed them to take a spoonful of the seeds (about 150), a dosage that nearly killed the three students.

The normal dose of this drug is one or two seeds, but Patterson said he did not know the correct amount when he consumed the seeds.

"I remember lying down around 5 p.m. Next thing I know, I'm in the hospital"

Patterson says he ate the seeds at about 1:30 p.m. and it took about an hour for him to begin feeling the effects. He says he got really tired and his body began to feel extremely heavy.

"I remember lying down around 5 p.m," he says. "Next thing I know, I'm in the hospital."

The three students were released from the hospital last week and are once again attending classes.

Garcia, says Patterson, was expelled from the university for his involvement.

According to Patterson, Joe Mills, director of housing, says no drug charges can be brought against the three other students because the substance is legal.

Another Austin Peay community member vies for presidency

by Michael Wall
guest writer

Dr. Sherry Hoppe, interim president at Austin Peay State University, is no longer the only one from within the university ranks to apply for the presidency.

Dr. Joyce Mounce, former vice president of finance and administration and now political science faculty member, has entered her name in the applicant pool.

Mounce came to APSU from the University of Central Oklahoma, where she was vice president for administration from 1987-1995.

She earned her master's and doctorate degrees in political science at the University of Oklahoma, Norman.

While working towards her Ph.D., a member of her dissertation committee asked why she wanted her doctoral degree when she was already a vice president.

"My answer was, with the Ph.D., I can be considered for either a presidency or a faculty position," she says. "Either represents a new challenge and an opportunity for growth."

Mounce may receive her new challenge, says Jeff Osgood, a student representative on the presidential search advisory committee. decision-making capacities at the university.

"Mounce is a very strong candidate for the position and might be the toughest challenge for Hoppe," says Osgood.

Dr. Jennifer Meningall, vice president of student affairs, says it's a positive reflection on the university to have two of its members apply for the presidency.

"There is something positive to say about Austin Peay when more than one candidate vies for the presidency after knowing the environment."

"I don't know much about Mounce and her record as vice president, but she is nice and people-oriented," says Heather White, a student at Austin Peay. "To me, that should be one of the most important criteria for our new president."

As the search process for the Austin Peay president continues, it might come down to Mounce and Hoppe. They have both been involved in the administrative says Hoppe still has a good chance at being selected.

"Mounce is a very strong candidate for the position and might be the toughest challenge for Hoppe,"

"Hoppe has proven herself time and time again as the interim president," he says.

In addition, he thinks Mounce's resignation from her position as vice president of finance and administration could affect the final outcome.

Mounce resigned in June and although Osgood says the resignation may not have been a willing one, it may be an important factor in the decision.

The decision is expected to be made by February by Charles Manning, chancellor of the Tennessee Board of Regents, and the Presidential Search Committee.

Students gather to participate in "Campuswide Worship"

by Lorneth Fahie
guest writer

Several on-campus Christian groups, including Chi Alpha, the Wesley Foundation and the Baptist Student Union, came together recently for a night of "Campus Wide Worship."

After opening with prayer, the Chi Alpha praise and worship group, led by Mark Campbell, began playing.

The BSU mime team performed to a song called "All about you Jesus." The message of the song was to glorify God in everything.

Student Casey Parks then asked everyone to think about their motives when participating in praise and worship.

"When we sing, are we doing it because everyone around us is, or are we doing it with a pure heart," she asked.

"We must praise God regardless of what the people around us are doing or saying."

Alecia Lemay, a member of the BSU, ended the night with a scripture reading.

"As we go through the day, when we eat, sleep and work, let us do it unto God," she said.

Parks says the purpose of the meeting was to praise God with people of all denominations.

"[It was] a chance to get together with other Christians - it didn't matter what denomination you were in," she says. "We were all there to worship God."

going through a time of restructuring, they did not participate in the organization of the event.

An hour into the event this year, groups were running out of candy and some students went to other tables "trick or treating" to get candy to hand out at their own tables.

The office of Student Activities did provide large amounts of candy, but it had to be rationed out more so than last year.

Jennie Preston-Sabin, director of Student Support Services and associate professor, however says the crowd was bigger this year. In addition, she says the table decorations and student participation were much better this year than last year.

One of the student groups participating in the event was the Student Art League.

Their only complaint was they were so far away from where they saw the center of action.

Their booth, which consisted of a table and a large box kids could walk into to see a "monster," was located near Harvill Hall.

Other people commented on the lack of lights in that particular area as well. Most people congregated by the cafeteria.

"The kids seem to like it though - coming through and getting candy," says Tommy Jones, senior art student and volunteer at the SAL table.

Overall, people enjoyed themselves and were glad

G.H.O.S.T. could provide a safe Halloween for community children as well as for students.

Graduate students need immunizations

by Ashley Kettle
guest writer

All graduate students who are eligible to pre-register at Austin Peay State University for classes must provide proof of the measles, mumps and rubella immunization prior to pre-registration.

"Many students get angry because they have to provide proof of their immunization, they think that Austin Peay made this a rule, but the fact is, proof of immunization is actually a law in the state of Tennessee," says Leslie Nelson, secretary of Student Health Services.

Measles, mumps and rubella are serious diseases and in order to prevent them, children should get two doses of the MMR vaccine, according to the Center for Disease Control.

Some adults should also get the vaccine.

If you were born after 1956 you should get at least one dose of the vaccine unless you have had any of the diseases. Women should not get pregnant for three months after they have had the vaccination and pregnant women should wait until after giving birth to get the vaccination.

These diseases are communicable and are spread from person to person through the air.

The fee for the vaccination is $5. For more information, call 221-7107.

Football team earns second victory

Junior tailback Brandon Garner, subbing for the injured Jay Bailey, rushed for 192 yards on 19 carries and three touchdowns, to lead Austin Peay to a 35-25 win against the University of Virginia-Wise.

Garner entered the game at the 10:53 mark of the first quarter when Bailey suffered a knee injury on a sideline run.

A transfer from Kansas, Garner scored the game's only first-half TD on an 11-yard TD reception from John Shephard.

In the second half, he had an even greater impact, including three TD runs. His 68 yarder came on the heels of a Virginia-Wise score that had cut APSU's lead to 14-13.

Again when UVA-Wise cut it to 21-19, Garner responded with another TD run, this one from nine yards out.

His final TD run (five yards) was set up by a 49-yard fumble return by junior linebacker Dustin Wilson.

"Brandon is a very competitive young man... He has been a pleasant surprise this year. Today, he carried the load"

Those two plays sealed the Govs' victory.

"Brandon is a very competitive young man," APSU head coach Bill Schmitz said. "He has good speed to the outside. He has been a pleasant surprise this year. Today, he carried the load."

"But a running back can't do it by himself. Our guys up front did a great job of dominating the line of scrimmage."

The win put the Govs at 2-7 for the season while Virginia-Wise ended up 3-7.

Basketball teams picked first, second in OVC

Austin Peay State University's basketball teams passed another signpost on their way to the regular season.

Wednesday, the Ohio Valley Conference held its annual media day and announced the results of preseason voting by the conference coaches and sports information directors.

The Governors received overwhelming support as the number one team in the preseason balloting.

Austin Peay received 14 of 16 possible first place votes (coaches were not able to vote for their own team) and were placed ahead of Murray State and Southeast Missouri, who were ranked second and third, respectively.

As expected, senior Trenton Hassell received the nod as the league's player of the year.

He shared the honor with Murray State senior Issac Spencer.

The Governors had two additional players named all-conference: seniors Nick Stapleton and Joe Williams both received second-team recognition.

"We return a pretty good basketball team," said Govs' head coach Dave Loos. "We are very athletic and we can score."

"But I believe this team will be defined by its willingness to defend."

"We've got one of the most versatile players in the league in Trenton Hassell."

"It (OVC preseason co-player of the year) is quite an honor for him and he's deserving of that type of recognition. But at the same time he doesn't let those things affect the way he plays."

"We got more out of Joe Williams in his first year than any other JC transfer since I've been here and Nick Stapleton is a guy who can turnaround a game in a

APSU volleyball squad continues winning streak

Austin Peay State University's volleyball squad ended its four-match home stand with a sweep of Murray State, 3-0 (15-2, 15-11, 15-5) in Ohio Valley Conference action Tuesday night.

The victory improves the Lady Govs OVC record to 6-6 overall and gives them sole possession of fourth place with four games remaining.

Austin Peay was in control the entire match defeating Murray State in all facets of the game.

The Lady Govs won the offensive battle with a 50-28 kill advantage and a .250 to .064 hitting percentage edge.

OVC "Freshman of the Week" Amy Walk led the Lady Govs with a match-high 13 kills, stretching her double-digit kill streak to nine matches.

She also added a match high 18 digs for her season's 13th double-double.

Senior Annie Gieber also had an impressive night with eight kills, a .467 hitting percentage and 36 assists.

Juniors Danielle Waldrep and Natalie Rossier added eight and nine kills, respectively.

Austin Peay, boasting Division I's top-ranked defense based on digs per game, won the defensive battle with a 68-62 dig advantage and a 6-4 block advantage.

In addition to Walk's 18 digs, Waldrep added 12 digs and senior Becky Sowinski had 11 digs and four blocks. Rossier also added four blocks in the defensive

Hassell leads team to exhibition game victory

Austin Peay State University senior forward Trenton Hassell scored a team-high 25 points, leading the men's basketball squad to a 102-78 exhibition victory against Sports Reach Saturday night.

The Governors scorched the nets, shooting 58.3 percent from the field, including a 62.2 percent (23-of-37) effort in the second half.

Senior guard Nick Stapleton added 22 points on 7-of-11 shooting from the field that included a 4-for-6 effort from the three-point line.

Senior forward Theanthony Haymon contributed 19 points and a team-high nine rebounds for the Gobs, recently picked as favorites to win the Ohio Valley Conference.

Austin Peay alum Jerome Jackson scored 21 points to lead Sports Reach.

The Governors end their exhibition schedule with a 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 11 contest against VASDA.

They follow the women's final exhibition game at 5:30 p.m. against Freestyle Express.

hurry."

The Lady Gobs, who last year were the first six-seed to advance to the OVC tournament finals, were ranked second in their preseason poll.

Tennessee Tech received the nod to repeat their championship and Eastern Kentucky was picked third.

Tennessee Tech's Janet Holt was named the women's preseason player of the year.

APSU sophomore Brooke Armistead was named to the preseason first team, just behind Holt.

The voters named sophomore Paige Smith to their second team and junior Kelly Chavez as honorable mention team.

"I feel good for the players because of the recognition they received," said Lady Gobs head coach Susie Gardner. "It's a sign that the coaches respect our players' abilities."

"The other positive is that our ranking, combined with the men being ranked first in their poll, will spark the interest of the fans and maybe they'll come to the Dunn Center and check us out.

"It's also exciting for our campus because of the recognition these polls bring with them."

Organ donation saves millions of lives

by Tiffanie Cohoon
features editor
The week of Nov. 12-18 will be Green Ribbon Awareness Week at Austin Peay State University. November has been designated organ donation month. Even though organ donation is encouraged and needed year around, this month puts special emphasis on the importance of it. All around campus people will be wearing green ribbons, the international symbol for organ donation, to display their support. The Living Bank, the nation's first organ registration organization based in Houston, has declared Green Ribbon Week to help increase everyone's awareness of the green ribbon and to encourage people to participate as organ and tissue donors. "I am going to sign up to be an organ donor because my organs can save the lives of others after I am dead," says junior English major Jennifer Passero.

Every day the need for organ donors increases. More than 71,000 men, women and children are still on the national waiting list for an organ transplant. Every 14 minutes another person is added to the this over-flowing list. Since there is such a low number of donors, each day 16 people on that list die still waiting for an organ. Surprisingly enough, just one individual donating his or her organs and tissue can save the lives of seven people and increase the quality of life for 30 more. "I support organ donation due to the fact that after I am gone, a part of me physically will still live on," says senior mass communication/English major Holli Froemming. One of the main reasons people don't donate their organs is because they think it disfigures the body; that myth is false. After organ donation, a normal, open casket funeral can be performed. Donor families are not charged for the recovery of organs. There are no age limits for donating, the doctors will simply evaluate the condition of the organs at the time of death. It is imperative that a person tells his or her family that he or she wants to be a donor so they can carry out that wish. An average of 60 transplants are performed daily. Organ transplant recipients lead full productive lives for years after their transplant.

"People are close-minded about organ donation, but it is important for the advancement of science," says senior psychology major Sally Presson. Green Ribbon Awareness Week will take place after National Donor Sabbath Nov. 10 - 12. For more information, contact Marion Yarbrough, secretary for the School of Technology and Public Management, at 221-1425.

Student displays autobiographical art

by Holli K. Froemming
editor in chief

Senior art student Rachel Hall will give her senior show at Austin Peay State University.

Hall is a painting and drawing major, but her show, she says, does not include paintings or drawings. Her background in those disciplines, however, has influenced the pieces in her show.

She has chosen to do her show, which she titled "Observations of Self" as an exhibit displaying objects and symbols of events that have been significant in her life.

The exhibit is a multimedia show that she says is kind of like a display of various "self portraits," but not in the traditional sense.

"[The show] consists of pieces that in some way reflect me and my life experiences," she says. "Observations of Self" is my way of branching out artistically, based on the knowledge I have gained at APSU."

"Many students consider their senior show to be the culminating experience of an undergraduate art degree. Rather than see this show as an end, I like to think of it as the beginning of my mature body of work. The past four and a half years of my life have been dedicated to gaining artistic knowledge and technical ability."

The exhibit will be on display Nov. 13-17 in the student gallery (Room 108) in Trahern. An opening reception will be held from 7-9 p.m., Monday, Nov. 13.

The exhibit and reception are free and open to the public. They are presented by the APSU department of art and the Center of Excellence for the Creative Arts.

For more information, call 221-7333.

Greeks gear up for charity week

by Kyle Skelley
guest writer

Alpha Delta Pi sorority hosts a community service week every year called "Alpha Delta Pi Dream Week" to raise money for charity.

Most of the fraternities and sororities on campus host weeks to raise money for specific charities, and the Dream Week is only one of those events.

During this particular week, many events will be held so the different fraternities can compete to raise money.

The first event is a pie auction

Monday night, Nov. 13 at 8 p.m.

The women in ADPi will bring pies and baked goods so the individuals in the audience can bid on them.

On Wednesday, at 7 p.m. on the intramural field, some of the fraternities will compete in the Pi Olympics.

The last event of the charity week will be Thursday evening. ADPi will host a Lip Synch contest where the fraternities will compete against each other in the fields of singing and dancing.

"Dream Week is always a good time for the fraternities to compete and to raise money for a good cause"

Throughout the week, a penny war will take place on campus from 11 a.m. - noon.

"All the proceeds from the Alpha Delta Pi Dream Week will go to the Ronald McDonald House and the Dream Factory," says Kelly Priebel, a member of ADPi.

"The Dream Factory hosts Camp Rainbow, which is a camp for mentally and physically handicapped kids."

"Alpha Delta Pi Dream Week is always a good time for the fraternities to compete and to raise money for a good cause," says Neil Burton, member of Sigma Phi Epsilon. "It is also a good way to meet new people on campus and have a lot of fun."

The Dream Week will be held Monday, Nov. 13 - Thursday, Nov. 16.

NBS makes a difference

by Cindy Hinton Church
guest writer

Members of the National Broadcasting Society at Austin Peay State University joined the ranks of an estimated two million volunteers across the nation who participated in the 10th annual Make a Difference Day on Oct. 28.

According to Britt DePriest, president of Austin Peay's NBS, five members worked with employees of Home Depot and area residents to paint the exterior of the South Guthrie Community Center in northern Montgomery County.

The community center serves residents of the rural community and houses a children's library.

Painting the building burgundy with beige trim required DePriest to climb a 15-foot extension ladder to reach the top of the building.

"That part was scary," he says. "But the end result was worth the effort."

The NBS was referred to the project by the Clarksville Volunteer Center.

"This was a great way for an organization that may not be able to commit to a long-term project to make a difference in the community by joining with others to complete a one-day project," says Kay Stack, director of CVC.

The CVC lists more than 200 volunteer opportunities available through non-profit organizations or agencies.

Matches are made according to the mutual concerns, interests and commitment levels.

Flexible schedules are available to accommodate volunteers.

The center is open from 8 a.m. - noon, Monday through Friday.

For more information, call Stack at 552-3997.

"This was a great way for an organization...to make a difference in the community by joining with others to complete a one-day project,"

Visiting writer gives reading of work

Austin Peay State University writer-in-residence Ellen Meloy will read from her work at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 14 in the Gentry Auditorium of the Kimbrough Building.

Presented by the Center of Excellence for the Creative Arts, the concert is free and open to the public.

Meloy has authored "The Last Cheater's Waltz: Beauty and Violence in the Desert Southwest" and "Raven's exile" as well as essays for journals.

Her commentaries are frequently featured on Utah Public Radio.

For more information, call 221-7031.

Multiethnic services helps students by providing scholarship opportunities

by Allison Flint
guest writer

The Office of Multiethnic Services offers many programs and opportunities for minorities at Austin Peay State University.

Joyce Roberts, secretary at Multiethnic Services, says the office gives a sense of belonging for all diverse groups at Austin Peay.

One of the services this office provides is the opportunity for minorities to receive a scholarship.

"We monitor all scholarships awarded to students of color," says Roberts. "Names are turned in [by APSU] and we accept qualified students."

Local band makes it to Nashville

by Heather Lyles
guest writer

A band with ties to Austin Peay State University is gaining popularity and recognition.

Mink, an alternative rock band, has gone from playing small bars in Clarksville to opening for Lit, a popular band who has released two Top 40 hits.

The performance was at the Tennessee Performing Arts Center.

Henry Go, who plays the bass guitar in the band, is a full-time student at Austin Peay.

Rhythm guitarist, Aljon Go, and lead guitarist, Andy Aquino, are APSU alumni.

The other two band members are Joe Greer, who plays the drums, and Jonda Madison, lead singer.

"It's amazing to go from playing fraternity parties at Austin Peay to opening for Lit and playing at Buzzfest," says Henry Go. "Now we are asked to play all over middle Tennessee."

"It's tiring but it has been a great experience."

Mink will play at 328 in Nashville on Nov. 17.

ed tremendously from being a scholarship recipient.

"It has given me a chance to receive a scholarship as an African-American that I probably otherwise wouldn't have received," she says.

Another program provided is FOCUS, a group that consists of African-American students who meet every other Tuesday in the African-American Cultural Center.

In addition, T-talks are held every day to discuss diversity and mentoring programs for freshmen.

The office holds diversity seminars and workshops throughout the year.
