Sharon Rae Bell, an 18-year-old business major, was selected among nine Austin Peay women Friday night in the Clement Auditorium to wear the 1983 Miss APSU crown.

A Clarksville native, Bell sang "Don't Cry for Me, Argentina" from Broadway's popular Evita in the talent competition. In addition to her crown, she received a full tuition scholarship to be used at APSU, a trophy and flowers from Christopher's Florist. She will travel to Jackson later this year to participate in the Miss Tennessee pageant.

Before crowning the new winner Suzanne Norris, Miss APSU 1982, told the audience that her reign provided her with a busy year of activities, all of them positive.

"I had a full year of various experiences, went new places and met new people. I gained a new dimension in understanding others, which made it truly rewarding," she said. She ended that year with the song "Come In From the Rain" in a special performance before Friday's crowd.

Rick Forest, former APSU student and present program director at Murfreesboro's WMOT, served as master of ceremonies for the Phi Mu Alpha sponsored event.

Presenting musical selections which centered around the pageant's "Dream Come True" theme, a foursome consisting of Mary Wyatt, Susan Plummer, Craig Dinningham and Neal Brock provided entertainment.

Bake sale debate unneeded

Senate debates committees, funding

by Tom Tarvin
Staff Reporter

Though the reading of the minutes was waived in an attempt to save time at Thursday night's Student Government Association Senate meeting, the meeting, to the displeasure of many Senators, lasted for more than two hours.

During the meeting debate arose around the five students selected to serve on the advisory committee to search for a permanent dean of students. Dr. Roscoe Shain has held the post since Dr. Charles Boehms stepped down as vice president of student affairs last summer.

President Wayne Mosley apologized for any misunderstanding statements of the minutes meeting, and then tried to clarify the issue of the search committee. Mosley sent a list of five names to President Robert O. Riggs as his recommendation to the committee. Riggs named Mosley, Linda Helms Guinn, Mike Lynch, Donna Woodall and Evelyn White to the committee.

"I think it's a pretty fair cross section of the campus," Mosley said of his recommendation. Representatives of STOMP argued that they were not receiving fair representation on the committee.

Several senators then commented that not every campus organization could be represented by only five students.

Discussion of the matter ended leaving some students present still unhappy and confused.

The issue of moving bake sales from underneath the steps of the University Center was then brought to the floor as bill 007. Vice President Kip Stevens of the junior class objected to the bill presented by Mosley pointing out that resolutions must go before the constitutional review board before they are presented to the Senate.

The senators voted to suspend the rules and heated debate ensued. The bill was later withdrawn completely realizing that Senate approval was irrelevant since Shain had already acted to alleviate the problem.

The resolution of Freshman Class President David England was considered next. The bill stated that the SGA president and two senators would submit a revised and updated constitution by the last meeting of this quarter.

The bill provoked intense debate. After the addition of two amendments the resolution was voted on and passed. Constitutional confusion during the debate demonstrated a definite need for revision of the document.

Financial package 33 then came to the floor. STOMP was asking for $839.66 to help sponsor a speaker for Black History Month. Leaders of the group said they would make up the rest of the funds that were needed.

After the most intense and prolonged debate of the evening the motion was passed with STOMP receiving the full amount requested.

Today..

Sixteen teams will compete in the Special Olympics basketball tournament which is set to get underway around 9 a.m. and last until 2 p.m.

Glenn Carter, director of the local Special Olympics program, said the teams will be divided into three divisions with the top-two finishers going on to the state finals in Memphis Feb. 18-20.

Two teams from the state will play in the International Special Olympics this summer in Baton Rouge.

Each team will play in at least two games today with the first and second place teams in each division receiving trophies and each player receiving a medal. A sportsmanship trophy will also be awarded.

Several Austin Peay students and faculty members are involved in the program.

The All State urges everyone to support these young athletes.

Dr. Robert F. Sears, chairman of Austin Peay's physics department, was elected to lead the 35 sections of the national organization which represents more than 10,000 physics instructors at the collegiate and secondary levels. Prior to election as national chairman, Sears served as secretary to the section representative council.

Austin Peay's Trumpet Ensemble will begin the concert at 8 o'clock that evening in Clement Auditorium with a program that features the premier performance of Dr. Carl Vollrath's "Six Pieces for Trumpet Ensemble."

Written in 1982 at the suggestion of Austin Peay trumpet professor Kenneth Krunholz, the piece was developed by Vollrath while serving as a composer in residence at Troy State University in Alabama. The artist was guest composer at Austin Peay in May 1982 during the music department's "Dimensions" new music program.

Parts have been misplaced

Constitution faces senate revision

by Ron Edmondson
Correspondent

The Student Government Association hopes to present their new constitution to the student body spring quarter.

A special committee, appointed to re-write the present constitution, expects to have the new constitution prepared by the end of this quarter.

According to John St. Amant, a member of the committee, the need for the new constitution arose during fall quarter when SGA President Wayne Mosley was accused of mishandling funds.

Nothing developed from the accusations, but the constitution did not provide for such circumstances should they have continued.

"The present constitution is ineffective, has grammatical errors and parts of it have actually been misplaced," St. Amant said.

"We needed to re-write it, but a situation never occurred when we felt it was a necessity. After the incident this fall we felt it was a necessity."

The proposed constitution will include a renewed main body and a full set of by-laws. Some of the recently adopted by-laws will be kept, but most of the older ones will be left out.

Ideas being considered for the new constitution include a reorganization of the senate and the elimination of class officers.

The committee is considering instead a senate which includes a representative from each academic department. St. Amant said this was "in hopes of broader ideas from different fields of study."

As a guideline for the new constitution, the SGA committee is using the present constitution as well as the Memphis State University constitution.

St. Amant called the Memphis State constitution one of the best organized he has reviewed.

Once the constitution is prepared a copy will be printed in The All State. After students have had an opportunity to examine it, a referendum will be held.

Concerning the referendum St. Amant said, "We could not ratify a new constitution without the approval of a majority of the students. The referendum will also, however give all students some input. If they see something in it they disagree with, they can suggest changes."

TISL selects AP bills

by Margaret Langford
Staff Reporter

Two pieces of legislation originating at Austin Peay State University will be presented to the Tennessee State Legislature, according to Mike Trent, vice president of the Student Government Association at APSU.

Trent says both are amendments to Tennessee Code Annotations. The first amendment refers to Tennessee's Game and Fish law, which now requires a fine of no less than $25 and not to exceed $50 for killing game out of season. The amendment would raise fines to not less than $500 and not more than $1000.

The second amendment to TCA concerns the student position of Tennessee Student Assistance Corporation. Trent says this position is now a two-year term, but under the proposed amendment will become a one year term. The purpose of this amendment is to allow more schools an opportunity to be represented.

The Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature met in November, at this meeting the Executive Council took into consideration three pieces of legislation originating at Austin Peay. The Executive Council announced at a TISL retreat in January they had accepted these two amendments.

Hypnosis sessions planned

by Dr. Ron Oakland Counseling/Testing

Self-hypnosis is the topic for a four-week seminar beginning Feb. 14.

Four sessions will be conducted at the Counseling and Testing Center from 2 to 4 p.m. on Mondays for students, faculty and staff.

Self hypnosis is one of the easiest methods of inducing relaxation. You are no stranger to self hypnosis.

Frequently when losing ourselves in concentration, we enter hypnosis without any formal induction. Daydreaming is a hypnotic state.

Hypnosis is not a state of unconsciousness, nor will it weaken the mind or lead to brain washing. There is also no surrendering of will and becoming dependent on the counselor.

Self hypnosis has been effective with symptoms of insomnia, headaches and chronic muscle tension.

It is a well established treatment for habit control such as smoking, weight control and nailbiting.

You can use hypnosis to improve study skills, exam preparation, and overcome performance anxiety in speaking. Hypnosis has also been effective in reducing the fear of heights and flying.

Persons interested in this seminar are invited to call the Counseling and Testing Center at 648-6162.

Constitutional reform needed

Senate does not represent population

The proposed restructuring of the Student Government Association's constitution is a necessary act which is long overdue.

Through the fault of no one person, the student senate has become a basically apathetic, impotent body composed of representatives of vague constituencies.

Electing officers and representatives from classes is fine for high school student councils, but a university like Austin Peay needs and deserves a more mature system of student government.

The proposal espoused by President Wayne Mosley, and under serious consideration by the constitutional review committee is a sound one. It calls for electing representatives from various departments on campus.

This is the form of student government representation which is needed at this university. Students need to be able to elect a delegate who shares common interests, not someone who happens to have earned a similar number of academic credit hours.

Recent history has shown few students vote in SGA elections. The referendum conducted by Sen. Kip Stevens on reinstating a yearbook attracted as many votes as are usually cast in two SGA elections.

This would seem to indicate that students will vote if the vote is on something they're interested in.

The fact that few students know the people who are running for class offices, and even less remember who their representatives are a week after the election, is a strong indication of lack of interest in the present system.

A major problem faced by senators under the current SGA structure is their inability to represent their respective constituencies.

This dilemma has, over a period of several years, led to the atmosphere of confusion and apathy which now exists in the senate. Some factions are willing to rubber-stamp their approval on any piece of legislation presented by the executive branch, and they become annoyed by the minority who dares to question or debate an issue.

This lack of organization has allowed SGA presidents to enjoy an unparalleled level of control within the structure of student government.

Presidents have been able to get or bypass senate approval on almost any bill for the past decade because the senate is not organized or interested enough to realistically consider it.

This does not necessarily mean the legislation is contrived with ill intentions as much as it means the balance of power between the two major branches of student government is greatly out of proportion.

Since the SGA's most important responsibility is handling the revenues from student activity fee, the student body suffers from the lack of representation.

The idea of electing representatives from departments is the best one going. Unfortunately, it may not be moving fast enough.

The constitutional review committee is scheduled to present its recommendations to the senate by the end of this quarter. Once it is approved (a process which may take weeks) it will go before the student body in the form of a referendum.

While this process is going on, SGA elections are rapidly approaching and the institution of a sound program for electing representatives may take more time than is presently available.

For this reason, The All State urges the senate to adopt a new plan as soon as possible. If the plan can not be implemented before the spring elections, we would ask that current senate serve until fall and only elections for the executive branch be held this spring.

Such a plan would be better for the university to have this senate serve another four months than to elect a senate for another year under the present format.

Best and worst departments cited

Class selection is the key to spring

Spring quarter is typically one of the highlights of any given year at Austin Peay State University, or at least it should be.

Intramural softball is in action and the weather is great for golfing. The sun is definitely in during spring quarter. The rites of Dionysus are also a source of tremendous entertainment.

However, there is one major drawback which students always seem to find themselves enjoyable spring. The proper selection of classes can afford students 12 weeks of only vague encounters with the dreadedcrippler of young parties.

Last week the office of admissions and records released their statistical report for fall quarter. Included in the report was an analysis of various departments and the average grade point average for each during the quarter.

It's only fair that you know which had the highest GPAs and the lowest before you select classes for this spring. (Note: studies will tell you the average GPAs represent varying degrees of intelligence among students rather than the difficulty of the course, however, I don't think you believe that any more than I do.)

Here are the five departments with the highest GPAs:

1. Science, 3.391. With only 33 students, this sounds like a good thing which only a very few have caught on to.
2. Military science, 3.347.
3. Physical education, 3.274.
4. Nursing, 3.182.
5. Linguistics, 3.000.

The departments with the lowest GPAs include:

1). Mathematics, 1.941. I personally don't believe that 3,278 students reached in one quarter what it's taken me five years to do.

- 2). Sociology, 2.116.
- 3). Political science. I find this one especially hard to believe, in light of Dr. Vernon Warner's visual presentations. I guess some people just don't appreciate a good cartoon when they see it.
- 4). Computer science, 2.171.
- 5). Journalism, 2.182. Any comment at this point would be suicidal.

Last week I listed other, elementary education and undeclared as the most popular majors at Austin Peay. A major shift during the fall knocked each of these out of the win, place and show positions.

The top contenders now include, undecided (10.47 percent), general business (6.37 percent) and accounting (6.37 percent). The All State would like to congratulate each of these majors on their fine showing.

Undeclared and undecided remained at the top of the list of most popular minors with records of 74.36 percent (down by 1.11 percent) and 8.88 percent (down by 1.41 percent).

straddled during the spring. I refer, of course, to classes.

So many times students, some even in their last quarter of school wander around campus under the stupor of textbookitis. This situation can (and should) be avoided.

Where Austin Peay goes in Clarksville

Where do people go in Clarksville? Austin Peay students have always played a major role in the nightlife in Clarksville. The several establishments in Clarksville receive a lot of business from Austin Peay. I would like to take a closer look at a few establishments that are known to Austin Peay.

get a beer—that is how crowded it gets. Also, I told my roommate I went to the 'Brary the night before and he said, "I was there, too. I didn't see you and I stayed there until closing."

"Really?" I asked. "Next time send up a flare, I ran out of money about 11:00."

The Camelot is another popular Austin Peay hangout. The Camelot is a good place to listen to live music, dance and drink mixed drinks with mixed company. A lot of graduate age people like the Camelot. (Notice I didn't say older people.) I was talking with this one woman about the drinking age.

"Hick yes the drinking age should be 21," she yelled. "It will keep some of the young people out of here. By the way, how old are you?"
"Uh...well...legal drinking age."

Garfield's, formerly 'The Works,' formerly 'The Waterworks,' is the newest of my top nightspots. Recent remodeling has improved the class of the place. It also is a good place to listen to live music and to drink. Garfield's is one of the few places I play pool at. I like the atmosphere a lot and can relax easily.

Down the road from Garfield's is The Stables. This is the class joint. Austin Peay has a certain crowd that thrives on 'The Stables' nachos and cheese dip. I do not know much about the dining at The Stables since I usually camp out in the lounge.

In the suburb of "Clarksvegas" is Showdowns. This establishment is noted for its rock. A major attraction for rock lovers, this place also allows women in free! Showdowns does attract the female. For some reason the military seems to have a liking for Showdowns. Maybe it's the rock-roll.

This weekend try to visit one or more of these popular Austin Peay hangouts. Your years here at Austin Peay can show you more than homework and classes!

The five following places are what I feel are popular nightspots to Austin Peay: 'Brary, Camelot, Garfield's, Showdowns and The Stables.

The 'Brary is the closest establishment to Austin Peay and counts on the university patronage. Formerly the 'Library,' the 'Brary is famous for its Monday night college night. If someone told me that Austin Peay was down on enrollment, I would have to tell them to go to the 'Brary on Mondays. The 'Brary's crowd would show that enrollment was up (or beer prices were down). Soylent Green envisioned

Cellophane and old people amazingly similar

With all this talk of what the future holds and its critics having such a pessimistic view, I have come to this conclusion. Few things scare me. I know on the average most people are scared of nuclear war or scared of finding a cadaver in their food; but what I'm scared of is cellophane.

Now think about it. This allegedly inorganic substance has more life in it than some sheer brute force it manages to give way to your effort.

As if that isn't enough once it's open it just won't close, no matter what you do. Some people have resorted to rubber bands, scotch tape, staples, and of course Super Glue! These methods are fine; but if cellophane is a genetic product it may have a memory. Whenever packages have been closed in the above manner the packages have been reopened to get the food from within. Having been so brutally abused the cellophane may decide to tear in an unconvient place, thus making it so much more difficult to close. Thank God cellophane doesn't have teeth!

If cellophane is a biological material then there is only one animal with these characteristics, and that is old people. I believe when old people die they are changed to cellophane. How that's done I don't know; but my guess would be that it's a government plot of some sort, like "Soylent Green." If it is made from old people and is a government plot then with all these cuts in social security recently I'd expect a nationwide revolt from cellophane. If you think times are tough now wait till the cellophanes of the world unite. People will die of starvation. They couldn't open a cellophane package because the cellophanes union leader said no! Nostradamus said "millions will die; the reason will be clear." I suspect Nostradamus was talking about the future of cellophane and their revolt.

This problem could be avoided but meanwhile stay away from the cellophane-it's alive.

administrators I know. No matter how much you wad it up it always returns to its original shape. It has to be a biological substance or a product of someone's genetic engineering.

This substance is widespread. It is the most popular form of preservation of most junk food. It's everywhere.

Everyone comes in contact with this substance everyday. You know as well as I do that it's the most stubborn material known to man. It takes a great deal of effort and certain amount of concentration to open cellophane packages. Even the "open here" printed in a convenient corner doesn't alleviate the problem. In fact it seems to be harder to "open here" than anywhere else on the package. With continuous concentration and

Abortion ethic set for forum

The pros and cons of interfering with the birth of a defective child will be examined in a public forum being hosted by the Austin Peay State University Honors Program Student Association.

The association, headed by Kevin Souza of Clarksville, will hold the public forum from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Feb. 16 in the Truhem Theater on the Austin Peay campus.

Scheduled to participate in the discussion are Dr. Joel Pedigo, a Clarksville physician; Lionel Senseney of the Department of Human Services; and General Sessions Judge Wayne Shelton. Dr. Albert Randall, associate professor of philosophy at Austin Peay, will serve as moderator.

Souza said two viewpoints will be examined during the forum. "Intra-uterine surgery raises many questions," Souza said. "If there is a surgical way to correct a defective child while still inside the mother's womb, should that be allowed or required?"

"Also, when an infant is born defective, how far should medical science be allowed to go in keeping that infant alive?"

Dr. Eleanor Beiswenger, advisor for the student group, said the topic was chosen because of its significance for students and for the surrounding community.

Members of the Honors Program Student Association have been or are presently enrolled in honors courses at Austin Peay and were allowed to do so by achieving a 3.3 grade point average or better. The program provides an interdisciplinary study of multiple cultures with seminar style courses.

Career fair: students to meet employers

The keen competition of today's job market has been a motivating force in the organization of the 1983 Austin Peay State University Career Fair.

The fair will be held in Austin Peay's University Center ballroom from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Feb. 23 with representatives of local, state and national businesses and industries scheduled to attend.

Doug Barber, placement director of placement services at Austin Peay, said plans for the fair indicate that more prospective employers will be present than attended the first Career Fair in 1982. "Surprisingly, it seems we'll have even more," Barber said. "There will be some excellent companies represented at the fair that have never been on our campus before."

Barber, who says more than 125 students utilize APSU placement services each week, said the fair will complement the interviews, skills workshops and resume workshops held by the placement service throughout the year.

"We're finding that more and more careers involve combined backgrounds," Barber said. "For instance, business majors with strong backgrounds in computers, accounting and other areas are more likely to be employed."

"In traveling to other career fairs, I've noticed companies are looking at the students' total curriculum, and grades are playing a big part," he added. "The job market is so competitive that grades seem to be serving as an eliminating factor for most employers."

Austin Peay's Career Fair will involve interaction between students and employers, with workshops in various areas designed to assist students in their quest for a job.

Barber said these tips are essential, and his office has tried to stress their importance over the past five years. He noted that despite stiffer competition, an Austin Peay placement survey indicated 64 percent of APSU graduates in 1982 found employment, 3 percent had entered the military and 11 percent were enrolled in graduate school. These employment figures differ by 1 percent from the 1978-79 figures of 65 percent.

"If surveyed again today, that figure would change, too," Barber noted. "More students have written indicating they have found work."

While employment rates seem to be staying close to the same for APSU graduates, Barber pointed to increasing salaries. Forty-six percent of students graduating in 1982 are earning more than $15,000.

During the next week, students who are receiving assistance through the Student Financial Aid Office will be receiving a letter in their post office box concerning the renewal procedure for summer 1983 and the 1983-84 academic year.

The letter contains important information regarding the application process for all financial aid programs handled by the SFAO, and should be read carefully. Any student who does not receive a renewal letter should come by the SFAO and pick one up.

At the time the renewal letters are sent out, the 1983-84 ACT Family Financial Statement will be made available at the SFAO, Room 216, Browning Building. All students must complete this form in order to be considered for any type of financial assistance through this office.

The FFS should be filed immediately, and by April 1, 1983 at the latest, to guarantee priority for financial aid for the 1983-84 academic year. Students may want to keep in mind, too, that many students will be required to submit a copy of their 1982 or their parents'—1982 1040, 1040A or 1040 EX form, to verify income.

Many students experienced delays in having their financial aid applications processed this year because they did not have a copy of the required tax form.

All students who are Tennessee residents are required to apply for the Tennessee Student Assistance Award. Under this program, students are eligible to receive a grant which covers up to 50 percent of the tuition and fees.

Summer applications will be available February 15, 1983 in the SFAO. The application deadline is March 31, 1983. In addition to the summer application, the SFAO must have the processed FFS from ACT in order to make any award for summer.

This includes students who intend to graduate this summer and are applying for aid for this time period only. Therefore, it is imperative that students who wish to be considered for summer assistance complete the FFS as soon as possible.

Notification of summer awards will be made around May 15, 1983. The application deadline for aid for the current academic year is March 15, 1983.

Students who have not applied for aid or have had a change in their financial circumstances are encouraged to do so before this date.

If you have any questions about the FFS, call or come by the SFAO and one of the counselors will be glad to help you.

Winter enrollment rises

by Mike Lynch
Editor-in-Chief

Winter quarter enrollment at Austin Peay State University rose 5.68 percent this year after declining by a similar figure during the 1981-82 academic year.

The statistical report issued by the office of admissions and records last week shows 4,685

students registered for classes

Last year winter enrollment fell to 4,453 from a mark of 4,681. Austin Peay had its highest enrollment for winter quarter during the 1979-79 academic year when it reached 5,094.

Enrollment for this quarter is down 6 percent from the fall of this year.

Such a decline is not uncommon for each academic year.

Douglas plays two roles

Man From Snowy River receives excellent ratings

The Man From Snowy River is a wonderful film, it's as simple as that. The acting is excellent, the scenery is magnificent, the story line is good...and so on, and so on.

Ken Douglas, Tom Burlinson and Sigrid Thornton star in this picture set in Australia in the 1870s. The movie centers around a boy, Jim Craig (played by Burlinson), who must prove to those around him and Harrison, the wealthy cattle owner who Craig works for, Thornton is cast as Jessica, Harrison's daughter and the girl Craig begins to love.

Douglas turns in a great performance in both roles, although he is perhaps a little better as Spur, a hard-knock sort of character you can't help but like. Burlinson and Thornton are relatively unknown to American movie-goers, but will surely make an impression with this film.

The one major complaint I have to lodge against this movie is that the plot is a little too predictable; boy meets girl, boy and girl fall in love, mean old man won't let boy and girl marry, etc.

However, the writers manage to keep the movie from becoming boring by adding a couple of twists in the story. The writers also fill the plot with two themes of honor and duty. Through the course of the film Craig puts these ideas into practice.

Another facet of the movie is the beautiful Australian mountain range and the dangers it presents are vital factors in the action.

The Man From Snowy River is full of romance and action. It's one of the few movies I've seen lately that's really worth the high price of admission. It is an extremely good film and a great way to spend a night away from the books.

Moseley quits APSU job

by Allan Daniels
Staff Reporter

Moseley had worked in housing for 6 years, the first six months as secretary. At that time he moved up to Housing Director and remained there until last Jan. 28.

Moseley said he is proud of the maturity he gained during his years as housing director at APSU, and called it a positive experience.

Moseley expected the job as secretary of the housing department after graduating from Austin Peay in 1977.

Martha Henry, auxiliary director, stated that "He (Moseley) did an excellent job. He had been here a long time and knew his job."

The housing department falls under the auspices of auxiliary services.

"Ken had a good rapport with the students, the people he worked with, and the administration,"

Henry said.

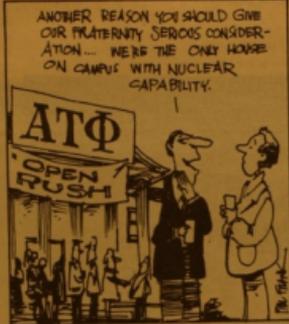

Moseley was the head resident of the Emerald Hills married student apartments until June of this year.

Moseley said this is a good time to be leaving. He said he felt that he was the right age and it was a definite advance in his career.

"I've always wanted to go into sales and to be able to do some interior decoration." In his new position Moseley will be able to do both.

Students add fine touches under new program

"REAGAN HAS PROBLEMS TOO"—Takita Small, a senior art major addresses the Student Government Association on behalf of a funding package for STOMP during the senate meeting Thursday Feb. 3.

When Marvin Posey lays down his brushes, Miller Hall will have gained a mural in the lobby, and Posey will have valuable experience in working in a new medium.

Posey, a freshman art major from Clarksville, says he has done all kinds of artwork on paper, but never handled anything this big, or this much of a challenge.

Posey said he heard of the new room personalization plan from Miller Hall's head resident, Glen Carter, and took up the challenge to make his mark, without the guidelines offered by the Housing Office.

Director of Auxiliary Enterprises Martha Henry, who oversees the housing office, said the program of room personalization was an experiment, designed to let students paint or decorate their residence lobbies, hallways and bedrooms.

The concept inspired the facelift carried out in the lobby area of Blount Hall last year, where new paint, floor mouldings, drapes and a wall-mounted television have been installed.

The residents' cooperative effort has seemed to add to the social life and the feeling of goodwill between residents in the hall and the housing office, according to Ken Moseley, retired housing coordinator.

Students wanting to decorate can sign a contract with the housing office, and with guidance from their resident assistant, choose from five paint colors. The housing office supplies paint, brushes and rollers, drop clothes and tape, and residents have one week to finish.

Inspection rarely shows substandard workmanship or cleanup, but in that event, maintenance is hired to correct it, and the contractor is billed.

Room personalization is open to all students, and is being publicized now, so that students can enjoy their work this year.

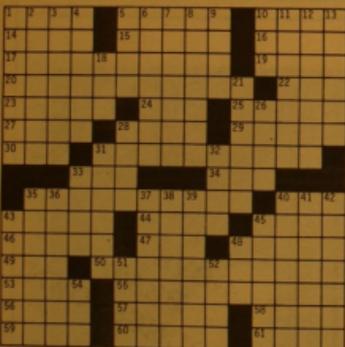

Five percent of revenue from housing is set aside annually for repair and replacement in residential halls. This year students have the chance to decide what their halls should look like.

Cross, Miller and Killebrew Halls are scheduled for redecoration this summer, with paint, fittings, curtains and some replacement of furniture, but approved work by students will not be touched. There will also be some replacement of lobby furniture following a recent donation from three city banks. Miller Hall residents also can consider plans for building bunk beds, or a sleeping loft in their rooms for about $50 per unit.

"Finished lumber, or even scrap lumber scrounged from building sites may be used for these units, which are easily dismantled," Moseley said.

"They can be sold at the end of the year, so the student will get his money back. Plans for the units can be seen in the housing office. Several students in Miller Hall have already build units, and are now 'sleeping on the job.'"

Strange currents flood Peay ball

Strange currents have been running through the Austin Peay basketball program this season.

Dunn Center's hoopsters have been flooded with problems of late. The Governors have washed down the dry taste of defeat by swallowing their pride in a season which held so much promise.

The Lady Gavs have belly-flopped to what may be the women's worst record in school history.

But, our people have not been accorded the

Claverie, Junghahn to play in Davis Cup on Venezuelan team

by Angela Fabrizio Staff Reporter

Carloa Claverie and Hartmut Junghahn, both members of APSU's tennis team, will participate in the prestigious Davis Cup on March 14 in Vancouver, Canada.

Natives of Caracas, Venezuela, Claverie and Junghahn were selected from a group of their country's top ten players.

"We spent our Christmas holidays preparing for the tryouts," Junghahn said.

"Now we are practicing at least an hour and a half each day."

The Davis Cup, one of the tennis world's most important competitions, hosts players from countries all over the world. Claverie, Junghahn and the other three members of Venezuela's team will face Canada's competitors in the tournament's first round.

"We will be ready for them," said Claverie.

privilege of viewing this season of Titanic proportions from behind the scenes—or, below the waterline, as the case may be.

Glance down the Austin Peay roster next time you're in the Dunn Center provided you still have a faint interest in our sinking Gova. (I suspect you do or you wouldn't be reading this.)

Only one senior. And, he's played about as much as I have this year.

The Gova will be returning their squad intact next season. Assistant coach Tommy Smith told student opinion poll last week, most people don't align themselves to the school of thought that hangs Peay's inequities on the cafeteria food.

But, the bottom line—the one just above the Gova's overall record, that is—is that Peay can write this year off to inexperience. Either that or admit to being no good. I suspect the former is closer to reality.

Bargatzke will be back to direct a senior-laden team next year, regardless of the rumors you've heard.

The Lady Gova's season is every bit as confusing. A lone victory in 19 attempts warrants change(s).

"There've been problems all year long," summed Lady Gov assistant Connie Sinks.

"This year's been rough," added assistant coach Elaine Swafford. "I was expecting bigger and better things."

Expect the bigger and better next year, Elaine. Bigger in the form of muscular 6-0 University of Miami transfer Sylvia Wilson and better in the form of Gayle Kinzer, who was named second-team all-OVC in only half a season with APSU last year after transferring from Vanderbilt.

Both are currently cooling their jump shots in Killebrew Hall in compliance with NCAA transfer and academic requirements.

But, the season plods onward.

Sports poll coming soon

Look for The All State's annual "Spring Sports Poll" coming soon.

Conducted in cooperation with the athletic departments of the eight member institutions of the Ohio Valley Conference, the poll features preseason predictions on league races in baseball, golf, men's and women's tennis and men's and women's outdoor track.

Gova drop two more

by Steve Harmon Sports Editor

The sound that Austin Peay basketball fans heard echoing over the hillslope of "Death Valley" last weekend can be likened to that of a swiftly-closing door—the door to the Ohio Valley Conference post-season tournament being slammed in the Governors' faces.

Eastern Kentucky and Morehead State were the most recent beneficiaries of Peay's January-and-into-February Rip Van Winkle impression as the Governors dashed through two more league games last weekend.

A 62-55 setback at Eastern in Richmond, Ky. Friday night preceded Saturday's 88-66 denial in Morehead, Ky. as the Austin Peay consecutive games lost streak reaches eight.

It was against the same EKV Colonels that Peay notched its lone conference win, a 72-61 conquest in Dunn Center Jan. 8.

With the two losses, Austin Peay drops to 8-13 on the season and 1-8 in the OVC.

Spring grid game honors Long

There will not be a Red and White Football game this spring. According to Athletic Director, Johnny Miller, it will now be The Rodney Long Memorial Fund Game.

by Allan Daniels
Staff Reporter

On Feb. 11, 1982, freshman football player, Rodney Long, was murdered by Daniel Frey, after giving Frey and Stephen Drake a ride to Interstate 24.

In reaction to the tragic event, people wanted to do more than send flowers. This mood resulted in the establishment of the Rodney Long Scholarship Fund.

Miller stated that students who usually attend athletic events for free, will be asked to pay a dollar for admission. All proceeds from the game will go to keep the fund going.

The scholarship is an endowment scholarship. After establishing a principal, the interest will be used to pay for the scholarship.

Miller said as the years go by people will gradually forget the significance of Long's name on the fund. By making The Rodney Long Memorial Fund Game an annual event money will be raised each year to insure that the principal in the fund will not diminish.

Last year between $4000 and $5000 was raised according to Miller.

The Student Government Association and several of the fraternities and sororities on campus are among the groups who contributed to the fund.

The Rodney Long Memorial Fund Game will be played in late March or early April as soon as spring practice is over.

Claverie shines

by Steve Harmon
Sports Editor

Despite his squad's less than spectacular 1-3 record early in the indoor season, Austin Peay men's tennis coach Billy Henry thinks his team is making progress for the all-important spring outdoor season.

"I've seen some encouraged signs from the kids," Henry said after his team dropped a pair of matches at Murray, Ky. last Friday and then rebounded to defeat Western Kentucky on Sunday in Bowling Green.

The Governors lost by a 5-1 count to Mississippi State Friday afternoon and were stopped 5-2 by defending OVC champions Murray State later in the day.

The inconsistent team scores resulted when coaches agreed to stop the matches when one school received five points. College matches are scored on a nine total points system.

Carlos Claverie was the lone victor for APSU in the Mississippi State match with a 6-3, 6-1 triumph at No. 1 singles.

Claverie notched his second win of the day with a 6-4, 6-4 decision over Murray State's top singles player, Mats Ljungman.

"I think they're certainly two of the strongest players in the conference," said Henry, alluding to a possible rematch in the OVC championships to be held in April on the Governor courts.

Peay's Teddy White posted a 6-3, 3-6, 7-6 score at No. 6 singles for the Gova before adding a 9-7 tiebreaker in the third set to tally the other APSU point against Murray.

Sunday's victory over former OVC-member Western Kentucky was spearheaded by Claverie, who turned back last year's conference singles champion Ken Putlak, 6-1, 6-7, 6-2.

Hartmut Jungbahn posted a 6-1, 7-6 victory at No. 2 singles for APSU, while teammates Myles Van Urk, a 6-1, 3-4, 7-6 winner at No. 3 singles, and Fred Hall, a 6-4, 6-3 success at No. 5 singles, aided the Governor cause.

Claverie and Jungbahn also teamed for a 6-2, 6-0 win at the No. 1 doubles position over the Hilltoppers.

"I'm not discouraged with our record—not at all," said Henry. "It does point out the fact that we need to work and improve to have a successful year."

The Governors' next scheduled match is a March 5-6 quadrangular in Louisville, Ky. with host Louisville, East Tennessee and Kentucky. However, Henry said that additions may be made for Peay's spring break.

Williams paces Gov runners

by Michael L. Tharpe
Staff Reporter

Sophomore Marvella Williams finished third in the 60-meter run and second in the 300 meter run to pace the Gova in the Indiana Relays held last week in Bloomington, Ind.

Williams ran the 60 meters in 7.22 seconds and clocked in at 36.47 seconds in the 300 meter run to lead all Governor runners.

Due to eligibility rules, Williams had to run the meet as an independent.

Regina Troupe placed high for the Lady Gova, as she finished fourth in the shotput with a toss of 44'1".

"Marvella and Regina competed well this weekend. They both really held their own in competing against some very tough competition," Mike Howard, APSU track coach, stated.

The men's track squad ran into some stiff competition over the weekend. The Gova had no one to place in the meet. "We did well in the meet, but the competition was just too much for our young runners," Howard added.

Howard considered the past weekend as a learning point for his squad. The Gova were up against teams such as Ohio St., Air Force and other renowned track schools.

"As long as we keep running, I feel we'll be alright. By us competing against great competition, I feel it will definitely help us in the OVC," Howard commented.

The Gova next meet will be this weekend at Middle Tennessee.

The women will not be competing this weekend, but the men's team will travel for the five team meet.

Illinois State, Murray State, MTSU and South Carolina will also be competing in Murphree Center on the MTSU campus.

Simmons, Covington win

by Michael L. Tharpe
Staff Reporter

Drew Simmons and Betty Covington won the men's and women's divisions of the Natural Light Racquetball tournament respectively, held last week in the Intramural Complex.

championship by defeating Joe Ellenburg in the finals, 21-13, 15-21 and 15-4.

Intramural racquetball

Simmons completed the four round tournament undefeated to claim the title.

Lee Hood won the tournament last fall when he defeated Rick Scango in the championship game.

The women's championship game was a rematch of last fall's championship game between Betty Covington and Ernestine "Cookie" Davis.

Davis won the fall championship, but Covington claimed revenge as she handily defeated Davis, who was hampered by an ankle injury last Friday for the title.

Covington completed the nine-member tournament by defeating all three of her opponents.

According to Intramural Coordinator Drew Simmons, the tournament turned out to be very successful, with 40 participants.

The Natural Light tournament is usually held each fall and winter quarter of the school year, according to Simmons.

"There is a slight chance that we might have the tournament again in the spring, but right now it is not for sure," explained Simmons.

to second place behind Murray State (9-0 in OVC), avenged an earlier-season loss to the Gavs by holding off a determined Clarksville five during the late stages of the game.

After trailing 30-28 at the half and falling behind by as many as nine points in the second half, APSU rallied to close the gap to 55-52 with 2:02 to play.

However, freshman guard John DeCamilla broke free for a layup and added two free throws to ice the game.

Governor workhorse Lenny Manning, who entered last weekend's action in fifth place in the OVC scoring race with a 16.4 points per game average, led Peay with 14 points and six rebounds. Fellow junior classmates Randy Harris and Greg Andrews added 13 and 12 points, respectively.

A physical Morehead State club took advantage of a disastrous start by the Governors to hand Peay its worst loss of the season.

APSU stumbled out of the blocks to trail 21-5 six minutes into the game.

The Governors regrouped to pull within nine points, 43-34, at the half.

But a cold shooting night, 34.7 percent from the floor-stymied any chance of a Governor comeback.

"We dug ourselves into too big of a hole to begin with," said Austin Peay head coach Ron Bargatze.

Four players led a balanced Eagle scoring attack at the hosts shot 54.5 percent from the field. Earl Harrison (20), Jeff Tucker (19), Jeff Tipton (14) and Eddie Childress (10) hit double-figures for MSU.

Mandel Stockton came off the bench to pour in 17 points and grab nine boards to lead Peay in both categories. Manning added 11 points and seven rebounds to the Governor cause.

APSU returns home after the five-game road trip to West Valley members Youngstown State and Akron University on Thursday and Saturday nights, respectively.

Both contests tip off at 7:30 p.m. C.S.T.

The YSU Penguins are 10-9 on the season and rank sixth in the loop with a 306 league mark.

Akron's Zips are in fifth place in the OVC with a 5-4 table. UA stands at 11-8 on the year.

Lady Gavs fall again ...and again on road

by Steve Harmon
Sports Editor

Once was not enough for the Eastern Kentucky women's basketball team.

The Colonels had edged Austin Peay's Lady Gavs, 65-64, on a last-second shot Jan. 8 in Dunn Center and turned the same trick last Friday night in Richmond.

Tina Wernuth of EKV, who led all scorers with 18 points on the evening, hit a driving layup with four seconds remaining to lift eastern to a 55-54 Ohio Valley Conference victory.

Peay had grabbed the lead with less than 30 seconds remaining when Michele McKinnon canned a 15-foot jumper.

Missed free throws on the part of both teams set the stage for Wernuth's heroics.

Amey Davis led Austin Peay with 17 points while McKinnon added 12.

The following night, APSU fell to Morehead State, 84-66, in Morehead, Ky.

All-OVC Priscilla Blackford led the Lady Eagles with 26 points and 18 rebounds.

Valerie Malons tallied 17 counters for Peay, while Davis netted 14.

The Lady Gavs stand at 1-19 on the season and 0-7 in the loop, entering Thursday's non-conference game with UT—Martin in Dunn Center.

The 5 p.m. tip-off precedes the Governors meeting with Youngstown State.

UT—Chattanooga visits Dunn Center for a 5 p.m. game Saturday night prior to the APSU-Akron contest at 7:30 p.m.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Carlos Cleverly, playing No. 1 singles for the Austin Peay tennis team, won three matches in as many outings last weekend during the Governors' indoor play.

The 20-year-old Caracas, Venezuela native defeated opponents from Mississippi State and Murray State Friday before disposing of 1982 OVC singles champion Ken Putlak of Western Kentucky in a match Sunday.

Cleverly has recently been chosen to represent Venezuela in the upcoming Davis Cup international event, along with Horacio Jungblut of APSU.
