Statistics kept by Public Safety Department show that larcenies, assaults, and forcible burglaries have decreased in the past few years while non-force burglaries have increased.

Prevention is common sense

Students can help prevent crime

With students arriving for the beginning of fall quarter, campus crime will increase. However, there are many ways students can help prevent crime.

Vandalism, increased in monetary value during the last academic year because of the desecration of the statues near Trabern. No statistics are available because it is one of the lesser areas of crime concern on campus. Students are asked to report acts of vandalism when they see it occurring. According to John Wagner, director of public safety, "It isn't a practical joke."

Most crime prevention techniques are common sense measures. Simple things such as locking doors and windows in dorm rooms are often forgotten in the rush to get to classes.

As students become familiar with campus and the people they see every day, they leave purses, books, calculators and umbrellas in public areas such as the University Center and library. Asking someone to watch these items while you are gone will help decrease the chance of your belongings being stolen.

There were only four burglaries with forced entry in 1985, down from 27 in 1982. Twenty-six burglaries involving no force were reported last year, up from nine in 1984. The total amount lost in 1985 was $5,280, also down from the 1984 figure.

Wagner suggests marking valuables, knowing what they look like and where they are at all times.

He also suggests avoiding dark, remote areas of campus at night especially when alone. Staying with at least one other person and walking in lighted areas at night will help deter potential attackers.

In 1983, three aggravated assaults were reported on campus. Last year only one aggravated assault was reported.

To help students with crime prevention, campus police offer various services throughout the year.

They will be engraving names on valuables and logging descriptions of them to help recover stolen goods.

They also will be holding an assault awareness program during the quarter. Further information on these programs can be found in forthcoming All-State issues.

Crimes reported on campus

On September 14th, a car was hit in the parking lot causing $500 damage. It was a hit and run accident and an investigation is underway.

On September 19th, a purse and portable stereo worth $50 was stolen from a car. Investigation is underway.

On September 19th, 20 graphic equalizers worth $100 were stolen from a car. Investigation is underway.

On September 21st, there was vandalism at a fraternity house. There was estimates of damage. It is under investigation.

Mudwrestlers provide G-rated entertainment

By Suzanne Alexander

The Chicago Knockers, a female mudwrestling group, will take on two local personalities Sept. 26 in the Dunn Center.

The Knockers will match wits with assistant basketball coach Steve Hill and Hal Atkins of Ideal Distributors in the 8 p.m. show. Coached by Walt Ayers of Ideal Distributors, Hill and Atkins will be escorted to the ring by Hopkinsville's Z-100 "hot spot girls."

Scheduled by the University Activities Board, the Knockers will provide a different type of entertainment than usually booked for campus appearances. "Students seem to like the idea," said Barbara Burke, director of student activities. "It's different from the country music concerts we've been bringing in."

Some questions about the exploitation of females and the suggestiveness of the show have been raised. "It's a G-rated show," said Burke. The Knockers have appeared before thousands at county fairs, auto shows, colleges and sporting events.

Student reactions vary. Many students have had no reaction at all and have accepted their scheduled appearance as normal. One male student said, "It's just another college scheme to make money and draw in large crowds, which is fine with me... I see nothing wrong with it and am really kind of neutral."

The Knockers have wowed crowds in Ohio, Virginia, Minnesota, Iowa and Florida and have challenged such celebrities as boxer Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini and race car driver Richard Petty.

Tickets are on sale for $8 at the University Center Information desk, Fort Campbell's TTT office and radio station Z-100 in Hopkinsville, Ky.

Knock, Knock, whose's there. The Chicago Knockers will be knocking the socks off the crowd Friday night at the Dunn Center.

Dr. Schmidt's spunk livened the APSU band

I was one of about 25 music major freshmen to arrive at Austin Peay that fall of 1956. Like most of us, I'd been recruited by the well-liked, black elderly band director — Lew Bodine. However, when we arrived we found that Bodine had been replaced by a young, brash, arrogant, fast-talking Jew from Nebraska — Dr. Aaron Schmidt.

That first week and the subsequent weeks under Schmidt's direction was not at all what we expected. He showed no mercy as we practiced day and night.

Several of the upper classmen quit. They said being in the band was no longer fun. The consensus of those that left and those that stayed was that Schmidt was a son-of-a-bitch. With the arrival of the first football game word of Schmidt's exploits and a "new" Austin Peay marching band had spread across the campus and around Clarksville. People's curiosity was very high.

Even though the reputation of the football team was less than positive, the stands were always filled for that first Austin Peay home game of the season. It was the only college team in town and there was always hope that this year might be the year that competitive college football would come to Clarksville.

But this year there was no mass exodus to the concession stand or the parking lot at halftime. The crowd stayed around to see what this upstart, arrogant, seemingly misplaced foreigner from Nebraska was up to.

We exploded onto the field before a dazed crowd. It was not the old rag-tag, easy-going, halftime show that usually served as background music while waiting in line for hot dogs, popcorn and soft drinks.

Dr. Aaron Schmidt taught in the music department for 30 years.

We were sharp, crisp and exciting. The crowd went wild. We continued our exuberant playing and intricate precision drills for about 10 minutes to the continuous applause and appreciation of the crowd.

When we marched off the field the press box announcer said, "Let's hear it for the marching Governors under the direction of Aaron Schmidt!"

Tommy Miller, a junior trombone player in the row in front of me, turned to those of us in the drum section and said, "Aaron Schmidt may be a son-of-a-bitch, but he's our son-of-a-bitch!"

It did not take long for Schmidt's reputation to spread or that of the Austin Peay marching band and Governettes drill team. We were in demand all over the country for parades, halftime shows and other celebrations.

The foreigner from Nebraska had brought pride, respect and a sense of professionalism to almost every student he taught. He was better liked by his students than his peers, but Schmidt was respected by all.

After he contracted his debilitating disease, Schmidt mellowed out but never lost his spirit or enthusiasm. He was one of those special teachers who demanded too much from you for you to like him...until you ventured out on your own...then you came to love him and appreciate all he had done for you.

God bless you, Aaron Schmidt.

Student reflects on life of inspirational professor

Gretchen Garner
Managing editor

I sat in the security of my home this past summer when suddenly my mind was jerked into focus as familiar names were emitted from the living room television.

"Dr. Aaron Schmidt, an Austin Peay music professor, has been shot to death by his full-time aide. Consequently, the aide committed suicide seconds later."

The names I knew, but the circumstances were unreal to me. I sat on edge until a call from someone who knew the unreal facts confirmed the television report.

A death of someone you know always hits hard, but an act of violence is an even more powerful force to induce grief. All the unanswered questions surrounding the incident still remain and cause an uneasy heart and a confused mind. However, assurance that everything happens for a reason gives endurance to those who knew Dr. Schmidt.

Schmidt fulfilled a very important role in Austin Peay's music department since he first began teaching and directing here some thirty years ago. He helped to develop and build up the band programs at Austin Peay. He was especially beneficial to the Jazz Band program which is still in effect. Schmidt continued to teach and to be supportive of the music programs after he became confined to a wheelchair due to multiple sclerosis.

Schmidt was originally from Nebraska, but since taking a position here at Austin Peay in 1956 he chose to make Clarksville his home. He was a very active member of the Clarksville community and remained involved and in touch with the world around him until the day of his death.

Just what is this beast called the All State?

Robert O'Brien
Executive editor

The All State has been a part of the Austin Peay campus since the 1930's. Some wonder why even have a school paper.

It comes out once a week so, late breaking news is not probable. However, students seem to grab the All State when they see it. It must be the Wendy's coupons.

People glance at the paper, rip out the coupons, and toss the remains aside.

It can go a little farther than just lining the bottom of a garbage can. The All State aids the constant interaction of campus life.

It remains one of the few outlets on campus for students to express themselves. APSU students produce the All State and are entirely responsible for its makeup.

The All State is not a public relations tool that on every page reflects life at the Peay as idyllic.

Let's face it, like every college in America, Austin Peay has a few chinks in its armor.

After a heavy rainstorm, Drane Street does not live up to its name. Also, you don't have to look hard to see that buildings on campus are being closed left and right for asbestos.

The Austin Peay students should take and interest in what happens on campus because it directly affects them. A curious student is able to turn to the All State for this information.

No true dark black cloud hands over Austin Peay. There are many positive things to talk about as we swing into the new school year.

Austin Peay is the smallest school in the OVC. However, Coach Emory Hale's football team is off to a good start. Anticipation builds with Middle Tennessee coming to town October 4.

A new music building is on the horizon and the Red Barn's facelift is complete.

So, if there's more to Austin Peay than just classes, then there's more to the All State than those fabulous coupons. After all, a newspaper should be a reflection of the community it serves—good and bad.

Students learn to become students

In response to concerns about retention — especially first year attrition — the student service department at St. Lawrence College-Saint Laurent (Ontario) is reaching beyond its traditional role of simply providing support services.

The college is "getting into the educational delivery business," according to Kathy Freeman, counselor in the student service department.

The school is offering a course called Becoming a Master Student, which has been made compulsory for all first-year business and technology students. "Test and notetaking, time management, memory techniques, and reading provide the 'meaty' subject matter of the course," Freeman says, "but what the instructors look for as an end product is a behavioral change in their students — seen in the way they communicate, approach and solve problems, and begin to take responsibility for their own education."

Some students consider a how-to-study course more appropriate for the junior high level and resist the idea. "The students who have the greatest to make are the most vocal," Freeman says.

"They are also the students who give us our greatest sense of satisfaction when we see positive changes, and the success they realize as they make their way through their first year at college. We talk a great deal about success in this course. We encourage goal-setting, visualization of the attainment of those goals and the relation of their 'job' as a student to those goals."

The student service department also offers a course called Job Readiness Preparation which "attempts to emphasize the importance of job-finding skills and to give the graduating students additional practice in marketing themselves."

"From all indications, the course is long overdue," says Freeman. "Students report that they enjoy topics discussed and the chance to evaluate themselves in an interview situation on videotape, and are prepared for the questions which may be asked of them." At the end of the course, the students receive an up-to-date, corrected resume.

Both courses are taught, primarily by student services counselors with help from interested faculty. "Genuine interest in students and a willingness to try new methods to encourage student success are important prerequisites for involvement in either of these courses," Freeman says.

Letter to the Editor

An open letter to Student Financial Aid:

Tuesday at registration, I was one of many who waited in line for student loan checks for over three hours. This is not unlike a vacation in a Turkish prison. Later on, I realized that I had waited only slightly longer for Springsteen tickets in 1984!

I realize that it's a difficult task to distribute such a large number of checks to so many students, but a three hour wait is ridiculous. There were several lines for distributing other types of financial aid, and only one line for loans!

The other lines were usually very short and the loan line was so long you would have needed MIC's help to communicate with the front of the line. With so many checks to distribute, why just one line?

This letter is sarcastic in nature but the point I am trying to convey is a serious one. There must be an easier way to assist students in paying fees, and I appeal to you to find one.

How to avoid freshmen blues

National On-Campus Report—It's inevitable. Several weeks into their first semester, freshmen begin to complain. "Everyone's doing better than I am. I'm falling behind in class, and I miss by friends back home."

At first, most students look forward to getting away from home and finding new freedom at college. But, soon the realities of college life, including the need for regular, disciplined study, cause new students stress. Students who easily earned A's or B's in high school now have to study hard just to keep up.

Jane Morgan Bost, director of Personal Counseling at Southwestern U., offers several suggestions to help freshmen adjust to their new life on campus.

1. Become acquainted with campus resources, including residence hall assistants, counselors, and faculty. Bost tells freshmen to meet with their professors if they're having trouble in a class, though many say, "talking with a professor is a real scary thing."

2. Stay in touch with your old support system and develop a new support system. Bost advises freshmen to phone and write parents and old friends, and to become involved in one or two campus activities. "Many want an instant support system," she says. "We tell them it's going take time to feel at home on campus."

3. Talk about what they're going through with someone—a friend, parent, minister, or counselor. someone—a friend, parent, minister, or counselor. Group counseling sessions can help freshmen to see that they're not alone. "It's a tremendous relief to realize that others are also feeling the same way," says Bost.

4. Take your time in making decisions about future job goals or a major course of study. On the average, students change majors twice during their college career. "The more information they acquire, the better they set the stage for making a good decision," says Bost.

Counselors can help freshmen adjust by helping them to see that their problems are normal, and that, with time, they'll eventually feel comfortable on campus.

ROOMMATE PROBLEMS?

There are alternatives to drugs and alcohol

Oberlin, Ohio-Intercollegiate Press—Last year Oberlin students were personalized by the Judicial Board for alcohol-related misdemeanors. According to a recent survey here of those who indicated that they use alcohol and drugs, a sizeable proportion added words like "rarely," and "never to excess."

Dr. John Thompson, director of Psychological Services, compared Oberlin to other schools. "On most college campuses the stress relievers are social activities and sports," he said. "But Oberlin sports are not emphasized. He added that drug use and sexual activity "are not good stress relievers. They're temporary releases and, later, stress producers."

But Assistant Dean Richard Ford noted that elsewhere fraternities "feed into partying. There is not that kind of feeling here that cuts down on misuse of alcohol and drugs." He said that students here may turn to drugs because there is "nothing else to do" but they do not have a legitimate excuse. "Lack of entertainment isn't a cause (of drug or alcohol abuse) when there are films, plays and performances going on all the time," he said.

Richard McDaniel, director of Campus Security, said that drug abuse is not seen too often by Campus Security. "We know (drug use) is out there that they use it and that some people abuse it. But it's fairly personal and discreet. Usually it's the house directors who find out about it."

That the College has a relatively small drug and alcohol problem is due, in part, to the program employed by Psychological Services, said Thompson.

"I don't think there's a pressure here to use drugs or not to use drugs," he said. "But I also think we have less of a problem with drugs and alcohol than many other institutions because our approach is more sophisticated. It's not infused with morality, and it stresses education."

Thompson continued, "Unless people are educated, their idea of alcoholism is mythical." He stressed the importance of dormitory workshops and information sessions on drug and alcohol abuse.

Students are not always poor

After paying for tuition, books, room and board, students have a median discretionary income of $123 a month, according to "Student Watch," a study by the Simmons Market Research Bureau. About 30% of the students polled reported a discretionary monthly income of more than $200. More than half carry credit cards.

Not surprisingly, more and more companies are looking at student spending habits, searching for a niche in the college marketplace.

What do students do with their money now? Because looking good is important, they spend most of it on clothes, but they also spend freely on health and beauty aids, records and tapes, snacks and candy, and books.

What will they spend money on in the future, that's what businesses want to know. And they want to discover how to market to and create products for students.

"The Food World of College Students," a study being conducted by the Campbell Soup Company, will examine the edibles students purchase most often, says Paul Maritato, senior marketing research analyst. "We're particularly interested in the effect of microwave ovens on campus," he says.

In the past, students often didn't even have the conventional ovens needed to prepare frozen foods.

Now many have microwaves, but no one seems to know exactly how many use the appliance. Campbell hopes to learn the potential college market for microwave foods. Campbell hopes to learn the potential college market for microwave foods.

Campbell isn't the only company concerned with making a pitch to the college market. Quaker Oats, American Express, and General Foods targeted marketing efforts to students last year. Terrence Augenbraun of Chesebrough-Pond, which promotes cosmetics on campus, says the company hopes to reach students while they're still forming their brand loyalties.

To reach the student market, companies have tried a number of approaches. Warner-Lambert Company, a maker of stick razors, sponsors a Super Hoops basketball tournament and distributes 125,000 samples on 700 campuses. Others are using electronic billboards and adding to the wide selection of products at campus bookstores.

The increase in the minimum drinking age has limited the marketing of beer to students. But, it also opened up the college market for other businesses. American Express says it's found it easier to attract students to lectures on resume writing now that there are fewer beer parties to attend.

Tuition Time

Aid harder to get

Financing a college education is harder than it used to be, says a College Board Study, "Trends in Student Aid, 1980-1986."

The cost of attending college has risen faster than inflation, and more students are applying for financial aid, according to the report. Schools and federal and state governments have granted more financial aid in recent years, but the money buys less education.

An earlier study, by Terry Hartle of the American Enterprise Institute, seems in conflict with the College Board Report. Hartle says middle income families with college-age children are bringing home large enough paychecks to cover rising college costs.

But, fewer students come from traditional, median-income families; and it's more difficult for poor families to pay for college today than even a few years ago, says Lawrence Gladieux, executive director of the College Board's office in Washington D.C.

Football team opens up on a winning note

The Austin Peay Governors football team kicked off the first part of their 1986 season on a winning note. They are currently 2-1 overall coming off a win against U. T. Martin, 36-0 and defeating Kentucky State 24-7, while losing to a tough Southern Illinois team in the season opener, 24-17.

When the Gavs open up their O. V. C. schedule next weekend against Middle Tn., they will not only try for revenge but will be looking at the game as if the O.V.C. championship depends on it. The Governors, however, are picked to finish sixth in the Conference.

The governors who are known for their defense lost their main player this year as Ron Shegog has used his eligibility. This year the governors are depending on Scott Fox to be the big play man on defense. Other players to watch are Brian Vaughn, Eddie Walls, Clinton Cross, and Mark Southall on defensive linebacker.

At safety, Head Coach Emory Hale is looking at Vince Allen and Joe Langham at the safety positions replacing All American Ron Shegog.

On the offensive side, most of the players from last years 5-6 ball club have returned. Tailbacks Mike Lewis, William Nathaniel, and fullback Chuck Cowart are providing the Gavs the running attack while Brad Minear, Terry Gentry, Rico Ransom and Dean Edwards to be the primary receivers with Dale Edwards returning at the helm of quarterback.

Coach Hale had one of the best recruiting years ever signing 14 players. Of those 14 players signed, six of them were put on the offensive side. Coach Hale recruited two of the best quarterbacks when he signed Sammy Gholston and Jerome Morris, both of whom have seen limited action at quarterback this year. There spots are two and three respectively behind Dale Edwards. "Both of these guys are excellent athletes", commented Coach Hale. "They give us the best two quarterbacks that we have ever had since I've been here."

He has also signed Alvin Clay at tight end, Jo Jo Warren at running back. Coach Hale stated that "Jo Jo is one of the best running backs Austin Peay has ever had." Hale has also signed Pat Harris at Wide Receiver and Tracy Crystal who will be on the offensive line.

Coach Hale also signed four players on the defensive side. Three of those players are defensive defensive lineman. He signed Mike Cove, Curtis Ray, and Kevin McClure. Hale also signed a punter, David West.

The remaining players are ineligible for the current year due to the new NCAA rule—Proposition 48. The rule states that a player must make a 13 on his ACT and a 13 on his AC and a core curriculum giving a person a 2.0 average. The rule will eventually go up in 87 to where a player will need to score a 16 on his ACT and a 16 on the AC to become eligible to play.

The players lost this year because of the rule include running back Rod Malone, outside linebacker

Fred Filmore, and one other player, quarterback Dale Curry decided not to go school.

The governors big games this year include Middle Tennessee, Eastern Kentucky, Morehead, and Western Kentucky. Any one of those games could decide the OVC championship. Middle is predicted to win the conference while Eastern and Morehead follow behind. If the Governors beat Middle then beat Eastern and Morehead they should be able to win the conference if they stay healthy.

Cross country opens Governor season

By Tony Ryan

The Austin Peay State men and womens cross country teams opened their season last Saturday at the Western Kentucky Invitational. The mens team, who are the defending O.V.C. champions, packed very well to hold off Southern Indiana for third place.

The first and second team positions were occupied by Western Kentucky and Southeast Missouri, respectively.

The Gavs were led by Tom Maher, who finished eleventh and ran 26.58 for the Lilly five mile course. He was followed in by Anthony Kearney (14), Tony Ryan (17), Pat James (18) and Barry Phelps (23). The other team members included Brandon Williams and Wayne Nguyen.

Despite some of the team having below par performances, encouragement can be taken from the run of Anthony Kearney, who had his first competitive race in over twelve months following knee surgery and the run of Pat James, a freshman, from London, England who had his first race for the governors.

The Austin Peay State

womens team finished in fourth place behind Southeast Missouri, Western Kentucky, and Murray. The Gavs were led by another new recruit, Valerie McGovern, from Dublin Ireland. Valerie was recruited this summer by Coach Brien and ran the three mile circuit in 19.47. Other members of the womens team consist of Suzanne Perry, T.J. Kleynhans, Lori the mens and womens team travel to Southeast Williams, and Lou Willis.

Next Saturday both Missouri for their second meet of the season. These races are valuable preparation for both teams as they gear themselves for this years O.V.C. cross country championships which will be held at MTSU on Nov. 1st.

IM Complex

The intramural recreational complex, which was closed during most of last year due to renovations, is now opened with many changes and new additions to the complex.

The renovations included a new roof and lighting system, a new fire alarm and Central Air conditioning in appropriate areas. A new plumbing system and windows have also been added to the complex as well. The gym was also renovated as the floor was resurfaced.

The body shop now has added several additions to its repertoire. The shop now includes a nautilus chest and shoulder machine, two rowing machines, two computerized bicycles, a roman chair (Hyperextension Bench), a multi gym which includes a Bench Press, an arm and leg curl, and a Bicep curl.

The shop also has an adominallower back machine and a Nautilus Rotary Torso Machine.

The weight room has also been moved as it is now where the weight room used to be and the aerobics room is now where the body shop used to be.

If you're within 30 days of your 18th birthday, you must register with Selective Service at the post office. It only takes five minutes to fill out the card. And don't worry, there hasn't been a draft since 1973. The country just needs your name in case there's ever a national emergency.

Simon sez touch your shoes: Gotcha!

Actor and comedian Bobby Gold will be master of ceremonies for the world's largest "Simon Sez" game being held today at 2 p.m. in the Bowl.

"It's just like being a kid all over. We'll just be playing and having fun," Tammy Deetz, activities coordinator for UAB said.

"It's a typical 'Simon Sez' game except Mr. Gold comes up with some pretty crazy things to do. We keep playing until everyone, or almost everyone, is out," Deetz said.

Gold, who began his career in the army's special services division, has worked at the Concord and Kutsher's Country Club, Monticello, N.Y., in commercials and at conventions and trade shows.

He recently appeared on the Joey Bishop HBO Television Special and CBS's "Edge of Night."

Game organizers are expecting more than 200 people to attend the event sponsored by the UAB.

THE WORLD, THE WAR, THE WALL

"Most people don't like to talk about Vietnam because it's a war we can't say we won," Sara Gotcher, director of The World, The War, The Wall, said.

The first ATPlayhouse production is a script compiled by Gotcher based on the military and civilians during Vietnam. "The script is based on what veterans, nurses, and officers said about Vietnam," Gotcher said.

"I didn't want to beat the 'horrors of war' into the ground. There has to be light side to relieve the tension."

The play will be showing Oct. 16-18 at 8 p.m. with a 2 p.m. matinee on Oct. 19. After the matinee there will be a panel discussion with the audience about the issues discussed in the play. "I'm looking forward to it," Gotcher said. "The discussion should give a lot of insight into that era of history."

Imagine the longest line possible. Now add ten feet to it. You'll have an idea of what advanced fee payment registration day was like for most students.

Registration, usually held in the University Center, was moved to the Dunn Center. According to James Schellhammer, Dean of Admissions and Records, registration was moved because the Dunn Center is more of a one-stop place and it has more room.

"Registration had its problems. The signs directing the students to various financial aid lines weren't high enough," Schellhammer said.

Approximately 500 students went through registration according to Schellhammer. The Student Financial Aid Office said that registration was localized and not as confused.

Kathleen Bunt, student worker in the financial aid office, said, "It's been really hectic in this office because a lot of students turned their aid papers in late. The people who work in this office have been working lots of late hours and I think they deserve a little credit and appreciation. They really do try."

James Shaffer, Director of Student Financial Aid, said advanced fee payment went well because the students were positive and nice to work with. He also said there were no bad points to registration.

Not every student agrees that the day went over well.

According to Lannett Edwards, a sophomore biology major, registration was a mess. "It was unorganized. I saw people walking aimlessly around because they didn't know where to go. The freshmen were really lost, but it wasn't just them. I'm sure people were ready to quit. It just wasn't worth it."

GO AHEAD, HIT ME I NEED THE MONEY!

Surrounded by the loan line, which extended around the Dunn Center court, were the financial aid lines. Anyone needing money was destined to wait and may have been ready to take desperate measures.

Helppie performs at Vandy

Clement to receive vocalist

Clarksville, Tx.—Kevin Helppie, assistant professor of voice at Austin Peay State University, will perform in vocal recital at 8 p.m. Oct. 6 in APSU's Clement Auditorium and at 8 p.m. Oct. 9 at the Blair School of Music of Vanderbilt University, Nashville.

A bass baritone, Helppie will perform a solo cantata by J.S. Bach entitled, "Ich Habe Genug," along with various other operatic selections by such composers as Bizet, Poulenc and Loewe.

Helppie, who holds a bachelor of music degree from Indiana University, has performed as a member of Indian University ensembles at the Metropolitan Opera House, Avery Fischer Hall and with the Atlanta Symphony.

As a soloist he has performed with such groups as the Seattle Opera, Indiana University Opera Theatre and the University of Washington Opera Theatre.

Helppie, a Seattle, Wash., native who previously taught vocal music at Jamestown College in North Dakota, holds positions as director of music at First Presbyterian Church, Hopkinsville, Ky., and director of the deGraffenreid Chorale, Russellville, Ky.

Accompanying Helppie at the piano will be Gary Hammond, a resident of New York City and a member of the music faculty at New York University.

The concerts at both Austin Peay and Vanderbilt's Blair School of Music are open to the public and admission is free.

Dream of travel becomes lesson in life

Students dream of an opportunity to travel to other countries. For one APSU student it was a dream come true.

Jerome Morris, a freshman from Birmingham, AL was selected to spend a month in Jordan by the National Council on the United States and Arab Relations. During this month, he studied the Arabic language and Islamic culture and society.

Being a youth ambassador to the country, Morris was to help establish a relationship between the youth of the U.S. and the Arabian world. "Before visiting an Arab country, I had many stereotypes about the Arab world and its people. This trip increased my appreciation and understanding of a people who are misunderstood by the outside world."

The trip activities included meeting the president of the University of Jordan, a tour of the city of Amman, Jordan, Arabic language lessons and visits to historical Biblical and Islamic religious sites.

"The trip was political in nature because we visited the House of Parliament and attended lectures on the chances of peace between the Arab and Israeli nations," Morris said.

"When the 'new Israel' was established, the outside of the world believed the Jews had reached the Promised Land, but this man-made promised land has created a high degree of social and political confrontations."

"I believe the U.S. is one of the most influential powers in the world and could help establish peace between the two countries," Morris said. "When I returned from the trip, I seemed anti-American, but I really wasn't. I was just anti-government."

"This trip really helped me see the pages of history come alive. It contradicted U.S. papers and magazines. My respect for Jordan increased significantly during my trip," he said.

"My religious strength was tested. I had to pray and read the Bible," Morris stated. "Americans don't show enough respect for other religions. The Muslims don't believe in Christ, but otherwise the religions are basically the same—Christ is the cutting edge."

AP student, Andrew Montgomery, works out on the bench press in the Red Barn which recently opened for student's use. The Red Barn is open to all students with a validated I.D.

Jazzercise used to rock the body

Get ready to get your rusty, creaky body into the best shape it has ever been in as Jazzercise comes to the Dunn Center.

Janet Tuck, Jazzercise instructor, said "Jazzercise is a jazz based fitness program combining the art of dance with the science of exercise physiology."

"Jazzercise is different from other exercise classes. All our routines are choreographed by Judi Sheppard Missett. "We don't just exercise to background music. That's boring," Tuck said. "We dance with the music.

Once you get lost in the music, you don't realize what your body is doing. It adds motivation to the class."

Tuck has been involved in jazzercise for five years. "I wanted to stay in shape. Jazzercise is a blast. Once I tried it, nothing else would do."

The steps are simple and easy to learn, according to Tuck. "The class is more dance than exercise. If you enjoy dancing, you'll enjoy the class."

The class is structured to include a warm up, isolation, 25-30 minute aerobic segment, floor section and cool down. "In isolation, every part of the body is warmed up, one part at a time. It's important for every part of the body to be warm because it lessens the chance of injury," Tuck said.

According to Tuck, the aerobics segment is really a cardiovascular segment. "We just call it aerobics so people will understand what we're talking about."

The floor routine consists of toning, strengthening and flexibility. Each stressful exercise is followed by stretching to help prevent soreness.

Jazzercise stresses emotional and mental health. "Working out regularly increases awareness and self-confidence. "It's a good release for the constant brain strain of college," Tuck said.

"The 'no-pain, no gain' logo is just a myth. Exercise doesn't have to hurt. If you exercise correctly, you'll get in shape faster than if you exercise to your limit every so often," Tuck said.

The co-ed classes will be held on Monday and Wednesday from 6 to 7 p.m. It costs $30 for eight weeks as opposed to $40 for eight weeks off campus.

Rudolph's promotions bring enthusiasm to athletic department

Some people are lucky enough to go to a football game and leave $1,200 richer.

The coin toss, won by Dr. Bob Sears, was just one of the ways Mason Rudolph has come up with to help promote Austin Peay.

Rudolph, Director of Development/Athletics, is concerned with promoting all sports and is involved with fundraising. "We don't get enough state funds to support all the athletic programs. We have to raise approximately $200,000 in outside funds to be competitive with schools like Middle Tennessee State University and Tennessee Tech," Rudolph said.

Rudolph said that his interest in sports and his experience as a pro golfer will help him promote APSU. "I can play golf at various schools, help them with their game and entertain. It's good public relations, and it helps raise funds," he said.

Rudolph is promoting the football team by having tailgate parties before each home night game. He also has designated each home game for a certain group. Greek Day is Nov. 22.

"My main objective is to get people into the stadium. I was impressed with the student turn out for Saturday's game against Western," Rudolph said. "I want to raise enthusiasm, both on and off campus, for all the teams."

McCorkle returns to Austin Peay

Clarksville, Tx.—Formerly APSU associate director of university-school relations, Charles McCorkle is back at Austin Peay as director of admissions.

McCorkle fills the position vacated by Dick

Littleton, who resigned his post in July to pursue a career in real estate.

A graduate of George Peabody College in Nashville, McCorkle left Austin Peay last year, after six years with the University, to accept position of admissions and financial aid at Cumberland University in Lebanon.

"I'm excited to be back at Austin Peay," McCorkle said, and added that he has begun vigorously recruiting students across Tennessee.

"Austin Peay is poised to realize its potential as one of the state's superior institutions in higher learning," he said.

"The strength of Austin Peay's professional programs, along with a strong liberal arts core, provides students with an excellent preparation for challenging careers," McCorkle added.

Also recipient of an associate of arts degree from Cumberland College, McCorkle formerly owned and operated an advertising agency in Nashville.

As director of Admissions, McCorkle will supervise a five-person staff consisting of two admissions counselors and two secretaries with a third counseling position to filled in the near future. He assumed his new responsibilities Sept. 15.

University Scholars Fund established

By Suzanne Alexander

The University Scholars Fund has been established in memory of Dr. James M. Sawrey, former vice president of academic affairs, to fund grants to persons who qualify on the basis of their academic record at Austin Peay.

A group of seven professors sponsored the fund, each of the beginning contributions were made in honor of Dr. Sawrey. New contributions may be made by anyone with a designation as to whom is to be memorialized or honored.

The sponsoring professors hope that the fund will grow into a major source of scholarship funding as the result of continuing contributions in memory or honor of many different people.

Contributions may be sent to the Development office. They will be acknowledged by a receipt to the donor, notice of next-of-kin or honoree, and entry in a permanent ledger which will be on public display.

Summer honors shared at AP

Local boys do good!

The fraternities remained busy during the summer. The Kappa Sigs were the 1986 recipients of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity Community Service Award. The officers received the award Aug. 2 at the Leadership Conference held at Bloomington, Indiana. The frat was selected out of a possible 200 college and university chapters in the competition.

Bailey Allen, Kappa Sigma Alumnus Adviser, was selected as Outstanding First Year Volunteer.

The Sigma Chi's won two of the highest honors at their Leadership Training workshop held Aug. 8-11 at Colorado State University. The chapter received the Peterson Significant Chapter Award and the Legion of Honor Scholarship—two top honors for campus chapters—for its efforts during the 1985-86 academic year. The Peterson Award is the highest honor an undergraduate chapter can receive because it recognizes outstanding performance in all major fields of operations programs and activities.

The Sigma Chi Sweetheart of APSU, Beth Fletcher, is featured in the "Sweethearts of Sigma Chi" 1986-87 school-year calendar. A member of Chi Omega, Fletcher appears in the premier edition of the calendar. She was chosen from more than 50 nominees.

Alpha Tau Omega member, Greg Wolfe completed a pilot program of the LeaderShape Institute, which attempts to improve leadership abilities. All participants exhibit campus and community leadership, the desire to reach higher levels of personal achievement and the willingness to help others do the same.

Ginny L. Gray, an APSU senior, participated in the Student Research participation Program. A geology major, Gray worked at Oak Ridge National Laboratory in the Environmental Sciences Division. Participants were from across the nation. Gray was one of over 300 applicants, the final participants numbered only 58.

HOW MUCH DOES AN ABORTION COST?

Although getting an abortion may seem like the best way out of a hard situation, it's much more expensive than the doctor's bill alone. Besides the possible physical complications and the continuing guilt and regret that last for years, a child must die for an abortion to be "successful." How much does an abortion cost?

ONE HUMAN LIFE.

If you or someone you care about is going through the difficult time of an unwanted pregnancy, we want to help you with more than just words. Please get in touch with us right away for practical assistance. To let a child continue living only costs your love.
