Pryor Returns From Seminar

Dr. Harold Pryor, Director of Teacher Education at Austin Peay State College, has returned to the campus after 5 weeks Field Study Seminar in the Soviet Union. Dr. Pryor was a member of a group of American Educators who made an intensive study of Soviet education. They studied schools in Moscow, Kien, Minsk, Leningrad and Tashkent. The work of these educators covered the program of education from nursery school through the university. The Field Study Seminar was sponsored by the Comparative Education Society. The research that was done by this group of educators was financed in part by the Ford Foundation. Later in the school year, the Houghton-Mifflin Publishing Company will publish the results of the Field Research project in book form.

When asked to comment on his experience in the Soviet Union, Dr. Pryor said, "I feel very fortunate in having had this opportunity to study Russian school system on a firsthand basis." However, his most enthusiastic comment was, "It is good to be home!"

All State To Present Plaque

To stimulate interest in club activities on the campus, the ALL STATE awards each year a winner and bronze plaques to the club that has contributed most to the campus. This award showing the name of the winning club is displayed in the hall of the Administration Building.

Fine Arts Building To Be Completed By Fall Quarter

The Frank G. Clement, Fine Arts Building costing $516,000, which is now under construction on the East side of the Administration Building should be completed and ready for service at the opening of the 1959 Fall Quarter.

President Halbert Harvill, who is keeping a close observation on the construction work, states that, "It will be the most functional building found on any campus in the state."

He said that additional financing to complete the building to the size of the Science Building will be appropriated from the State Legislature.

New equipment will also be a feature of the plan.

The designated name of the new building, the Frank G. Clement, Fine Arts Building, was named in honor of the incumbent Governor Frank Clement of Tennessee. This decision was approved by the State Board of Education.

The contract, which calls for 3 1/2 of what will eventually be included in the building, is being carried out by the L. and M. Construction Company, Memphis, Tennessee, with R. J. Adams as the foreman.

Mr. Adams reports that the new building will contain 3 floors; a basement floor; main floor; and second floor, all of which will be air-conditioned.

The basement floor will be composed of a choral rehearsal room, approximately 17 practice rooms, a specified space for an organ, 5 studios, storage and office space, and restrooms.

The main entrance will be supported by large stone columns and will open into the lobby designed with marble walls and a floor of Terrazzo in a checkerboard design.

The lobby in turn will open into the auditorium, which is dome-shaped tinted windows and seating capacity of 600 people. There will also be a stage, 3 classrooms, and two lounges on the main floor.

The second floor will be made up of 5 classrooms, a language laboratory, dressing rooms, and storage space.

Barring bad weather, the construction will continue on schedule.

Austin Peay Faculty Increased by Eleven

Reception Held For Freshmen And Upperclassmen

The faculty and student body officers of Austin Peay State College welcomed the incoming freshmen and returning upperclassmen at a reception held in the lobby of Harrell Hall on Tuesday, September 23.

Administration officials, faculty members and the student body officers greeted approximately 500 people between 8:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Punch and small pastries were served to the guests after they had gone through the line. Mrs. Charles Boehms was in charge of the refreshment table.

Following the reception, a dance sponsored by the Student Council was held in the Memorial Gymnasium. The Collegians featured singers Helen Landrum and Larry Womack as the band presented two hours of dance music. Chaperons for the event were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Siffin.

Pres. Harvill Gives Speech

"Education is like a river. If a river does not have strong banks the water spreads; losing depth, direction and power. You must work to dig deep channels in study and learning if you are to go out into the world as useful citizens," President Harvill warned in Austin Peay's first regular student assembly.

He went on to say that there was still enough time left for recreation after studies were completed.

"Another thing that you must guard against is becoming driftwood in the river of learning. Driftwood does not stay in the center of a river where the current that can carry it on is present. It drifts into the banks and becomes lodged," he said.

Mr. Harvill warned that a person could be driftwood and remain in the center of learning. He also stated that a person doesn't get anywhere in backward either.

"Just because you don't make the highest score in class you should not be discouraged. You should remember that much of the good work in the world has been done by people who have not made the highest grades. As long as we are doing our best we should not worry," he stated.

He stated that while we need imagination if it is not used correctly it can destroy us just as surely as when used correctly it can make us.

"We are created in the image of God. That means our minds are not to be sterile because our Creator was not sterile. So be always in front and in the middle of the stream and get the most out of your educational opportunity," Mr. Harvill advised.

New additions to the faculty this year were made to handle the increased enrollment and make for a broader academic program.

Miss Dot Wilson who received the M. A. degree from Peabody in Nashville is an instructor in health and physical education and is also assisting in drilling the govern-enters.

Among the other additions from Peabody are Ralph George, assistant professor of psychology, Tom Cowan, associate professor and head of the Music Department, and Solie Felt, Ph. D. professor of music.

An Austin Peay State graduate, George Fisher, is an instructor in health and physical education and is also an assistant coach.

Hayden B. Jolly, Jr. also received the M.A. degree from Austin Peay State. Last year, he was in charge of the Language Arts Department but is now an instructor in English.

Mrs. Bobby Thomas who received the M. S. from the University of Tennessee is an instructor in home economics.

James Victoria, instructor in Arts, received his degree from Florida State University.

A new addition to the Social Science Department is Charles Gardner who received the M. A. degree from the University of Oklahoma and is an instructor in geography.

The new voice teacher and instructor in Music, Miss Nancy Norman, received the M. M. degree from the University of Nebraska.

Returning to the campus after a year's absence is Miss Catherine Beard who is an assistant professor of English and received the M. A. degree from the University of Kentucky.

Welcome Freshmen

In honor of the fine crop of freshmen, we on the All State Staff wish to dedicate this first issue to them.

We also want to convey our desire to give recognition to the outstanding members of the class just as we do the other classes.

We join President Harvill and Charles Gearhiser in a sincere "Welcome Freshmen."

Message to Freshmen

The members of the Student Council take this opportunity to extend to you, the new students of Austin Peay, our warmest and friendliest welcome. Let us assure you that we speak for the entire student body in welcoming you to our campus to share with us the many and varied experiences that lie ahead.

In choosing to attend college, you have made an important decision—one that was not arrived at lightly and one to which you have given your most intelligent consideration. You have chosen well and we urge you to strive diligently to make your college a fruitful one. You have enrolled in college to prepare yourself for a better life that is financially emotional and intellectually rewarding. You must consider this preparation as your primary motive for coming to college.

However, you will find that college is something more than academic studies. We invite you to participate in campus activities, clubs, dances and intramural and intercollegiate athletic programs. We extend this invitation to participate in these activities because we want you to become an integral part of our college; we want this to be your home away from home.

Feel welcome, students, for welcome you are. Share the smiles, the greetings, and the handshakes that are yours for the asking. We trust that you will find our campus a friendly one and that you will help us make it an even more friendly one.

Use this book as a helpful guide to the functions and activities here at Austin Peay and show no hesitation to become an active part of college life. When you feel that you have problems and worries, call on the Student Council. If you will accept these suggestions and carry them out, we will have the assurance that our invitation has been accepted.

Charles Gearhiser
President of Student Council

Notice to All Students

The Administration wants to make known the reasons for why the roads and intended parking lot in the Roake Hall area were not built between quarters.

The State's aid was enlisted to save money since the road and lot could be built at cost, but the State could not start work until a later date.

Work is expected to begin about the first of the month.

IT'S AN OLD STORY

The Clock, Farm and Chimes

On Dec. 3, 1947, a prominent Clarksville businessman and Civic leader, H. D. Pettus was buried. On that day, also, Austin Peay became a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. This membership meant that an APSC student's credit could be accepted at another college. It is easy to see why this date would be important in the college's history. However, the connection between the college and the death of H. D. Pettus may be more obscure for many students. Nevertheless, the life and death of Pettus did have a definite effect upon Austin Peay—about a fifty thousand dollar effect!

By Pettus' will the major part of his vast estate of over $700,000.00 was left to a foundation of his own creation, known as the H. D. Pettus Foundation. The foundation's purpose was to use its money for the development of the Clarksville Community. The funds were left in the hands of eight capable Clarksville businessmen, with J. B. Miller acting as President.

Two parks, and Memorial hospital, received most of the funds. Austin Peay received about $50,000.00 which was used in the purchase of the state farm, the clock and chimes, and acoustical ceiling for the armory.

The greatest contribution to APSC, made by the foundation, was the purchase of a 475-acre farm, at a cost of $35,525.00, for use in teaching agriculture. This purchase in 1953 met a need that had existed since 1929. Until the purchase, agricultural credits could not be transferred to another college. The farm has different types of land, making it easy to teach various types of farming. It is located only a few moments drive from APSC. It probably represents the only Tennessee College farm bought at no cost to the taxpayers.

In 1948 the foundation donated $6,000.00 for the purchase of acoustical ceiling for the National Guard Armory. At that time assembly halls had to be held in the armory and the acoustics were so bad that it was difficult to hear a program.

Eight thousand dollars of the foundation went for the purchase of the clock and chimes in the tower of the administration building. The chimes were installed in 1959. The chimes do not actually contain bells, but are an electronic carillon which works something to a player piano. This carillon is set to play on the quarter hour. A keyboard in the tower allows anyone who can play the piano to play simple melodies. What kind of man was this benefactor to APSC? Pettus was civic minded, being president of the Clarksville Hospital, and the Chamber of Commerce for ten years. He was a financial genius. At the time of his death he owned stock in about 150 companies, most of which were not well known, yet none of them were losing money. To say the least, he was a shrewd investor. At times he was disliked because he was somewhat arrogant, short, and harsh in his dealings with people. In doing all things he was a dynamic individual.

Certainly, the generosity toward APSC, by the Pettus foundation should not be forgotten.

Dissertation Of Freshmen

By Hazel Mitchell

"Bare shins and red hats, odd socks and all that! That's what freshmen are made out of." Of course, there's a difference between the boys and the girls but even that is confusing. The lipstick smears and I use the word "advisory" since they evidence an unpunctured hand! And the male mouths and an assortment of ribbons—single from the shortest crew-cut. If there were a prize for the most outstanding one I'd have to nominate a freshman who bore the name, Jerry Converse, on his back. As if his red hair and the APSC beanie didn't clash enough, he had added a pink rag ribbon.

Seen especially enjoying initiation were the sophomores. They who so recently have been the tormented took full advantage of the situation. Among the usual carrying of books and cafeteria trays freshmen were found reading speeches in the Student Center and singing songs on the street. One was duped into buying an ALL STATE subscription for twelve dollars.

But the freshmen are advised to be patient, for they may, too, try out their diabolical little tricks on the freshmen of 1959.

The Green Window

If you ever drive through Russellville, Kentucky on U. S. Highway 79, chances are you will have to stop for the town's only stop light. If such is the case, a casual glance out the window on the right side will reveal nothing more than an ordinary red brick house. Upon closer observation, however, you will find that a window in the tower of this building has a heavy coat of green paint. The story behind this window may or may not be factual. It does bear repeating.

According to the legend, about 1825 this house belonged to a wealthy farmer and businessman of the community. He had a very beautiful daughter, who was admired and pursued by all the young suitors in this area. Almost any night that some social function was in progress she could be found the center of attention, laughing and whirling amid the gaily and enchantment of youth. Her heart was light, and all she asked was to be allowed to lose herself in the delightful swell of music and color.

On one particular evening in early June, the time when the very earth is alive with the promise of romance and beauty, she was preparing to attend a dance which was being held by the town's leading socialite. Everyone would be there, and a warm glow filled her heart as she thought of the familiar thrills which the night held in store. Unfortunately it was also the time of year when heavy rains were fairly common, and this night was a typical example. As the day progressed she told herself that surely the rain would stop in time for her to reach the party. As the time neared for her escort to call, the rains became even heavier, and an electrical storm developed. The roads were like small rivers, and the creeks had swollen out of their banks, making travel impossible. She climbed to the tower and stood watching the rain drops thunder against the pane, and when the lightning flashed, she could see great pools of water standing in the fields. As the trees tossed about in the wind and the thunder rolled in the sky, a great resentment welled up inside her. As the storm reached its peak, and it seemed as though the very universe were splitting from under her, she could stand it no longer. She opened her mouth and screamed curses into the mouth of the howling fury. As she stood by the window and shouted curses to the name of God, a tremendous flash lighted the night and rocked the house on its foundation. The girl was struck dead, but on the window in a clear outline her figure was left, with arms outstretched and mouth twisted into a grimace of horror.

The window was painted to discourage morbid curiosity, and shortly thereafter the man moved away, never to return, but the window itself can still be seen, perhaps bearing mute testimony to the awful wrath of God.

From the President

The Thirtieth year of the Austin Peay State College has begun under most favorable conditions.

It is a pleasure to welcome the largest freshman class to enroll during these thirty years. Your spirit and enthusiasm is of the highest. It makes all others sense that a new day for APSC is here. You have the ability to make a most useful life. The next half century promises greater opportunity than any past half century. You are to be congratulated upon living in such a progressive era. Your work is cut out for you; America is yours and all in your category share it with you. You are making preparation to do your part. You must not let your interest lag. Be all that you are capable of being. The nation has confidence in you. You will not fail.

It will be our pleasure to see you grow and move forward.

Governors Lose First Gridiron Contest

(This is the first of a series of articles on the 1958 Govs.)

At this writing the 1958 array of football Governors have only played one game, this being a 12-0 loss to the powerful Middle Tennessee State crew from Murfreesboro. The Raiders of MTSC will be well remembered as the team that finished last season with a 1-10 record.

Last year the game this year was played under similar conditions, especially a very, very muddy playing field. This hampered both teams considerably.

Eugene Key, Norman Tunnell, Sid Ingram, and John McKay were singled out for their brilliant defensive performance in the season's first game. All of these linemen are seasoned gridiron performers with the Govs.

Statistics for the above mentioned game are not available at this time, so we shall meet some of the new faces that are wearing the Red and White for APSC.

Scholarship Program Lacking

STAUNTON, Va. — (I.P.) —

Stating that the federal scholarship program will not solve the greatest educational needs of the nation, Dr. Samuel R. Spencer, Jr., president of Mary Baldwin College warned that the "emphasis on scholarships may give the erroneous impression that our problem is primarily one of quantity rather than of quality.

"As important as scholarships are," he said, "the greatest needs of the colleges and universities are for increased faculty salaries, better libraries and laboratories and improved facilities, and a more dynamic educational program.

"We must emphasize quality rather than quantity," Dr. Spencer pointed out. "The genuine concern for educational improvement in the Administration's proposal is laudable and we think there is a danger that the people sons in the educational field, but gram is encouraging to all per-Federal government can and will solve the problem.
