Reagan wins mock election

BY MICHI MCKINNEY
The Reagan/Bush ticket defeated the Mondale/Ferraro ticket by a margin of 285 votes to 165 votes in a mock election conducted by the political science department Oct. 30/31.

Another voter was Democrat Albert Gore, for the US Senate, who defeated Republican Victor Ashe with 284 votes to his opponent's 136 votes.

Concerning Clarksville's anti-liquor referendum, 381 voters supported liquor-by-the-drink while 51 voters opposed it, and 345 voters wanted to permit package stores to operate while 52 voters did not.

Dr. Vernon Warren, chairman of the political science department, said, "I think we've got a good turnout," and noted the mock election "was hard work, but students who conducted it found it interesting."

Warren said he found the mock election to be an APSU tradition since it has been conducted at least for the 17 years he has been a professor at this university.

Originally, the professor said the purpose of the mock election was to allow students who were not yet of voting age to voice their opinions.

Warren said the mock election is "an impressionistic sample of students at a certain time," and added, "They're interesting, but they can't really forecast since it is not a scientifically conducted poll."

He said later, "My own guess would be is our campus would be mirror state attitudes."

The mock election was run by students from Pi Sigma Alpha, the political science honor society; the Collegiate Democrats; and the Collegiate Republicans.

DECISIONS, DECISIONS—Lori Petty, theatre major, tries to decide who to vote for in the mock election held last week in the University Center. Reagan won the election, 285 to 165.

SGA passes bill for TISL

By
ALLAN J. DANIELS

The SGA took between five and ten minutes to allocate $905.60 to itself last Thursday night.

The money was requested in a bill sponsored by Karen Moss, junior class president, with the money to be used to send a delegation to the Tennessee Intercollegiate State Legislature.

TISL is an annual mock legislature based on the Tennessee legislature. Its purpose is to educate student government members in the area of how legislation is passed on the state level.

Delegates to TISL write bills which are entered onto a docket, debated in both the senate and the house, and upon approval by both legislative chambers sent to the governor for approval.

The figure of $905.60 was the result of a "friendly amendment" suggested to Moss before the meeting and was arrived at by subtracting $32 from the original request which was to have been used for parking.

Passage of this bill reduced the fall quarter budget to $1,736.40.

Keith Norris, SGA president, chided those senators who had yet to bring in contracts from businesses agreeing to be listed on the APSU student discount card. Discussion revealed that 14 out of 27 senators had signed up a business.

Norris first requested that the senators enlist businesses at the first SGA meeting of the quarter.

Norris threatened the senators with having "everybody's name in the All State this week." Norris then mentioned the SGA's Homecoming cocktail scheduled for this Thursday.

"I'll strike up a deal with the senators who haven't sold an ad," Norris said adding that volunteers for cooking hotdogs would be exempt from finding businesses for the student discount card.

Homecoming Homecoming Homecoming Schedule

Big Apple election set

Voting for the "Big Apple Awards" will be held in the main lobby of the university center on Monday, Nov. 12, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. for undergraduate students.

Graduate students are encouraged to vote during the week of Nov. 5-9 in the Student Teaching Office, Claxton 212, until 4:30 p.m.

These awards are given to the student's favorite professor, or in other words, they will be voting for their favorite instructor from each of the three colleges: College of Arts and Sciences, College of Business and Professional Programs, and College of Education and Human Services.

Randall holds seminar

The essential beliefs of the Middle Eastern countries will be discussed at the final seminar in the series on Islam and the Middle East, Nov. 8.

Dr. Albert Randall, chairman of Austin Peay State University's Philosophy department, will discuss the beliefs which affect national policy for countries such as Iran, Iraq and Saudi Arabia.

The seminar begins at 7 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church, 313 Main St. The public is invited.

For more information, telephone Randall at 648-7454.

Spaghetti dinner planned

Taste-tantalizing spaghetti and garlic toast will be served up during Austin Peay State University's homecoming celebration.

The University's ROTC cadets will serve spaghetti from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Nov. 8 in the Joe Morgan University Center Ballroom. The spaghetti supper coincides with APSU's 7 p.m. homecoming pep rally at the intramural field.

Tickets for the spaghetti feast are $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children under 12 years of age. ROTC cadets will sell tickets in advance, and tickets will be available at the door. For more information, telephone 648-6155.

Workshop scheduled

The Counseling and Testin Center will be offering a workshop on Procrastination on Friday, November 9, Ellington Hall, in Room 121, from 3-4:30 p.m.

In this workshop study, you can learn how to identify the cause of procrastination and begin to overcome those patterns through effective simple-to-do techniques. Good setting, time management, relaxation training, and decision-making process will be discussed.

Gov batgirls needed

Baseball Coach Bill Merkel is looking for those who may be interested in being batgirls for the Governors' baseball team for the 1985 season.

All interested should contact Coach Merkel in Room 257 in the Dunn Center, or call 648-6111.

Yearbook orders open

The Governor's Pride yearbook staff will begin taking orders for the 1984-85 yearbook Homecoming Week. This sales campaign is directed toward all non-students and part-time students. The price will be $15.00 for everyone that is not a full-time student. Deadline is January 8, 1985. Don't miss it. For further information contact the Student Publications office at 648-7376.

Assault awareness program planned

Two Austin Peay State University public safety officers will deliver an assault awareness program on the APSU campus to students, faculty and the general public.

Sgt. Loris Ellsworth and Sgt. Stephen Liebach, both trained in passive resistance and assault awareness, will speak from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday Nov. 14 in Gentry Auditorium of the university's College of Business building.

Both males and females are encouraged to attend the educational seminar as current statistics show 35 per cent of all reported rape victims are male, and one of every five women raped are victims of acquaintance rape, in which case the victim knows the attacker.

According to Sgt. Ellsworth, "Don't Become a Victim" is the major theme for the presentation.

The officers presented the seminar to the Middle Tennessee State University community two recently, and are available to speak free of charge, before civic and community organizations and schools.

Everyone is encouraged to attend the Nov. 14 seminar, which is sponsored by APSU's counseling and testing center. Admission is free. For more information, telephone public safety, 648-7786.

Religious studies minor may be offered if Board approves

By Bernice Cook

Pending approval by the State Board of Regents, Austin Peay could have a minor in religious studies by winter quarter. The next Board meeting will be in December.

Students may register for the introductory class in religion, Philosophy 202, for the winter quarter. This class could be used like the philosophy 201, to satisfy the humanities core requirement in the BS degree, and will meet at 10 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Dr. Albert Randall, assistant professor in the philosophy department, will be teaching the course. "There will be guest lecturers and field trips to Muslim communities in Nashville, so interested students will be a part of an exciting program," Randall stated.

In Randall's Statement of Purpose and Objectives, defining the word 'religion' is one of the purposes of the introductory course.

The student will gain an understanding of the nature of religion; a framework will be provided for the student to explore and reflect upon his own religious views or views about religion; and the great religions of the world will be introduced, in the hope of broadening the student's religious understanding and encouraging the growth of religious toleration.

In the proposal for a new minor in Religion, it states that the moment one considers the including of courses concerning religion into the curriculum of a secular, state-supported institution, there are a number of "bogyman questions" which arise:

- (1) Will they be teaching religious doctrine and ethics?
- (2) What about the "mythical" wall of separation?
- (3) Isn't this state supportive of religion?
- (4) Whose beliefs will be taught?

The proposal states that the reflective study of religion is not the teaching of religion.

There are several reasons which support the need for a reflective study of religion. The influence of religion in the American political process; the influence of religion on European-American history, literature, art music, and social institutions and customs; and the significance of religious conflict in such places as Ireland and the Middle East.

The philosophy department's proposal for a new minor could be implemented in the Fall of 1985, and will offer the student an opportunity to study religion from the perspectives of philosophy, ethics, theology, Biblical studies, world religions, history, sociology, literature and art.

If approved, the department will request a change in name to the Department of Philosophy and Religious Studies.

Interested students should contact Randall for more information and instruction, in the Philosophy department.

Veterans offered thanks

Veterans who are faculty members and/or students are invited to come to the University Center lobby November 9th, at 10 a.m. through 3 p.m., because we as Gamma Beta Phi members have something special for you.

You have served your fellow citizens and your country well and we appreciate the part of your life you sacrificed for us. Along with the special goodies available, a name will be drawn by Dean Burney from all the names we accumulate throughout the day and a special gift will be given to the winner.

Gamma Beta Phi will have a table set up in the lobby of the student center, so please come and be counted as one of the best members of a very special group of individuals our country has to offer.

VA announces benefit use unequal

The Veterans Administration has compiled a report indicating that female veterans, generally, have not used VA benefits to the same extent as male veterans.

Administrator of Veterans Affairs Harry N. Walters said the report "confirms the need for our special efforts to assure that women who served in our Armed Forces have full access to medical care and are fully aware of their eligibility for benefits."

The report includes data on female veterans in four major areas: population, health care, compensation and pension, and education benefits.

The population data are based on the 1980 US Census, which marked the first time that detailed information on female veterans had ever been gathered. The VA estimated there were 1,152,500 women veterans living in the United States and Puerto Rico as of September 30, 1983, representing 4.1 percent of the 28.2 million living veterans.

According to the report, there were 1409 female patients in VA medical centers on June 15, 1983, or 2.1 percent of the total patient population. During fiscal year 1983, 18,051 female hospital patients were discharged, according to 1.8 percent of the total.

Since the current GI Bill was signed in 1966, 174,057 women—about 2.4 percent of the total—were among the more than 7 million veterans who received some form of VA assisted training.

In September 1983, 28,286 women veterans were receiving compensation payments for service-connected disabilities which was 1.2 percent of the veterans receiving this benefit. VA pension payments were sent to 10,363 women, or 1.3 of the total.

That ratio has nearly tripled based on recent data where women accounted for nearly 6.8 percent of the veterans actually in training as of April 1983.

This trend reflects the greater number of women serving in the Armed Forces in recent years.

Since being named to head the VA in December 1982, Walters has taken a variety of steps to improve service to female veterans, including the appointment of an 18-member Advisory Committee on Women Veterans.

VA medical centers have been instructed to develop a formal plan for the care of female veterans and to identify any barriers to their care. Although the majority of health problems for which female veterans are being treated are not gender-related, provision of gynecologic care to both inpatients and outpatients has been upgraded.

Privacy limitations at VA medical facilities are being corrected too in line with the VA policy of providing equitable care to all veterans, male and female.

The gathering of new data on women veterans is another of the special efforts being made.

Apartheid must end

South Africans beyond intimidation

Recently, the South African government staged one of the largest crackdowns in the history of that country, sending 7,000 police and army soldiers to raid the homes of three black townships.

The raid was reported as an attempt to rid the riot-ridden country of 'revolutionary elements' members of the 73 percent black majority have been using to protest against rent increase, poor schools and the refusal to allow them the right to vote.

Even after such action the rioting and protests in South Africa have not ceased. At the end of last month it was reported that more than 80 blacks were killed in rioting since the end of August. Undoubtedly the number has increased since.

Obviously, the raid did nothing but search more than 200,000 inhabitants, arrest more than 300 and agitate the already growing tension in South Africa.

It was an attempt to intimidate a people who are obviously beyond the point of being intimidated. Evidently, the 'revolutionary elements' are in the minds and spirits of the people, and it seems their minds are set on ending apartheid in that country.

Until the core of the problem is reached and an attempt to solve them is made, the violence in South Africa will remain. Another hasty action by that government may just be 'the straw that breaks the camel's back.'

Although South African Bishop Desmond Tutu is an advocate of peace, the 1984 Nobel Peace prize recipient recognizes and warns that a 'bloodbath' will occur unless the demands of the people are soon met.

However tragic it may sound, a 'bloodbath' may be the only means left of 'cleansing' the country of apartheid.

Glow-power begets international might

To the editor:

I'm writing in support of Mr. Cole's letter in the Oct. 24 All State, and to all my fellow Ray-gun-ites out there. Mr. Cole is right. We should give credit to Reagan for making us the big-gun. Reagan took that 'milk-toast' image of ours, squeezed it dry, and got us the world respect we deserve. After all, that's why jetliners are safe today.

Now Mr. Cochran, you poor disillusioned college kid, you should know better than to indict our defense policy with inaccurate statistics. Figures such as 30,000 nuclear weapons averaging 200 kilotons to one megaton each don't tell us much about 'glow-power'.

In translation, that's only four tons of TNT for every single human being on the face of this earth. See how easy it is to justify our nuclear defense policy...everyone knows it takes five tons of TNT to light up a commie. Heck, it would probably take twice that much to make one of those darn Democrats glow. That's why I support Reagan's plan to add 17,000 more nuclear weapons to our underdeveloped arsenal.

Now we can bargain with the commies from a position of strength. This is why Reagan has declined from supporting any major nuclear arms treaty from the 1963 Nuclear Test Ban Treaty to the 1980 SALT II agreement. He has just been waiting for the right moment.

I know this is the first time in 15 years a President has failed to negotiate with the Russians. He is just waiting for us to get strong. Be patient and calm down.

Besides, if everything else fails, we can always zap their missiles, nuke 'em till they glow, then shoot 'em in the dark. OK, Scotty, beam me up.

ROTC instructor 'napalms' Motley

To the editor:

Poor, poor sleepy, grouchy 'Harry Motley' (31 Oct. 1984)! It sounds as if tired of Harry has taken the early morning workout of Austin Peay's ROTC cadets VERY personally, as if they are singing about being 'fat and lazy' only to, and for, 'Harry Motley' instead of it being a series of morale-boosting cadence-calls to encourage the runners.

It is almost enough to bring tears to one's eyes thinking about poor old sleepy Harry. ALMOST! Except that 'Harry's' background may make you want to hold back that tear. You see, 'Harry' was, until Spring 84, an ROTC scholarship cadet, one who for three years had tuition, books and supplies paid and was given $100 per month. Even so, 'Harry' was not able to attain the minimum physical fitness requirements to attend Advanced Camp in the summer of 1983.

During Spring Quarter 1984 Motley (a very appropriate pen name) decided he did not want to fulfill the obligations he agreed to with the Army.

So after 'taking' the government (and the taxpayers) for three years of ROTC Scholarship money, 'Harry' decided he would no longer participate in ROTC, nor would he repay the debt in terms of service to his country.

It is sad, pathetic even, that anyone would, after accepting the ROTC financial rewards, attack and denigrate the cadets (who are achieving the goals he could not in such a malicious, vitriolic manner over the disturbance of one's sleep. It is unfortunate that 6-7 a.m. is the only time for conducting physical training which does not interfere with students' classes or jobs, but surely laudable that these cadets are willing to make the extra effort to attain the high standards required for success in ROTC.

Reading 'Harry's' column might cause the reader to suspect just a hint of 'sour grapes' from one who belittles others succeeding where he

Political empathy needed for negotiations

I am writing this column prior to what you will think of as yesterday's Presidential election and I fully realize that it cannot affect anyone's decision to vote, etc.

The inspiration for this was a political analysis show on our esteemed President, Ronald Reagan. One comment that was made seemed to strike home. I had heard it made before, but usually only in passing.

The remark had to do with Reagan believing in Armageddon, the final conflict between good and evil. The implications of the statement seemed to be that the good and evil he believed to be in conflict were the USA and the USSR.

I don't know about you, but that bothers me. I reminded me of something I had read in J.S. Mill's On Liberty.

"Nor is his own faith in this collective action at all shaken by his being aware that other ages, countries, sects, churches, classes, and parties have thought and even now think, the exact reverse....and it never troubles him that were accident (my emphasis) has decided which of these numerous worlds is the object of his reliance, and that the same causes which make him a churchman in London would have made him a Buddhist or a Confucian in Peking."

Now, I had remembered that passage as dealing specifically with religion, but upon rereading it I see that Mill did the same thing then, that I will attempt to do now—apply it to another kind of belief, specifically, a belief in a kind of government.

Once, when trying to explain to my mother that I felt that Russians were just people who believed in a different kind of government, and that I did not feel they were necessarily evil, I was surprised, and disillusioned to an extent, to hear her say that she felt the men in the Kremlin were evil.

My mother is a Republican, so maybe I should not have been too shocked. Once again this equation of communism with evil bothers me. The opposite is also true, equating our system of government with good, just because it is our government, also bothers me.

Don't get me wrong, I admire our system and am quick to take full advantage of as much individual freedom as comes my way. What I don't like about those ideas is that they are like the blinders that some rancheros wear. They do not allow us to see the whole picture.

Part of seeing the whole picture is what Mill was talking about. A cliché that describes it is the one about not judging someone until you have walked a mile in their shoes.

To reiterate Mill, it seems as if a large number of Americans never stop to think that if they had been born in the USSR, they would probably believe in that system as much as they currently believe in our system.

Of course, it is impossible to walk a mile in a pair of Russian shoes, because we are Americans. We grew up here, we sang all the American patriotic songs in elementary school. (If I didn't realize this was America, I would almost call that propaganda.) Every four years we are told by the incumbent party that we are privileged to live in a golden land of opportunity.

I am only too aware of how idealistic it would be to suggest that we forget history and disregard the fact that the USA and the USSR are two systems involved in a conflict of sorts. Maybe if we took the time to consider what Mill said a century or so ago, dealing with the USSR could at least become a possibility.

JULIA TATE:

Separate but equal parades indicate progress?

Saturday afternoon, as I was on my way to the office, my path was crossed by a parade of sorts. Since I couldn't go any further, I stopped to watch. Included in this parade were the organizations S.T.O.M.P. and C.O.R.E., as well as a mini-bus from St. John's, and other representatives of Clarkville's black community. After I arrived at my destination, I made a phone call and learned the purpose of the parade. It was a project of the black community in conjunction with the Clarkville Bicentennial Celebration.

"That's a really good idea," I thought to myself. "All the different races in Clarkville ought to have their own parades. After all we all had a part in the forming of our grand river city." With that I began to plan. How could I draw attention to my own race? How could we race show all the things that we have done in Clarkville?

Well, all the white churches could be represented,

Lord knows there are plenty of them, and they've certainly had hand effect on our town. And we could have folks dressed up like famous white people from Clarkville's past, the illustrious Governor Peay for example. And we'll have to check and see if Robert Newman, the Clarkville artist was white. If so maybe we could have a float commemorating him. He certainly was famous. But what if he wasn't white? Well, then he won't be in our parade. This parade is to show the advancements of people of my race in Clarkville. If he isn't of my color, we'll ignore him.

Sounds pretty silly doesn't it? It's a crying shame that we've spent two hundred years in this town and gotten no further than this. Clarkville is not a town composed of The Black Community, The White Community, The Asian Community, and The Others. Clarkville, like the rest of the world, is made of people, red and yellow, black and white.

When we learn this fact and begin to live it, then and only then will segregation and discrimination be abolished. When will we look at another and not ask "is he the same color that I am?" The sooner we quit clinging to our precious ethnic groups, the sooner we can get on with the task of being people.

E HURT:

Playing musical 'apples and oranges'

Every time I scan the title strips on a jokebox I realize the futility of trying to judge other people's musical tastes by my own. I once volunteered to assemble six hours of good-time music for a predominantly male gathering. All right, I'll speak English, I made some tapes once for some homosexuals who wanted to have a party. I worked hard selecting and sequencing music possessed of what I thought was a certain ineffable fillip.

They didn't like the music.

The first indication I had erred came when a very amiable fellow wearing a neon-red jumpsuit starred with myriad zippers, a fellow we'll call Willie the Rooster, in plain view began shedding his red skin in favor of his second costume of the evening, keeping up a really admirable stream of patter: "I love this party—these zippers are a little reluctant tonight—could create a ruckus—see these garage buttons," and so on.

Willie the Rooster was just having a little fun, but his unabashed disrobing seems to me emblematic of the reason in which I do not participate, whose manifestations I should never again try to orchestrate. They didn't like the music I had so painstakingly assembled for their edification. They wanted to dance. I know this is a little naughty, but they wanted Bette Midler there to camp it up with her big breasts. I should have realized the convulsions of camp that often characterize that culture were beyond my means.

You have missed something, however, if you have never seen twenty-five very fashionable people dancing to music whose abstract rhythms usually preclude dancing as we know it. I nearly fell over laughing, but it really was a heroic effort on their part. While they danced, my straight compatriots and I stood uneasily by the piano in this big room, scarcely daring to breathe. This went beyond camp, into something perhaps more profound.

I learned a lesson. Don't impose your aesthetic on others. Never try to second-guess what people unlike you might like. Never listen to Bette Midler. It is not necessary to participate in a culture to understand it, but my empathy was limited. They didn't dress like me, they didn't talk like me, and they sure as hell didn't dance like me.

Cabaret Night successful entertainment

BY PEGGY VINE

The annual Cabaret Night, featuring the APSU/ute Singers, was a success again this year.

The cast included Kaye Baggett, Amanda Hudson, Denise Johnson, Brenda McGee, Neil Brock, Craig Dillingham, Jeff Hall and John Manire.

The cast performed contemporary songs and several from the '20s and '30s. The entire cast sang such songs as "Fever," "Steamboat," "Patting on the Ritz," and "My Romance."

While all of the performances were very good, Amanda Hudson and Craig Dillingham were outstanding. Hudson got a standing ovation with her rendition of "Other Side of the Rainbow." Dillingham sang "I've Done Enough Dying Today."

Dr. George Mabry, professor of music, was the announcer and host. He and his wife, Dr. Sharon Mabry, also a professor of music, sang "Just You and I."

The set design and lighting were done very well and did not distract from the show. The sound was a problem when the entire cast sang, but was otherwise quite clear.

The orchestra accompaniment was also quite good. The music complimented the singers and did not overpower them.

Mary Wyatt, a graduate of Austin Peay, sang "Clarkeville," a song written by Dr. George Mabry as a part of "Movin' On," the show written for Clarksville's Bicentennial. Her performance was one of the best of the show.

The APSU/ute Singers will be performing in the UCC lobby on Friday at 11:30 a.m. If you missed them on Nov. 1-3, don't miss them on Friday.

JEANETTE McDONALD and NELSON EDDY JR.--No, it's APSU's own Brenda McGee and Craig Dillingham during the highly successful Cabaret Night.

Nashville trip planned

On Thursday, Nov. 8, the ancient philosophy class and the aesthetics class will take a field trip to Nashville to visit the Parthenon and Cheekwood.

The group will leave the campus at 8 a.m., traveling in private vehicles provided by various students who are in the above mentioned classes with riders expected to contribute gas money.

There will be three different exhibitions on review at Cheekwood.

Admission to Cheekwood is two dollars per person and the tour starts at 9:30 a.m.

The guided tour of the Parthenon will start at 11 a.m. and an 'expected donation' of 50 cents is requested.

Plans are to remain in Nashville for lunch at some "aesthetic" place, so involved parties should have some money on hand.

This is an official field trip by the department of philosophy, and should be considered an excused absence from other classes for that day.

Music department events

Several events are planned in the music department for the upcoming weeks.

There will be a student recital on Nov. 8 at 10 a.m. in the Clement auditorium.

Featured in the recital will be soprano Brenda McGee, Kay Baggett and Denise Johnson, and tenor Craig Dillingham.

A concert by the Brass Choir, under the direction of assistant professor of music Richard Steffen, will be presented on Nov. 15 at 8 p.m. in the Clement auditorium.

A faculty recital is scheduled for Nov. 18 at 5 p.m. in the Clement auditorium. Dr. Jeffery Wood and his wife Candice will perform on piano and cello, respectively.

Other upcoming events include a second student recital on Nov. 20, a senior recital on Nov. 21 featuring guitarist Kiri Keathley, and a concert by the Jazz Collegians on Nov. 29.

Flutist Tawana Box will perform in a senior recital on Nov. 30 to round out the month's activities.

All events are free of charge and everyone is invited. For further information, call 648-7815.

The student art gallery committee organized a photographic exhibition and held their opening reception last Monday.

The exhibition was the first event of the season, completely organized by the students.

Todd Duren, a student on the committee, stated, "There were no rejections in the exhibition because it operated on an inclusive, not exclusive basis. Any student who felt his work was valuable to show had it shown."

The gallery committee included Mary Irwin, Angelika Santiago, Amanda Hudson, Lisa Beroth and Todd Duren.

The photographs will be on exhibit in the Archwood Student Gallery until the end of this month for anyone interested.

Beatles influence dB's, Stamey

by E.S. Hurt

After twenty years, The Beatles still exert a powerful influence. Appropriately enough, that influence is strongest on groups from the American South, where much of the music that originally influenced the Beatles originated. Back in the 70's a Memphis group named Big Star took the Beatles style circa 1965, skewed it, and created a genre known as "power pop." In the 80's the dB's and Chris Stamey, from Winston-Salem, N.C., continue to draw upon the scerbic style of the Fab Four while creating something a little more relevant to this affectless decade.

Until last year the dB's consisted of Peter Holsapple, Chris Stamey, Will Rigby and Gene Holder. They released two highly-acclaimed import LPs, Stand for Decibels and Repercussion, both 1981, but were largely unknown outside Winston-Salem and New York City. Then, last year, an American record company, Bearsville, signed them just as one of the group's principal songwriters, Chris Stamey, left to pursue a solo career.

Stamey was tough-minded John Lennon to Peter Holsapple's more saccharine Paul McCartney, and his first solo effort, called, It's a Wonderful Life, would make the Lennon of "Strawberry Fields Forever" proud. It's a wonderful record, experimental and a little arty, but surprisingly direct and even homespun. Stamey has a real piercing North Carolina twang, and he tends to whine a bit; still, what he's doing has real worth. "Never Enters My Mind," "Brush Fire in Hoboken" and especially "Depth of Field" manage to bridge the gap between the "popular" and "serious" music more effectively than nearly anything since the Beatles. These words from "Depth of Field" deserve to be quoted: "Yes I know/You like a fast song/You dig a complicated line/It's so simple/It's so straight/Forever more in a figure-eight."

It's a Wonderful Life, especially enough, is available in the United States only on the small Atlanta-based dB record label. Not so for the dB's themselves, now down to a trio with their first domestic release, Like This. Here we have a great rock group, a great neglected rock group, making a small inroad into an American music scene which is often too blind to see the worth in its own music.

Like This is more of a pop record than Stamey's which means it's a little more obvious. Imagine an amalgam of the Beatles and maybe Creedence Clearwater Revival and you've got a handle on this album, but only a handle. This is rock music that doesn't pretend to anything great or deep, but there's deceptive simplicity to the music that makes you realize there is a lot of intelligence at work here. The dB's are good musicians, especially drummer Will Rigby and guitarist Gene Holder, both of whom play with understated virtuosity. Peter Holsapple writes all the songs, and he sings them with a voice that is slightly strained but distinctive and unpretentious. "Smart music for stupid people" is how the group once described their music, and heck, I can live with that. Anyway, the best songs are "A spy in the House of Love," "Rendezvous" and "Not Cool", which is a tribute to that wonderfully mordant style perfected by the Beatles on songs like "Dr. Robert" and "She Said She Said."

For some reason I always used to feel guilty writing about rock music. It seemed so frivolous, and describing a lot of rock is like trying to describe the taste of cotton candy—a waste of time. But now I'm just going to write about music I like, something basically simple and unpretentious and necessary. Rock music has kept me going through many a crisis of the spirit, and I expect both the dB's and Chris Stamey, not to mention the Beatles, to keep me going for a good while longer. No need to feel guilty about a little simple pleasure when so many don't feel guilty about the complicated ones. Now pass me that Mars Bar and shut up.

SPORTS

AP Govs take on Tennessee Tech

Austin Peay's football team will take on winless Tennessee Tech Saturday afternoon for Homecoming 1984. Kickoff is set for 1:30 at Municipal Stadium.

Last Saturday, Murray State defeated the Governors in double overtime. As Rickey Rice threw four touchdowns, at one point he completed three consecutive passes to the other team.

Late in the game the Governors were trailing 10-3, when Coach Hale used Vince Allen. Allen managed to tie the game when he connected with the Governors' receiver Terry Gentry, after Hendersonville's product, Brian Yarbrough's extra point tied the game, 10-10.

After the first overtime both teams scored field goals, making another overtime necessary.

The Governors did not score on their time of possession, while Murray did and came away with the win, 20-13.

Austin Peay's record dropped to 5-4 while Murray's record jumped to 7-2.

The Govs in a previous game with UT-Martin. The Govs prepare for Tennessee Tech in Saturday's Homecoming day. The game will begin at 1:30 in Municipal Stadium.

All racquetball players can sign up for The Coors Light Racquetball Tournament in the Intramural office.

It is open to women, men and faculty-staff members. The deadline is Friday.

Lady Govs get set for '84-85 season

Austin Peay State University's Lady Govs basketball team is winding down its pre-season practices in preparation for its big homecoming weekend opening doubleheader.

The Lady Govs will open up their season at 7 p.m., Friday at home against Tennessee Wesleyan. They will play Cumberland College at the same time Saturday in the Dunn Center.

The Lady Govs have seven letter winners returning, including three starters. The Lady Govs have also made changes though, with a new coach being the major one.

Marvin Williams, who posted an impressive 100-20 record in six junior college seasons at Jackson State after more than 700 high victories, was named to replace Pam Davidson, who resigned to take a position with the Federal Reserve Bank.

"I really like the players here at Austin Peay," said Williams. "They have good attitudes and they work hard. It has taken them awhile to get used to my style, but they have done a good job."

Davidson left Williams a solid nucleus to build around. Point guard Kristal Holmes led the team in minutes played a year ago and was named to the All-OVC freshman team. She finished 12th in the nation in free throw shooting (.8420), dished out 5.1 assists and averaged 9.2 points per outing.

Junior forward Amy Davis also was an All-OVC freshman selection two years ago and came back with a solid sophomore campaign, averaging 13.1 points per contest. She will be joined at forward by sophomore Lori Harris, who averaged 5.7 points and 4.7 rebounds a year ago.

Also returning are four key reserves: senior guard-forward Valerie Malone (.73 points per game); her sister, sophomore Pam Malone (.34 ppg); sophomore center Tonianna Cannon (.34 ppg) and senior center Susan Wright (.21 ppg).

Williams has complemented his returnees with six new faces. Heading the list is junior forward Dorothy Taylor, a junior college All-American who averaged 25 points and 11.4 for Williams at Jackson State Community College a year ago.

Also, Sheila Easley has joined the Govs for her senior season. The 6-2 center from Nashville Overton played her previous three seasons for the University of Georgia's outstanding program. She provides the Lady Govs size and great leaping ability previously lacking at the position.

Another newcomer expected to help is senior guard Valencia Halsey, who walked on during spring conditioning and earned a partial scholarship. She played at Fisk University as a freshman and averaged more than 20 points per outing.

Other newcomers: Sherry Sullins, a freshman guard from Leganons, Tenn.; Tina Whitaker, a transfer from the University of Tennessee-Martin, and walk-on Melanie Melton.

"We are looking forward to the season," said Williams. "This team has a lot of possibilities. We have excellent outside shooting but we need to work on our inside game."

"If we can synchronize our inside and outside attacks, we will do well this season."

But Williams knows the Lady Govs will have no easy task in either of their first two contests.

"Wesleyan is a small college power. I believe they won 25 games last season, so I expect them to be organized when they come in here."

"Cumberland has a good team also, I understand. Both of these teams will have the same coaches and programs they had last year and that will help them in their opening games."

The Lady Govs practice for their opening game of the season against Tennessee Wesleyan. The game is scheduled for Friday at 7 p.m. in the Dunn Center.

The Austin Peay department of public safety will sponsor a volleyball tournament Nov. 30 through Dec. 2 at Memorial Gym in memory of Mr. Tom Hyland. Hyland, former campus police officer, died last year in an accident during a softball game.

Money raised from this tournament will be used to establish an endowment fund to support a

Steve McMahan, the campus police officer in charge of the tournament, said the scholarship will later go to a student seeking a degree in Law Enforcement when this degree becomes available at Austin Peay.

Coca-Cola Bottling Co., co-sponsor of the tournament, will present first and second place trophies in the men's and women's Each team member from the first place teams will also receive a t-shirt.

The tournament is open to the entire community. There is a $20 entry fee for each team.

Guitarist to perform

APSU will host classical guitarist John Johns of the Blair School of Music Nov. 11.

Johns will perform at 4 p.m. in Travern Theater under sponsorship of Austin Peay's music department, Tennessee Arts Commission and the APSU Visiting Speakers and Artists Committee.

Johns, who received national recognition when he appeared on the Westinghouse television special, "A Pride of Guitars", taught APSU guitar instructor Joe Rea Phillips while he attended Vanderbilt University. Phillips initiated Austin Peay's guitar program and ensemble in 1978.

Phillips left Austin Peay two years ago but has returned to rebuild the guitar program. "These classes were very popular when I was at Austin Peay previously," he said. "The classes are for all students, not just music or music education majors. The guitar is part of American folklore. Many people just want to learn how to play the guitar for their own enjoyment."

The public is invited to hear Johns play and admission is free.

HC run scheduled

Many people will run down to the Austin Peay State University football game, Nov. 10, and take it seriously. A five-kilometer road race is scheduled as part of APSU Homecoming festivities.

The APSU Homecoming Classic, sponsored by Ideal Distributing, will begin at 9:20 a.m. at Municipal Stadium. It will precede to Homecoming Parade through downtown Clarksville. The race will begin and end at Municipal Stadium.

Participants will receive a long-sleeve T-shirt and running cap. Prizes will be awarded to the overall male and female winners, along with winners in six age categories.

Entry fee is $6 in advance or $7 on the day of the race. Registration will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday at the stadium.

Applications for pre-registration are available at Ideal Distributing, Page and Taylor's Sporting Goods and Austin Peay's Public Affairs Office.

Applicants should be mailed to David Wile, P. O. Box 866, Clarksville, Tenn. 37042. For more information contact Wile at 552-3300.
