A close race occurred for SGA executive secretary. Yolanda Johnson was elected with 359 votes. Cindy Wells finished with 315 votes.

From the College of Arts and Sciences, Susan Argo, Angela Barksley, Ashley Blackburn, Yolanda Coleman and Tamara Tyler were elected to senate positions with 278, 315, 261, 317 and 371 votes, respectively.

Three candidates ran for senate seats from the College of Education with each being elected. Tim Amyx received 195 votes, Holle Fuqua received 204 votes and Tara Gant received 346 votes.

All three candidates for senate positions from the College of Business were successful. Rob Evans finished with 245 votes, Michelle Peters received 294 votes and John Webb received 168 votes. Samantha Guerrero received five write-in votes, and her election is pending certification.

No candidates ran for the College of Graduate and Professional Programs, but two people received write-in votes. Gabe Segovia received 14 write-in votes, while Chris Lewis finished with two write-in votes. Both elections are also pending certification.

Election results contested through separate complaints several complaints were issued to the Student Government Association Election Committee last week following the SGA elections.

Westbrooks, president of the African Student Association, and Robert Broome, vice president, filed two separate complaints.

Letters sent within 24 hours of the election results.

The complaint dealt with the run-off of the presidential candidates. Her claim was that Nicole Jackson, presidential candidate, should be declared the undisputed winner due to plurality. In this case, Jackson had the greatest number of votes.

Jackson, who carried 318 of the votes, will be in a presidential run-off with Keri McInnis, who carried 243 votes, April 21.

The election of APSU's student government members is based on "Robert's Rules of Order," according to the SGA constitution. In "Robert's Rules of Order," it is stated that "the basic requirement for approval of an action or choice by a deliberative assembly, except where a rule provides otherwise, is a majority vote. The word majority is used with qualification... it means more than half of the votes cast by persons legally entitled to vote."

In this year's election, three candidates were in the running. In addition to the run-off candidates, Brian McKinney carried 145 votes. To carry a majority, 354 votes would have to be carried by any one candidate, according to the majority procedure.

The rules of the election were not spelled out to Ms.

CAMPUS CONNECTION

By DEVIN BROOKS
staff writer

Middle Tennessee State University--President Clinton is considering MTSU as a possible institution to implement his new community service loan program. Many other schools are also being considered for the pilot program.

Director of Financial Aid for MTSU, Winston Wrenn, says Clinton's dream of offering loans to students in return for community service is moving closer to becoming a reality and may be available to MTSU students as early as next year.

"We believe we're going to see more changes in the next 90 days than we have in the last 10 years," Wrenn said.

Clinton's plan is designed to make college affordable to all students while increasing young people's involvement in such areas as education, health, safety and environmental projects.

After the pilot program, paid for with $15 million from Clinton's economic stimulus package, Clinton proposes spending $7.4 billion over the next four years and building from over 25,000 service slots in 1994 to more than 100,000 in 1997.

Steve Rogers, a spokesman for Congressman Bart Gordon, says Gordon will support all efforts to get MTSU into the pilot program for community service loans.

University experiences outbreak of crime during semester

By JEFF GRIMES
assistant sports editor

This is the second story in the series on campus crime.

A rash of thefts and vandalism has hit the Austin Peay campus during this semester. Like Austin Peay, other campuses across the country have had incidents occur which reach the campus paper, and sometimes the attention of the national media.

Everyone reads or hears about these stories of rapes, murders and thefts. The impact of these crimes on the victims, however, is seldom heard.

Afraid for their safety, more than 400 students left school at the University of Florida in the fall of 1990 when five students were murdered in their apartments.

Women at Carleton College in Northfield, Minn., wrote the names of male students on the library bathroom wall, accusing them of rape. Four women eventually sued the school for not removing the men from campus after multiple charges were filed against two men.

Over the past few weeks several people's wallets were stolen from their purses and a car was stolen from a campus parking lot.

Marsha Jackson, the public affairs director for 91.7 WAPX, had her wallet taken from her purse while she worked alone on a computer in an adjacent room. Her purse was inside her desk in her office.

"I've never been the victim of a crime before," Jackson said. "I really felt like I needed to find a way to protect myself."

"It made me think that if someone could come in and steal my wallet that easily, someone could just as easily come in and attack me," she said.

Dr. Ellen Kanervo, chair of the department of speech, communication and theatre, also had her wallet taken the week before from her purse in her office while she was in an adjacent room.

Kanervo and Jackson have offices in the Music/Mass Communication Building. Kanervo stepped out of her office and did not realize her wallet was gone for about 30 minutes.

"I was angry with the person who took it and angry with myself for leaving the door open," she said.

After the incident, she said she was a little more careful in protecting herself against further incidents.

Three days later, Barbara Wilbur also had her wallet stolen from her purse in her office in the Dunn Center.

"I was angry at myself because we had been notified this was going on," Wilbur said.

Wilbur stepped out of her office to get a drink of water when the theft occurred. A man was arrested for the theft of Wilbur's wallet, but not for any of the other thefts on campus.

"Now when I see someone I don't know, I'm really untrusting," she said. "I look at people that I don't know with a different perspective now."

Jackson, Kanervo and Wilbur were victims of crimes that most people do not consider very serious, but the crimes changed the way they see people. Trust has been lost.

On Feb. 22, Brian Ardinger's car, a red 1993 Chevrolet IROC Camaro, was stolen from the parking lot near Burt School.

Two Nashville men, John M. Scruggs, 22, and James C. Green, 22, were arrested after Ardinger's car was wrecked during a high-speed chase on Interstate 24.

Ardinger was called out of a class and told by Police Safety officers they believed his car had been stolen and had been wrecked.

"It's a big shock. You don't think something like this will happen to you," Ardinger said.

His car was destroyed in the wreck. Ardinger had to spend time accounting for items that were out of his car and deal with the insurance companies.

"I kept the car in good condition. I thought it was worth more than the insurance company gave me," said. "After adding up car payments and insurance you're out of a lot of money."

He said the incident caused a strain on his school work because of the shock of what had happened and the time he put into taking care of problems arising from the theft.

He said he believed the people responsible for recent crimes on campus were not students. "I think something needs to be done," he said about the crime wave. Ardinger said he thought that someone might get hurt if things continue.

Faculty members attend NEH seminars

Peay State University's faculty of history and philosophy has been selected for 1993 National Endowment for the Humanities Summer

Dr. T. Butts, history instructor, and Dr. Robbins, assistant professor of history, have been tapped for these prestigious programs.

Robbins is one of only 12 applicants chosen for the NEH Summer Seminar "Current Issues in Native American History," which will be held July 23 at the University of Arizona.

The seminar is designed for college students from several disciplines interested in American issues. Seminar participants will complete an individual research project.

From June 14 through Aug. 6, Robbins will participate in the seminar titled "Kant's Moral Philosophy" at the University of Wisconsin, Chapel Hill.

Robbins will address various aspects of Kant's moral philosophy. The seminar is a historical understanding of the philosophical assessment of themes in Kant's moral issues today.

Continuing Education protection seminar

The seminar will focus on protection from carjackings and is the subject of an upcoming course offered by the Office of Continuing Education.

Slated for 6-8 p.m., Wednesday, April 14, in Room 215, Kimbrough Building, the course will be taught by Lesleah Vilardo, Fort Campbell, Ky.

Vilardo is vice president of surveillance operations for the International Security Institute. She is co-author of a book on basic surveillance and teaches surveillance courses for area police departments.

Vilardo will discuss the basic self-protective measures needed to detect, elude, survive and report carjackings and stalking—crimes that have come of age during the 1990s.

Although the course is free and open to the public, enrollment is limited. For more information or to enroll, telephone (615) 648-7816.

Professor receives award for excellence

Along with the honor of being the only Tennessean invited to a prestigious New York conference, an Austin Peay State University faculty member also brought home an award for excellence in education.

Dr. Paul Shaffer, associate professor of mass communication, was a member of the winning case study team at the International Radio and Television Society's Faculty/Industry Seminar recently held in New York City.

By his ability to apply academic principles to the "real world" situation given, Shaffer won the Stephen H. Coltrin Award for Excellence in Communications Education. National and New York City media professionals judged the case studies.

Only 75 college professors nationwide were invited to the seminar. They were able to meet many of the leaders of American mass media as well as participate in activities involving national media organizations.

Surveys provide insight, understanding about AIDS

By MISSY CARROLL
editor-in-chief

This is the first in a three-part series on AIDS relating to the college student.

Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome is a well-talked about subject in the media, but the college community seldom is the focus.

Many assumptions about college students suggest that this population is adequately informed concerning this disease and the HIV virus. In a recent survey published in The All State, a question was asked "Do you have any questions about AIDS?"

One respondent answered the question, "No, any responsible college student should already have the facts about HIV."

This response may seem typical, but in other answered surveys at least two questions were posed. The number of returned surveys was a low number, suggesting that if two students out of 10 responses have questions, a number of the 4,500 main campus population at APSU also must have questions.

According to Diane Berty, director of the Alcohol and Drug Prevention office, most college students have knowledge of responsible behavior concerning AIDS or protection methods from the HIV virus, but the knowledge does not always influence the behavior.

process excluding the post-test. This step was undertaken due to a cut in funding.

Residence halls students were requested to complete the survey during fall semester check-out. According to Berty, the results were not surprising but did provide some information.

"It did provide us with information on the sexual knowledge of the students and sexual practices that we did not have before," she said. The results of the survey are based on students only, but it is assumed that traditional students would have responded in much the same way.

"It validated all the assumptions we were making and that we need to continue the education. We have a sexually-active population, and we need to provide them with accurate information," she said.

AIDS/HIV education programs mainly are "cloaked" in other programs dealing with such issues as sexuality, Berty said.

The curriculum of some courses, such as social work and nursing courses, integrate AIDS education in the material, and some open seminars are given.

The general conclusion of the survey is that AIDS education needs to continue.

RESPONSES TO SPECIFIC QUESTIONS FROM THE VANDERBILT AIDS PROJECT SURVEY

- Should a student with AIDS/HIV infection be allowed to go to APSU? Of the 795 responses, 72.2 percent (yes), 9.9 percent (no) and 17.5 (not sure).
- Do you know where to get tested to see if you are infected with the AIDS virus (HIV)? Of the 790 responses, 67.7 (yes), 24.2 (no) and 7.1 (not sure).
- Do you know how to keep from getting the AIDS virus (HIV)? Of the 794 responses, 89.3 (yes), 4.5 (no) and 5.3 (not sure).
- Can a person get AIDS/HIV infected from having sexual intercourse without a condom (rubber)? Of the 794 responses, 87.4 (yes), 8.7 (no) and 3.5 (not sure).

The Vanderbilt AIDS Project conducted a AIDS awareness survey, funded by the state of Tennessee, in pilot schools. Austin Peay was the only institution that completed the survey process.

A pre-test and post-test were to be given and education programs were to accompany the survey. According to Berty, APSU completed the entire

Test provides typical characteristics of drug users, nonusers at APSU

By DEVIN BROOKS
staff writer

This is the second story in a three-part series on alcohol and drug abuse.

Would you like to know what the typical drug user on campus looks like? A test ran at Austin Peay during the fall of 1990 and 1992 gives a profile of what the average user and nonuser of drugs looks like.

The investigation focused on psychological dispositions that influence whether people are inclined to use drugs or to reject them. Although drug use is a personal decision, the students' choices are frequently influenced by the prevailing social climate. At some schools the dominant climate encourages drug use, popularizing it as fun and enjoyable; at other schools the climate rejects drug use as stupid and harmful.

The students at APSU most likely to use drugs are young single males who get low grades and skip classes. They go out more with friends and on dates, participate more in sports, and are less likely to attend church. They are also more likely to be involved in the Greek system.

The typical nonuser at APSU is almost the exact opposite of the user. The nonuser sample are most likely females and older or married students. These students attend classes regularly, get good grades, spend less time playing sports, going out with friends or on dates. They are also likely to attend church regularly and express interest in volunteering for peer counseling activities and working toward a drug-free environment.

At Austin Peay, 64 percent of the students were identified as having nonuser type psychological dispositions and 36 percent were identified as having user type dispositions in 1990. In 1992, 56 percent of the students at Austin Peay were classified as nonuser type and 44 percent were classified as user type. While there was no meaningful change from year one to year two in the self-reported use patterns of APSU students, the number of students with nonuser type psychological dispositions was significantly lower in 1992 than in 1990. Nonetheless, the majority of Austin Peay students fit the psychological profile of a nonuser.

Jackson or to anyone else," Westbrook said. "As far as the African American Student Association is concerned, Ms. Jackson is the new president-elect of APSU's SGA and should be declared so."

The Election Committee concluded, according to Camille Reese, current SGA president and committee member, a run-off will still be held.

Reese said that the election procedure may have been confusing to some students.

"We needed to go in-depth in explaining the election process," she said. "She (Westbrook) has a valid gripe."

As of Monday, Westbrook had been notified by letter of the committee's decision and has issued a formal appeal to the Student Tribunal.

Broome filed a separate complaint stating "formal campaigning" took place in the University Center the day of the election.

According to the SGA constitution, this campaigning is illegal. His case called for a nullification of the election.

The claim made by Broome is the African American Student Association allegedly was circulating flyers stating their support of certain candidates.

The Election Committee decided in this situation that another election will not be held. According to Reese, no proof of illegal campaigning was presented.

"There is no real way for us to prove what went on," she said.

The committee's action in the case calls for an investigative committee to be appointed from the senate to investigate on an individual level.

"The whole situation from the beginning of the elections Wednesday to the hearing of the election board on Friday was mishandled," Broome said.

Broome also was notified by letter of the committee's decision and has appealed to the Student Tribunal.

"If I have to, I will take this to the chancellor of the Tennessee Board of Regents," he commented.

Opinion

Editorial

Race turns to racial divisions

What started out as an annual Student Government Association election now has the potential of becoming an issue of racial accusations. It wasn't intended to be a race of races and it shouldn't be. It is a vote to choose who will govern the funds that each student contributes from his semester tuition, and the people that comprise the university.

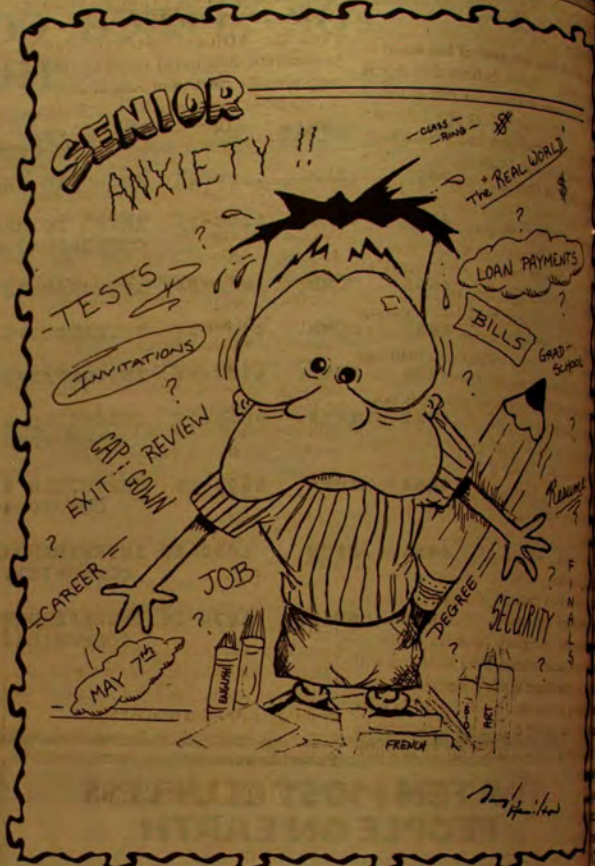

There should not be a disagreement as to the validity of a decision to hold a run-off election. Nicole Jackson did not win 50 percent of cast votes required by "Robert's Rules of Order," which is the undisputed basis of Austin Peay's SGA elections, as indicated in the Student Government constitution. Clearly, this indicates the need for a run-off election between Keri McInnis and Jackson.

The question of inappropriate campaigning at the poll site is disturbing, because it should have been made clear that no campaigning would be allowed. If in fact this was seen, why wasn't it called to the attention of SGA members officiating the voting process? That's when the necessary proof could have been obtained that would validate Robert Broome's disagreement.

The argument presented that the candidates were not aware of the majority statute is no excuse to deny the need for a second election. Every student has access to "Robert's Rules of Order," and if they intend to be considered for a role in SGA, they should be aware of its fundamentals.

If Jackson is the campus's choice for Austin Peay's president, then she will win. If McInnis wins, then obviously it was by a majority decision. These choices are made every year. Run-offs are not uncommon, but suddenly this election has turned into a free-for-all where the blame lies everywhere and in everything.

The real issue to come out of this election is a sense that candidates are no longer being examined based on qualification or experience but on official support and most disturbing of all, the color of the candidate's skin.

The ultimate Humph to APSU housing, for conspiring on what can only be called Two-Riversgate. It seems that right after housing booklets arrived, some interesting letters did, too. The letter invited those elite students with a 3.0 or better and no prior housing record to apply to live at Two Rivers Apartment complex, next to Emerald Hill married and graduate housing.

The one-bedroom apartments are apparently going to be purchased by the university and will contain two students per apartment, as opposed to Meacham, which houses four students.

Here's the juicy part—24-hour visitation, a privilege which no on-campus, undergraduate housing complex offers.

Aside from the fact that there has never been a conclusive study which indicates that GPA and housing records make a person more morally sound, the fact is that this is blatant discrimination.

Not only that, but it certainly has been a hush-hush affair, as there was no mention in the official housing application and booklet on Two Rivers. In fact, the residents of Two Rivers haven't been made aware that they may be out of a home in a few months.

rules occurred on the day of the election. Sections IV.a.6. and IV.c. were violated when the African American Student Association distributed flyers in the UC Nicole Jackson, Pam Rowe, Yolanda Johnson, Tara Gant, Rita Maliani, Yolanda Coleman, and Sheila Brown on the day of the election.

These rules state that "there will be no formal campaigning allowed in the University Center during the day of the general election," and that "formal campaigning" is constituted as... the public distribution of pamphlets of any printed materials that supports the election of any candidate for an SGA office."

The facts are simple and the evidence speaks for itself. Unfortunately, a majority of the 1993-94 Election Board disagrees with the obvious. The matter is now in the hands of the Student Tribunal. I encourage any student who witnessed a violation of the election rules to testify before the Tribunal. Contact myself or Bruce Ray, chief justice.

On a personal note, I wish to say that this election is being contested strictly as a matter of principle and honor. It is a source of personal embarrassment to me and others that this heinous disregard for proper procedure and decency occurred on this campus. This election was not held in a democratic manner, and that's not how we do things in America or at APSU.

Resident hounds housing

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter to The All State for only one reason. I just wanted to see if I could get someone's attention over at the housing department because my roommates and I have made numerous trips to housing and no one seems to listen or care if you have a problem.

We have several problems with our apartment at Meacham. We are missing a chair, our freezer door is broken, we're missing a lamp, and my mattress is too large for the bedframe which makes a nice cozy lump in the middle of it for me to sleep on. I can't really complain very much about the mattress because I was told of its condition before I moved into the apartment. As for the others though, that is a different story.

The chair from our apartment has been missing for nearly two complete semesters now. We have asked for our chair many times over the past year, but it just doesn't seem to do any good. I went to housing and asked for the lamp myself, and I was informed that housing doesn't replace lamps that are broken.

The person who lived in the apartment before me broke it, and I'm willing to bet that he was made to pay for it. Anyone I've ever known to break something in the dorms has been made to pay for it. If he paid for the lamp, which I'm sure he did, I would like to know where the money went and why housing won't replace the lamp.

Last but not least, there is the problem of the freezer door. It is broken off the hinges and every time you open the door of the refrigerator, the freezer door falls at your feet. You have to slam the refrigerator door shut in order to get the freezer door to stay on in the first place.

In my opinion the housing department just doesn't care what the students have to say. I paid my money to live on campus and all that I ask for is what I am entitled to. I paid for an apartment that had all its chairs and lamps and a freezer door that doesn't fall off all the time.

I don't see asking for this as an unreasonable request. Maybe after the housing department sees this letter, they will take some action.

President Clinton is urging major cuts in the U.S. Defense program. Do you think the long term results will be beneficial or detrimental to the nation and why?

"I think it's going to be detrimental because when they close down a base, people lose their jobs, making the unemployment rate higher."

Yvonne Carter, Junior, Mass Communication

"I feel it could be beneficial because the money he would save by doing this could be put to important programs. It could be detrimental because he could be cutting back on troops that could be needed." David Boyd, Junior, Health & PE

"I do not think that it will be beneficial because if there was a war, our nation would be lacking of funds and would have to turn to another country." Dana Minchey, Freshman, Pre-Medicine

"I think the cuts will be detrimental because the programs cut will hurt the people with the special skills used in the army that can't be used in other jobs." Bo Garrison, Sophomore, Business Management

Sport 'what ifs' create theories, endless questions

Now that the smoke has cleared from North Carolina's national championship, let's focus on the, now infamous, non-timeout by Michigan's Chris Webber.

What if Webber had not called timeout? Would Michigan have won their second national title in five years? Well, we'll never know, but lost in the shuffle and questions raised over Webber's mistake, is the fact that he blatantly travelled after rebounding the missed free throw. Turnover.

Carolina ball, Carolina title.

Think back to the Tar Heels' other title in 1982. UNC won it on another mental error when a panicked Georgetown player threw the ball to a Carolina player that sealed the Hoyas' defeat? What if?

There have been numerous "what ifs" in the world of sports—some recent, while others are of legendary status.

It has been stated that "if" is the largest word in the English language, perhaps because of its ability to potentially never be answered correctly.

What if Havlicek had not stole the ball? What if Bobby Thomson had not hit "The Shot Heard Round the World?" What if Franco Harris had not caught the "Immaculate Reception?"

What if Bill Buckner would have fielded the routine grounder that rolled gently through his legs in the 1986 National League Championship Series? Boston would have headed to the World Series with the pennant, but destiny was not on their side that day.

One day back in the '20's, a first baseman by the name of Wally Pipp could not start for the fabled New York Yankees. His replacement, an unknown by the name of Lou Gehrig, would go on to set the major league consecutive games mark while anchoring the feared Bronx Bombers. What if Pipp had played that day?

What if Florida State would have had a field goal kicker, or at least a little luck, the past two years when they faced Miami on the gridiron? Both years, the Seminoles have missed a field goal on the game's final play by just wide right, denying the 'Noles of two potential national championships. It has been argued that Bobby Bowden would have won several titles the past few years under a playoff system, but instead, has just missed "wide right."

Every time a team loses a big game by a close margin, regardless of the sport, second-guessers and armchair coaches begin analyzing coaching decisions.

What if Rick Pitino would have put a man guarding the inbound in Kentucky's climactic Regional final against Duke last year. He didn't and Grant Hill's Hail Mary pass went unmolested into the sure hands of Christian Laettner, who calmly spun and sank a shot that would send the Blue Devils to the Final Four, where they would win their second consecutive national title.

Close to home, what if No. 14 seed Austin Peay had not upset third-seeded Illinois back in the first round of the 1987 NCAA Tournament, setting off chants of "Let's go Peay!" all around the country? What if the Govs would have beaten Final Four-bound Providence in the second round, instead of losing 90-87 in overtime? Would Pitino, who was coaching the Friars at the time, have gotten the job coaching the New York Knicks or Kentucky had the Peay pulled off the upset that day? One has to wonder...

Each "what if" creates other "what ifs," which create others and so on and so on. It must be a question of fate, luck or something, because "what ifs" have effected the sporting world as much as anything.

Diamondmen to vie for first place this weekend

By JEFF GRIMES
assistant sports editor

Austin Peay ended a weekend trip to Tennessee Tech with a 5-4 loss after taking the first two games in a three game series.

The Golden Eagles (9-19, 5-4) defeated the Govs 5-4 on a one-out single by Johnny Patterson in the bottom of the ninth inning.

The Govs (19-13, 9-3) led 4-0 until Tech picked up two runs in the fifth and one each in the sixth and seventh innings, to tie the game.

Russell Stoops (3-1) got the win while Gerald Albright (3-2) took the loss.

Jason Mikulecky extended his hitting streak to five games with two hits and Scott Quade hit his second home run of the season for the Govs.

Quade leads the Govs with 42 hits and a .378 batting average in 32 games for the season. Quade also set new Austin Peay career marks with 669 at bats and 205 hits.

Tech out-hit the Govs 10-8 and neither team committed an error in the game.

The loss dropped the Govs into second place in the OVC, one game behind Middle Tennessee. The Blue Raiders are 10-2 in the OVC after taking three games from Tennessee State last weekend.

Austin Peay 5, Tennessee Tech 1.

Shane Dortch and Kelly Healy (2-1) combined for seven strikeouts, holding the Golden Eagles to one run on four hits for the win in the second game of the series.

Bryan Link hit a two-bagger and Steve Cook hit a three-run homer in leading the Govs' offensive attack and Wes Sims stole his 15th base of the season.

Austin Peay 2, Tennessee Tech 0.

Sims' two-run home run in the third proved to be all the offense the Govs would need as David Richardson (2-3), the OVC Pitcher of the Week, threw 10 strikeouts and seven innings of shutout ball, holding Tech to only four hits and no runs.

Austin Peay 11, David Lipscomb 8.

The Govs had 12 hits, including three for Sims and a home run for Mikulecky in their 11-8 victory over the Bisons in Nashville last Thursday.

Rod Streeter (3-1) threw for the win and Neil Murphy picked up the save for the make-up game. The game was originally rained out in March.

Austin Peay 12, Vanderbilt 4.

In a game full of pitching changes and extra base hits, the Govs came out on top of the Southeastern Conference's Vanderbilt 12-4 at Raymond C. Hand Park last Wednesday.

Both teams combined for 10 pitchers and 23 hits as Dortch (3-0) got the win, entering in the third.

Quade and Cook each hit a home run and single for Austin Peay.

Kevin Smith had four singles. Brian Law had two doubles. Sims had two singles and Kelly Weathers added a double to the Govs' hitting attack.

Indiana State 10, Austin Peay 2.

Indiana State led 2-0 before scoring seven runs in the seventh inning and one more in the eighth on their way to a 10-2 victory over the Govs.

The Govs host Cumberland tomorrow. March 30 suspended game will resume in the ninth inning with the teams tied at 12 at 5 p.m. The regularly scheduled game will follow after the completion of the make-up.

OVC opponent Eastern Kentucky (6-17, 3-10) visits for a pair of games on Saturday beginning at 5 p.m. and on Sunday at 1 p.m. Eastern Kentucky currently holds fourth place in the OVC.

The popular belief may say that the kings of the softball diamond, Alpha Pi has something else to say. The Greek queens have dominated the division, compiling a 6-0 record virtually no competition. The juggernaut is averaging a whopping 10 runs per game, including outbursts of 24, 30 and 30. The squad's only close game was an avenging 8-7 decision over Raging Rebels on March 31. Last season Alpha Delta Pi roared through the playoffs, only to be upset by the Rebels in the first of the playoffs.

"We're mentally prepared for the playoffs," said Tina Hennessee, who starts at second for the team. "There's not one player on the team who is any better than another, so that helps us to play together. We play to win, but we like to have fun in the process." Despite the Pi's dominance, the Rebels stand at 4-1 heading into tonight's contest with Jus Koolin', who has also qualified for the playoffs at 2-3. Chi Omega, who has a 4-2 mark, has also secured a playoff spot after starting out 0-2. In men's action, Sigma Chi Black has rolled to a 5-0 mark in the Greek League, securing the league's top seed in the upcoming playoffs with one game remaining. The rest of the divisional playoff slots are up for grabs, however. The only other team to have clinched is Pike Garnet, by virtue of wins over contenders Alpha Gamma Rho and the Pike Stallions. Garnet will battle the Kappa Sigma Gators tonight at 5:15 p.m. The Stallions, who will go head-to-head with the AGR's tonight at 4:30, will clinch with a win, but could be watching with a loss. The AGR's only hope is to knock off the Stallions. The Gators can clinch with a win over Garnet, but can still squeeze in with a loss and a Stallion victory. If Garnet was to beat the Gators and Alpha Gamma Rho beats the Stallions, a three-way tie for the final two slots will emerge. Each of the three would then be 1-1 against the other two, causing a coin flip for the final two spots. In independent action, the No Heads have rolled through unbeaten at 5-0, and have clinched the top spot in the playoffs regardless of the outcome of tonight's battle with the defending-champion Drane Street Bombers, who have clinched at 3-2. Other playoff slots belong to the Killebrew Sox, whose only setback was to the Heads, and to the Aces, who stand at 3-2. Playoffs will begin next week, with first round action slated for Monday.

Cheerleading tryouts create nervousness

By BYRON SHIVE

sports editor

After weeks of preparation, training and perhaps, worrying, varsity cheerleading tryouts for the 1993-94 school year will commence this Saturday morning.

Interview sessions for prospective team members will begin at 8 a.m., with actual tryouts scheduled for 1 p.m. There are six spots each for male and females open, for a total of 12, plus two alternates each.

Previous members recollect on the aura of nervousness at trying out for the first time.

"I remember being very nervous," said Kristi Kelley, a sophomore who has just completed her first year on the varsity. "I came up here and saw all of the other girls and what they could do and I was in awe. I didn't know what to expect or what the tryouts would be like, so I didn't know what would happen next."

Others were lucky enough to bring a friend along to tryout with them.

"The first time I tried out," said Wendy Walters, who will seek her fourth and final term on Saturday, "I was really nervous and scared. I tried to stay confident. Tina Hennessee came up with me and we had cheered together since seventh grade, so we were kind of like each other's supporter. We both made it and have cheered together for three years. It's our senior year coming up, so we both want to make it again."

Newcomers arrive for a week-long clinic, in which they are taught the needed skills for the weekend ahead. They, too, experience the nervousness.

"I'm mentally trying not to be nervous," said April Halbert, a high school senior from Mt. Juliet, Tenn., "but it's hard not to be. I know that if I am nervous, that it will freak me out and I'll screw up, so I'm just trying to stay calm. I just want to try not to think about anything except what I'm doing and hope that I can do my best."

"It's nice that now I know what I'm doing," said Jude Crowell, a veteran of one full campaign. "However, we have to teach the newcomers everything that we know, even though this weekend, we'll be competing against each other. Besides, regardless of who makes it, we always want the best people on the squad."

"One advantage to trying out before coming to Austin Peay," said Kelley, "was that I didn't know anybody. Now, after I've been here for a year, there will be people there that I know. So, even though I know what to expect, that will be something else in the back of my mind."

So, the jitters and excitement of cheerleading tryouts will continue to increase, even as the hours until Saturday morning decrease.

SPORTS INFORMATION PRESS RELEASE

Track

Austin Peay State University women's outdoor track team will compete in the Ohio Valley conference championships 11 a.m., this Saturday at SEMO in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Eastern Kentucky, Middle Tennessee and host Southeast Missouri are expected to battle for the championship. Austin Peay coach Elvis Forde is hoping to finish in the field's top half, with the expected help of some strong field-event performances.

"As I look at all the top performances in the conference the last couple of weeks, we are rated in the long jump, shot put, and the javelin," Forde said. "I'm going to have to hope that the kids pick up some points here and there to help bring our score up."

"I have some athletes that are capable of making a mark in the conference but they have to take the responsibility upon themselves to do their best."

Golf

The Austin Peay golf team finished 16th out of 18 teams in the Vanderbilt Music City Intercollegiate Invitational last weekend at the Opryland Hotel.

The tourney was won by Georgia, who took first, second and eighth places individually in posting a score of 870.

Rob Hessing paced the Govs, who notched a score of 925, with a 226.

Football

Outside linebacker Jeff Gooch broke the fibula in his left leg during a scrimmage on Friday. The injury occurred at the end of the first full week of spring practice.

Gooch, who started at free safety at the beginning of last season, was moved to linebacker toward the end of last fall's campaign.

Volleyball

The defending regular season OVC champion Lady Govs have signed a third player after extensive recruiting.

Tarol Page, who starred for Memphis Harding Academy, played on the Class-AAA state championship team and was named All-District, All-Region and All-State tournament. A second team All-State outside hitter and middle blocker, Page stands 5 foot-9.

Page also stars on the basketball court, where she averaged 15 points per game, while picking up All-District, All-Metro and honorable mention All-State honors.

Page joins two other signees. They are Vann Austin, of El Paso, Texas, and Amanda Hurst, of Germantown, Tenn.

Burney serves as president of Civitan International

again an Austin Peay professor has proven to be a distinguished member of the community and an outstanding leader. Dr. J.F. Burney, professor of psychology and finance, is currently serving as the president of Civitan International, an organization that provides service worldwide.

Burney began his Civitan involvement in the Clarksville Civitan Club with little hope of attaining such a position. By taking part in meetings at the club, Burney learned about national levels and how to manage his interest and time as Civitan. Burney placed himself in this position.

Burney was elected by members from clubs worldwide to their national position and served one year as president-elect and one year as president of the national committee members and preparing for his year in office.

Burney's term began Oct. 1, 1992, and since then he has been actively involved on the international board and in organizing Civitan chapters in formerly eastern block countries such as Russia and Romania.

Burney says chartering chapters in those countries is much easier than one may think.

"They are excited about opportunities and desirous of learning Western culture and free enterprise," Burney said. "They are interested in using their new found freedoms."

Burney recalled one touching instance where he was a few minutes late to a meeting with a group of Romanians. After giving his apologies, the English-speaking provided a week long training session for them, attended club and district meetings, visited and observed club community service projects and been a representative of Civitan International at both Civitan and non-Civitan sponsored events.

"This year my responsibility is in promoting and ensuring the growth of Civitan not only in existing countries, but in other countries as well," Burney said.

He has been involved with Civitan for 22 years and says his desire to get involved in the community and be a volunteer first interested him in the club.

"Involvement is the key" is Burney's personal motto as well as the theme he adopted for Civitan International.

"That has motivated me more than anything-to be truly involved," Burney said.

He will finish his term as president at the end of September, but will continue as next year's chairman of the international board. Thirteen people from around the world make up the board which determines the policy and direction of the organization.

This summer Burney will attend the national convention in Europe where his successor will be selected.

Civitan Awareness Week

The Gov's Civitan club is sponsoring their awareness week to "recognize Civitan members and reflect on what Civitan means" said Kathy Dullam, Civitan's president-elect. The club is honoring our nine faculty secret pals to them this week.

The group of 18 active members is a service organization which has assisted with such causes as Clarksville's Diverfest, Special Olympics and the Therapeutic Learning Center.

The club is open to anyone, and they welcome all interested students to their next meeting which will be held April 21 at 3:30 in Kimbrough, Room 119.

members immediately told him not to worry because they had waited 45 years for Americans and would have waited all night for him.

With this overwhelming response and excitement, Civitan International looks to expand to Mexico, Iceland, Moldavia and others.

During his time in office, Burney has worked and communicated with the 40 district governors and

Project S.A.V.E. and Cultural Center sponsor first Black Youth Conference

LEONARD BURTON
Features editor

An event that will influence and shape the lives of many African Americans will be taking place on the campus of Austin Peay. The first Black Youth Conference sponsored by the Wilbur N. African American Cultural Center will be held April 24.

The theme for this conference will be "Issues In Educating African American Youth." The speakers will be led by Austin Peay's most influential speaker—Dr. James E. Mock, chair of the social science department, and Dr. Leonard Burton, director of cultural center.

One of the objectives of this conference is to educate the youth and to eradicate the stereotypes that are in circulation about African Americans.

Leonard Burton said, "The conference is for educating the African American youth as well as the youth."

Dr. Mock will be Dr. Stovall's topic as he addresses the youth.

Dr. Mock will speak on a political issue to solve critical issues confronting the youth.

There will also be panel members, including individuals in and outside the community, to discuss with the youth issues and important points raised in the speakers' speeches. A question and answer session will also be presented to get feedback from the audience to get them involved in the discussions.

The main objective of the conference is that it will be beneficial to the participants, as well as the community.

The conference is sponsored by Project S.A.V.E., a branch organization of Greenhill Human Development Corporation and the Cultural Center. It will be held Saturday, April 24 in Clement Auditorium from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Lunch will be served in the cultural center from 11 a.m. to noon for individuals attending the conference.

Leonard Burton, program coordinator of Project S.A.V.E. said, "The idea has been in the works for over a year. Once the criteria was established the advisory board got together with Dr. Stovall and got the ball rolling. The youth of Project S.A.V.E. will do most of the work, while we (advisor board) will construct the format of the conference."

There will be a pre-registration fee of $20 per group (15 persons per group) to attend the conference. On site registration will be $3 for adults and $2 for children over 10 years old. For children under 10 the admission is free.

For more information about the conference or registration forms contact the cultural center at 7120.

AP Playhouse produces musical, 'Little Shop of Horrors' ends season

By CHRISTIE COX
Staff Writer

AP Playhouse plans to finish out the 1992-93 season with something a little different.

Howard Ashman and Alan Menken's "Little Shop of Horrors" is the first musical to be performed as one of the four yearly mainstage productions at Austin Peay in almost 10 years.

The show, directed by Austin Peay alumnus, Sam Whited III, sports a very diverse and talented cast of characters, from the failure-of-a-flowershop-owner, Mr. Mushnik (played by Joe Leavitt) to the horrific person-eating plant, Audrey II.

The voice talent of Audrey II is supplied by Jason McGowan, and the plant's physical talents are provided by Kara Parrish.

As the show begins, the original Audrey, played by Melanie Ashley, shows up for work at Mushnik's flower shop a little late.

She confesses that her sadistic rebel dentist boyfriend, Orin Scrivello, has physically abused her.

Jayson Chitwood portrays the dentist and several minor characters as well.

Three street urchins, Chifon, Crystal, and Ronette (Kelly Butler, Pamela Jones and Leandria Jack, respectively) console Audrey and try to convince her to leave her abusive partner for her sensitive, if nerdy, co-worker, Seymour Krellborn.

Audrey believes that her past is too jaded for a man like Seymour (known by day as APSU student Rob Waltz).

It is not until Seymour's "strange and unusual plant," Audrey II, eats her boyfriend that Audrey can realize her love for Seymour.

Add to this story assorted customers, winos, chorus members, and others (including Jon Atchley, Kim Beegle, Paula Norman, and Vondell Richmond) and you get a side-splitting show worth seeing.

Musical director Wayne Wyman and choreographer Jan Dial assist in the professional look of the show, which will be presented at 8 p.m. April 21-24. A Sunday matinee will be held at 2 p.m. April 25.

Tickets, on sale now, are $3 for students and $5 general admission. The box office will be open from 2-5:30 p.m. weekdays. For reservations, call 648-7379.

The Browning Administration and Library Building was erected in 1948. It was named after Gordon Browning who served as governor of Tennessee from 1937-1939 and from 1949-1953. The clock and Carillon Chimes were installed in the tower in 1950 by the Montgomery County Foundation which was established by H.D. Peters. (photo by Donna Lovett, first of three in a series)
