Veteran's Day more than a holiday

The All State brings you a personal look at veterans in our community

Professor reflects on military 'conflict'

by TANGEE REYES
staff writer

Veteran's Day means many things to many people. To one, it is a day of family festivities, or a much needed break from work. For others it is a day of reminiscing and mourning those that are gone.

For Dr. Thomas Pallen, professor of speech, communications and theater, Veteran's Day does not mean any of those things.

"I think of myself as an educated person, a teacher, a scholar, a researcher, a husband and a father, but as a soldier, no, I don't want to be bought of in that way," Pallen said.

"I have never joined a veteran's organization, as a matter of fact, I have resisted joining veteran's organizations."

Pallen served in the U.S. Army from 1965 until 1970, serving as a 2nd Lt and leaving as a Capt. During that time, he served in Vietnam for a year, performing duties as an information specialist at a small post in Saigon.

"As an artillery officer and being a 2nd Lieutenant, I could have been sent to a place that eventually turned out to be the biggest artillery duel of the war."

"The 2nd Lieutenants that had been sent there were flying at a rate of about one per hour. Being stationed at Saigon was one of the luckiest things that happened to me in Vietnam."

After obtaining his master's degree in 1968, Pallen chose to join the military rather than be drafted.

"I knew that I would have to serve in the military eventually, and I made the choice to go in as an officer rather than be drafted and do it as an enlisted man. The odds seemed better," Pallen said.

"When I was in artillery school in Oklahoma, I was in a class of about 50 or 60, and to the best of my knowledge, only about seven of us survived the war," Pallen said, "most of them are names on the wall."

Because of Pallen's post as an information officer, he learned more about what was going on in the war than what was made public.

Because of some of that behind the scenes knowledge, Pallen has come to feel that the Vietnam war was wrong.

"The politicians and military people that had gotten us into that war, I think, were absolutely wrong to do so, and I think they knew they were wrong."

"We came back from the war and if we were welcomed at all, it was as people who had participated in something that was wrong. Rather than proud of what you had done and proud of your country, it made you feel ashamed of what you had done," Pallen said.

"I cannot forget those three years and the affect they had on my life, and I resent that, because they changed me in ways that I did not want to be changed," Pallen said.

"When I went to Vietnam I was a patriot, but when I came back I definitely was not," Pallen said.

"If someone asked me now to do something for my country I wouldn't just say yes without thinking."

Desert Storm sends a mom to war

By HEATHER GUEST
staff writer

There are many veterans on the Austin Peay campus; whom have served in wars. Lost in the crowd is APSU student Yvonne Johnson.

Johnson is a communications major with a concentration in journalism. She is involved in many organizations at Austin Peay.

Among those is the Non-Traditional Student Organization (NTSO), staff writer for the Captain Magazine, and she is on the African American Cultural Center Advisory Committee.

A retiree from Ft. Campbell, Johnson is a single parent of two boys, ages 15 and 12. Originally from Long Island, N.Y., she retired at Ft. Campbell in 1994 after 19 years of service in the military.

Johnson settled in Clarksville for several reasons; she loved the area, her children loved Clarksville, and she feels that Clarksville is a good place to raise children.

Johnson is what you would call a "post-Vietnam" veteran. She entered the military in 1975 after the Vietnam War had ended.

She was in the last class to graduate from WAC (Women's Army Corps). She was transferred to Fort McClellan in Anniston, Ala., for basic training. Johnson said basic training then was different from today because they didn't train with men. In fact, she rarely saw men until after basic training.

Johnson's first permanent assignment was in Fort Hood, Texas. Most of the men there had been in Vietnam prior to Fort Hood and most had never worked with women. Johnson said many of the men felt women had no business in the military. "I love the military, though, it's not for everybody," Johnson said.

While Johnson was stationed in Nuremberg, Germany, she was deployed to Saudi Arabia to serve in Desert Storm. She said the toughest thing she did was to leave her two boys at home.

Many of the troops stayed in the port area, however, she was in the group that went out into the desert.

"The desert is unforgiving and relentless," she said. While in the desert, the soldiers had to be self-sufficient. For six months, they washed their clothes by hand, made their own bathrooms, and lived very primitive. She said now she will not buy any

"I'm really serious about making promises and keeping my word." She said that if she had done that, she wouldn't have been able to live with herself.

Many of the soldiers had a "new found respect for the military" after the war. She said there were some soldiers that deserted, but 99 percent knew they took an oath and were not going to desert the United States.

The highest rank Johnson received was a Sgt. E-5. After retiring, she decided to finish her degree. She had always wanted to be a journalist and thought this clothes that say "hand wash".

For little taste of how they lived, Johnson explained the "homemade bathrooms".

The bathrooms were open pit latrines with barrels placed inside and covered by shacks. Once a day, they had to take out the barrels, pour fuel on them and burn them.

During Desert Storm, many of the women soldiers found ways to prevent themselves from being deployed to Saudi Arabia. Johnson was not one of those women.

may be her last chance. "This is my shot and I'm going to take it," she said.

While in the army, Johnson completed one year of college. She also said that when she and her children study together at night, it motivates them to succeed in school.

Johnson recommends military service to anyone. She is very fond of the European armed forces, where it is mandatory for students to serve for three years in the military.

Youngsters became adults in Vietnam

Students think of Veteran's Day in different ways. For some it means a day off from school, for others it means much more. Most of us have a family member or someone we know who is a veteran.

Curt Wright, a senior communications major at Austin Peay

Since World War I, the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month has been set aside to honor all veterans and was originally called Armistice Day.

served over 20 years in the United States Army and served two tours of duty in Vietnam. A veteran, Wright explained, is anyone who has served actively in any branch of the armed forces for more than 180 days, less in some cases.

"I run into people all over campus who believe you must have been in a war to be considered a veteran. That's not true at all," Wright said.

Wright was enrolled part time at Austin Peay in 1992 and became a full-time student in 1994. Last year Austin Peay didn't recognize Veteran's Day with a day off from classes. Many people including himself spoke out and were upset at that decision.

This year, Austin Peay observed Veteran's Day Tuesday, Nov. 11 by cancelling classes on Monday, Nov. 10.

"I'm glad Austin Peay is observing Veteran's Day off," Wright said. He explained that since World War I, the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month has been set aside to honor all veterans and was originally called Armistice Day.

"If it wasn't for school Tuesday I would be at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, the wall in Washington D.C., with many of my friends," Wright said.

Wright said the hardest thing he ever did was return to Vietnam for a second tour and say goodbye to his wife and young son for a second time. He explained, he first did a 12-month tour starting in 1968, came home for 14 months and then had to return for another tour lasting more than 10 months.

"I never imagined I would have to go back," Wright said. The chances of surviving one tour of duty in Vietnam were very slim, he said.

One of his worst memories of Vietnam is seeing a friend who had been shot four or five times from the knees up, loaded into a helicopter. "The hardest part was the fact that, the night before we had celebrated his last letter home."

In Vietnam, when a soldier had one week left before going home, he would write what was called his last letter. Soldiers wrote it, mailed it and it meant they only had six days remain-

Introduction to Windows 95 course

"Introduction to Windows 95" is being offered twice by the Office of Extended Education.

Participants will learn Windows terms and use of the mouse. This class should be completed before proceeding to other software application courses.

Brett Wendel will teach the course from 7:15-9:15 p.m. on Wednesdays, Nov. 19, 26 and Dec. 3. The class will be offered again from 5-7 p.m., Mondays and Wednesdays, Dec. 1, 3 and 8. Karl Gerlinger is the instructor.

For each class, there is a course fee of $38, a textbook fee of $17, and a supply fee of $5. The class will meet in the Business and Community Solution Center.

The registration deadline is at least two working days prior to the class. Extended education courses are open to anyone over the age of 18.

For more information, telephone 7816.

College Republicans to meet

The College Republicans will have a weekly meeting on each Monday at 3:30 p.m. in the Archwood conference room. For more information, contact Jacob at 551-4487.

College Republicans sponsor chili sale

The College Republicans will have a chili sale today, Nov. 12, from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. in front of the University Center.

Algebra course offered for adults

The Business and Community Solution Center along with the Office of Extended Education, will offer an algebra course for adults who want to build confidence in their mathematical skills.

The class will meet from 6-8 p.m., Mondays and Wednesdays from Nov. 17-Dec. 3 in the Kimbrough Building, Room 115. The instructor will be Dr. James Sanders, an assistant professor of mathematics at APSU.

The course fee is $46. This is a noncredit course open to anyone over the age of 18. Tennessee residents over the age of 65 may audit selected non-credit courses without the payment of course fees, provided minimum enrollment is met and space is available. This waiver does not apply to book or supply fees. Proof of age is required.

The deadline for registration is at least two working days before a course is scheduled to begin. Courses with a limited enrollment may fill prior to the deadline.

For more information, telephone 7816.

Successful Selling class offered

Having a great product is one thing, but being able to market and sell that product is the key to success.

The class, "Give Those Cookies Away: Successful Selling through Spirituality," will be offered by the Business and Community Solution Center through the Office of Extended Education.

The course will meet from 6-8 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 18 in the University Center ballroom. The registration fee is $20.

Rebecca K. Merriman, author of "Simply Happy, How to Simplify Your Life and Find Happiness," will teach the class. This empowering course is an introductory look into some spiritual strategies for success in marketing and sales. Students will learn through such examples as Wally Amos, originator of the Famous Amos Cookie empire. This multimillionaire business mogul began by giving his cookies away. The Law of Giving is one of the six strategies covered in this class.

Extended education courses are open to anyone over the age of 18. The deadline for enrollment is at least two working days before the class is scheduled to begin.

For more information, telephone 7816.

ing. Although Wright is open about Vietnam now, he hasn't always been. "For years I denied ever being there. Outside the military it wasn't a topic of discussion for me at all," Wright said.

"I recognized I was having severe emotional problems and no longer had control of my thought processes. Counseling and talking with other veterans was my only release. I never realized anyone else was having problems."

"Every single day I live with a very knowledge of things that happened to me in Nam. I have nightmares and a mind and body doesn't function as good as it should," Wright said.

When asked would he return, "in a heartbeat" had to go again I would not hesitate," he said.

"We don't want a lot of hoopla, I did originally for any credit, I wasn't looking to any honor, I felt it was my duty."

Sports Briefs

With the 1997 volleyball regular season winding down, the Lady Govs host their last match of the season against Western Kentucky tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the Dunn Center. The squad travels to Tennessee State on Tuesday, Nov. 18 for their regular season finale before the OVC tournament at Southeast Missouri State, in Cape Girardeau, Mo., Nov. 21-22.

Austin Peay's men's basketball team tips off the 1997-98 season on Saturday, Nov. 15, when they travel to Evansville, Ind., to face the University of Evansville. Game time is at 7 p.m. The Govs home opener is Monday, Nov. 17 against Christian Brothers at 7 p.m. in the Dunn Center. Admission is free with a valid student ID.

The women's basketball season begins with the Ohio Valley Conference/Southern Conference Shootout Nov. 22-23. The Lady Govs face Georgia Southern, while Eastern Kentucky takes on East Tennessee State on the opening day.

Austin Peay's rifle squad returns to action on Nov. 22 when it travels to Jacksonville, Fla., to face Jacksonville State University.

Austin Peay "buddy" tickets are available throughout the basketball season. Any APSU student with a valid ID may purchase up to four extra tickets in the general admission seating section of the Dunn Center for $3 each. These tickets may not be purchased in advance, but only at the door on game day. Students who purchase the tickets will be able to sit in the general admission area with their guests.

Govs tabbed for third in OVC

Lady Govs third in voting

By SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

Austin Peay's men's and women's basketball squads were tabbed to finish third in the OVC for the coming season at the Ohio Valley Conference media day in Nashville.

Reggie Crenshaw was selected to the All-OVC first team, while Joe Sibbitt was named to the second team on the men's side. For the women Amanda Behrenbrinker was chosen for All-OVC first team.

The Govs, who shared the 1996-97 regular season crown with Murray State, were picked third behind the Racers, and Tennessee State University.

Murray received 18 first-place votes in the balloting of head coaches and sports information directors, while Tennessee State received the other two first-place votes.

Middle Tennessee State was chosen to finish fourth. Rounding out the rest of the field were, in order, Eastern Illinois, Southeast Missouri State, Tennessee Tech, Eastern Kentucky, Tennessee-Martin and Morehead State University.

Murray State senior guard De'Teri Mayes was named OVC Preseason Player of the Year.

Mayes was second in the OVC and 24th in the nation in scoring a year ago, averaging 21.0 points per game.

Also named to the All-OVC first team were SEMO's senior center William "Bud" Eley, TSU junior center Jason Johnson and Murray's senior guard Chad Townsend.

Crenshaw made the All-OVC second team in 1996-97 after averaging 13.2 ppg, 8.8 rebounds per game and 1.5 blocks per game.

Eley earned first team All-OVC last season, leading the OVC and finishing 13th in the nation in rebounding (10.3 rpg).

Johnson was second team All-OVC last season, averaging 16.4 ppg and 6.9 rpg. Townsend, the MVP of the OVC Tournamen ment, averaged 13.3 ppg and was seventh in the nation in assists with a 7.1 average per game.

Joining Sibbitt on the OVC second team were senior guard Rick Kaye of Eastern Illinois, MTSU's senior forward Aylton Tesch, senior guard Karen Gilbert of Tennessee State, and sophomore guard Kevin Samuel of TSU.

The Lady Govs of Austin Peay were selected third in the OVC behind Eastern Kentucky, who won the regular season and tournament titles in 1996-97, and Tennessee Tech University.

The Lady Colonels were given 17 first-place votes in the balloting. Tech, which tied APSU for second last season, earned the other three first-place votes.

Following Austin Peay were, in order of selection, Middle Tennessee State, Eastern Illinois, Tennessee State, Murray State, Tennessee-Martin, Morehead State and Southeast Missouri State.

son, was chosen OVC Preseason Player of the Year. Seng led the nation in shooting percentage a year ago, making 51.6 percent of her shots. She was second in assists and 10th in the nation in 22.2 ppg.

Peay's Behrenbrinker, EKU senior guard Laphelia Doss, senior guard Roberts of EKU and Eastern Illinois forward Barbra Garbova were selected to the All-OVC first team.

Behrenbrinker earned first team last season after finishing third in the league in rebounding (9.0 rpg), shooting (19.5 ppg) and fourth in blocks (12).

Doss was second team All-OVC after averaging 12.5 ppg and winning the OVC Tournament MVP.

Roberts led the nation in three-point percentage in 1996-97 (48.8 percent) and averaging 13.6 ppg.

Garbova, an All-OVC second teamer, averaged 15.7 ppg and 7.3 rpg.

No APSU players made the All-OVC team.

Volleyball season winding down

By SCOTT HOSKINS
sports editor

The Lady Govs lost a two hour marathon match to Tennessee Tech last week, severely damaging their hopes for the Ohio Valley Conference regular season crown.

After winning the first two sets easily 15-4 and 15-8, the squad faltered and dropped the next three, 12-15, 11-15 and 11-15.

"We had them, but the momentum changed," APSU head coach Cheryl Holt said. "We went from being up 11-8 in the third to losing the match."

Holt said unforced errors played a big role in the defeat. The Lady Govs were plagued by seven reception errors and 11 served errors, while making just five service aces.

Diana Hart led the Lady Govs (19-8 overall, 11-5 OVC) with 18 kills and Becky Sowinski had 14 kills and 17 digs in the loss.

Annie Gieber contributed 20 kills and 46 assists from the setter's spot, and Laura Mitchell had nine kills and 20 digs.

"Our whole style of play changed," Holt said. "We became tentative and played tighter. It was a coach's nightmare."

"We've not let that happen again. You've got to give Tech credit. It'll probably be our worst loss of the year."

The Lady Govs rebounded with an out-of-conference victory over Arkansas State, 13-15, 15-10, 15-3 and 15-7.

Sowinski paced APSU with 20 kills and 13 digs. Jennifer Anderson also contributed 20 digs in the win.

Hart and Jenny Wenning had 12 kills each, and Kim Smith added 11 kills and 10 digs.

The squad capitalized on 13 service aces, five by Wenning and four by Sowinski.

The Lady Govs finish the regular season on the road at Tennessee State before playing in the OVC Tournament.

"TSU will be our biggest match," Holt said. "Every match is big at the end of the season."

"We can finish as high as second or as low as fifth."

Well-known local artist awarded Ovation Award

Olen Bryant, Austin Peay professor of art emeritus, is the 1997 recipient of the Ovation Award presented by the APSU Center of Excellence for the Creative Arts.

This marks the third annual presentation of this special award, which is given to an individual who has made significant contributions to the artistic and cultural life of the university, community and region.

While attending the Dimensions New Music Series concert at APSU, Bryant was presented with an engraved crystal iceberg sculpture by Marlon Dow, associate director of the Center of Excellence for the Creative Arts, in honor of his selection as the third recipient of the Ovation Award.

This award was established by the APSU Center of Excellence for the Creative Arts in 1995 to honor individuals who have given their time and efforts in outstanding support of the arts.

Bryant is a well-known sculptor who has been a favorite of local and regional collectors and art enthusiasts. His works can be found in the collections of the Tennessee Performing Arts Center, Tennessee Fine Arts Center, the Fine Arts Gallery at Vanderbilt University, the Hunter Gallery at Chattanooga and the Carroll Reece Museum in Johnson City.

His work also is displayed at APSU and in numerous private collections, including a recent acquisition by Nashville Mayor Phil Bredesen.

Bryant has participated in many local, regional and national exhibits and was commissioned to design and produce the humanitarian award presented by the Country Music Foundation in Nashville.

A native of Cookeville, Bryant received a bachelor of science degree from Murray State University, Murray, Ky., and a master of fine arts degree from the Cranbrook Academy of Art. He did further study at Institute Allende, San Miguel, Mexico, the Cleveland Institute of Art and Art Students League. Bryant's teaching career began in Shaker Heights Schools, Ohio, in 1958, where he taught until 1961. From 1962-65, he taught at Union University in Jackson and came to APSU in 1966, retiring in 1991 after 25 years.

Former Ovation Award recipients include Mabel Larson, James Mann and Peg Harvill.
