Trying to document an entire year of university history is not easy. With almost 11,000 students on campus, another 1,000 or so faculty and staff members, a countless number of events and games, it's incredibly challenging to include everyone in this piece of APSU history.

I hope you enjoy this one small piece of APSU, and often turn through its pages to remind yourself and your loved ones what this year was like at The Peay.

I also would be remiss to not thank the staff members that helped put this publication together and the guidance that was provided from the advisers.

Thank you for reading, and thank you for another awesome year at Austin Peay!

Fall

As Summer into Autumn slips
And yet we sooner say
"The Summer" than "the Autumn," lest
We turn the sun away,
And almost count it an Affront
The presence to concede
Of one however lovely, not
The one that we have loved -
So we evade the charge of Years
On one attempting shy
The Circumvention of the Shaft
Of Life's Declivity.

- Emily Dickinson

WELCOMING
CLASS OF 2015

Freshman Orientation & Back to School Bash

At New Student Move-In Day Aug. 27, faculty, staff and students personally welcomed new students by helping them move into residence halls and get settled on campus.

At Freshman Orientation Aug. 28, new students got to know APSU at Convocation, a cookout, Freshman Finale and events like a photo safari with their APSU 1000 classmates.

“Just don’t give up trying what you really want to do. Where there’s love and inspiration, I don’t think you can go wrong.”

PEAY READ: THE SOLOIST by Steve Lopez

Steve Lopez spoke with APSU 1000 students, signed posters and copies of his book at The Peay Read.

A Lost Dream, an Unlikely Friendship, and the Redeeming Power of Music

Author and Los Angeles Times columnist Steve Lopez spoke to the APSU student body, on Thursday, Sept. 29, in what was the culmination of over a week of Peay Read events. Lopez's book "The Soloist" — about a schizophrenic musician, Nathaniel Ayers, who becomes homeless — was chosen by the Peay Read Committee as the year's required freshmen reading material. Events for the Peay Read included screenings of "The Soloist," book discussions and an essay contest. Having spoken to dozens of groups across the country, Lopez said the message he most wanted to leave with students was to "take advantage of the opportunities college offers you to figure out what you really have a passion for."

Connie Sanders, director of the Child Learning Center, has her poster signed.

End of an Era

Early in the fall semester, three residence halls once home to several generations of APSU students were torn down, making way for three new, modern residence halls that are safer, more technologically equipped and capable of handling another 30 years of APSU students.

The new dorms will feature “safe rooms” capable of withstanding high winds and dangerous storms, classrooms and a quad in the center, giving The Peay the perennial college campus feature it was lacking.

Subway Sets Up Shop at The Peay

In late September 2011, APSU welcomed its newest dining venue to campus. Subway opened its doors to anxious students, faculty and staff after much conversation about the new restaurant. Subway replaced Austin's Diner, a 1950's style soda shop, as a healthier option for students. Since it opened, Subway quickly became the busiest location in Middle Tennessee, proof of its popularity among the student body.

Dance Marathon

Student Life and Leadership organized a Dance Marathon to benefit the Monroe Carell Jr. Children's Hospital at Vanderbilt. The Marathon had a "rave" theme, allowing students and participants the chance to dance the night away. More than $5,500 was raised to benefit children facing life-threatening conditions. Part of the fundraiser was to recognize children who have bravely faced extreme health conditions like cancer and other serious illnesses.

As dozens of homemade shirts were hung throughout the clothesline in the UC Plaza, many students stopped to look, some shedding tears. This was a day for passersby to learn about their peers and many abuse victims to declare themselves survivors.

These T-Shirts are collected each semester, all with different stories on them that bring the campus together as a whole.

AUSTIN PEAY

On September 11, 2001, America cried as the terrorist attacks on our country took its toll on 2,819 firefighters, policemen, soldiers, and civilians. It affected every American in some way, and some more so and deeper than others. We all remember where we were that day, no matter how old or young.

That was 10 years ago, and the toll has only increased with the War on Terror that has unfolded since. Tears have been shed by every family affected by both the 9/11 attacks and what has transpired as a result. Everything in America has changed, from the way we travel to the simple way we look at our loved ones.

Austin Peay State University students experienced an eye-opener when the highest ranking FDNY firefighter to survive the 9/11 attacks, Capt. Richard Picciotto, spoke in Clement Auditorium. Picciotto traveled to our school to share his experience. His moving story touched the hearts of many, and now students at our very own university have had the chance to be touched as well.

As the program began, students were instructed to look for a card marked with the fire department shield at the end of the row they were sitting in. If their row had a card they were to stand. 343 students stood, representing the 343 firefighters that died when the twin towers collapsed. The audience now looked on in utter shock at the visual display of the number dead — a display many of them had probably never seen.

The first firefighter killed had not even entered the building, however. Picciotto said early in his account that the first firefighter killed actually died from a victim falling from one of the upper floors of the 110-story burning building.

As Picciotto made his way up the stairway of the North Tower, he stopped on each floor to make sure everyone was evacuated. On the 35th floor, Picciotto said he could “feel the noise” of the South Tower falling. His first thought: “How many friends of mine just died?" And the next: "How many people were in that building?" These unanswered questions plagued him while he stood in the North Tower plotting his next move. He repeatedly says the toughest decision he ever made was to evacuate the building.

Austin Peay State University students watched and listened in awe as he continued his story. Emotions were evident everywhere in Picciotto's audience and he expertly used a touch of comedy to prepare the audience for his next major event, telling a story about a man who was too busy with his work to evacuate.

On the 12th floor, he came across a room full of people who were doing nothing to try and escape the building. He talked about those first moments, wondering why there were still people on a floor so close to the ground and then realized that each of the people on this floor were handicapped in some way.

As he helped the people escape the building the banging began again and the lights went out. This time he knew. He knew that the North Tower was falling and they would soon be crushed. His prayer of "Please God, make it quick," filled his mind right before the stairs disintegrated beneath his feet. Hope continued to live when he realized they were in a void and they had a chance to escape.

Picciotto told students about making priorities and the importance of keeping family and friends toward the top of that list. He told students about preparedness in a crisis. He spoke about financial and emotional support for families and service men affected by this infamous day and he sent a large "Thank you" to each and every student. He stressed the importance of sending out the same support to the soldiers in the military who are dying every day for our freedom to attend this university, among many other things.

Picciotto told a captivating story, and Austin Peay students listened intently, most realizing that they were lucky to have heard it.

Discussions, planning and banter about Mudbowl start the day it ends. "What are we going to do next year?" Judging by what happened in 2011, it's only going to get bigger and muddier.

MudBowl is always a fun, friendly time, sometimes the competition can get intense.

And whether you win or lose,
every one comes away a little (or a lot) dirtier, and a lot closer as a university.

Spring

The fields are snowbound no longer;
There are little blue lakes and flags of tenderest green.

The snow has been caught up into the sky -
So many white clouds - and the blue of the sky is cold.

Now the sun walks in the forest,
He touches the bows and stems with his golden fingers;

They shiver, and wake from slumber.
Over the barren branches he shakes his yellow curls.

Yet is the forest full of the sound of tears....

A wind dances over the fields.
Shrill and clear the sound of her waking
laughter,

Yet the little blue lakes tremble
And the flags of tenderest green bend and quiver.

- Katherine Mansfield

Polar Plunge

Tradition takes on a cause in 2012

By BRIAN BIGELOW

The brainchild of Kelly Kler, a former APSU graduate assistant, the Polar Plunge has become a campus tradition, even prompting APSU President Timothy Hall to participate each year by jumping into the frigid waters of the Foy outdoor pool in a full suit.

"I've participated every year," Hall said. "I figure I'll be old the moment I stop."

The annual event, which was held on Friday, Jan. 20, was sponsored by University Recreation and functioned as a fundraiser for the new S.O.S Food Pantry on campus. Participants who brought in two or more canned goods to the event received a free T-shirt.

In its third year, the Polar Plunge attracted an unprecedented 211 people, up from about 190 last year and approximately 160 participants its first year.

Save Our Students

Food Pantry sets up shop in SLL office to help APSU students facing difficulties

Shannon Doss and Kaytreana Shepherd, two graduate students in the Social Work department, had an idea.

They went to Alexandra Wills, Assistant Director for Student Life and Leadership, and pitched their idea.

Their idea? To help out their fellow APSU students. They created the Save Our Students (S.O.S.) Food Pantry to provide a helping hand to students struggling to make ends meet. S.O.S. not only helps students in need, but they also have counseling services attached to the program.

To get the program running they needed support and donations from students, faculty, and staff, which later totaled more than 1,000 items. They needed space to store the items, which came from a converted closet in the SLL office.

Two corporate sponsors — Publix and Davita — are also helping out. Starbucks set up a food drive. Alumni have donated money and gifts of the food to support them.

Giving food is not only service that S.O.S. provides. There is also counseling. If a student comes back a second time, they will sit down with one of the counselors from APSU. Any situation can happen in someone's life that can create troubling times for a student. Their goal is not only to provide food but also find the core problem.

"That is what makes us unique, we've got the social working aspect. We're not just a quick fix for food. Let's get to the root of the issues, what is going on so we can fix it," said Wills.

They have big plans for the future to get a new, larger facility that can also include a thrift store.

Students can help others on campus by donating school supplies, old clothes, things that students might need.

In April 2012, APSU's chapter of Phi Kappa Phi held a campus-wide induction ceremony of its newest members. At several different sites across campus from the balcony on Harned Hall to the third floor of the University Center, the names of newest members were read aloud, a recognition of their academic achievements and inclusion into one of the most recognized and prestigious honor societies nationwide.

Every year Phi Kappa Phi honors one Austin Peay alumni by inducting them into their Hall of Fame. All nominees have expressed Phi Kappa Phi beliefs and practices.

Phi Kappa Phi's 2012 honoree was Montgomery County Mayor Carolyn Bowers.

Bowers graduated from APSU with a B.S. and M.A. in Business. She was a Business and Computer teacher in Clarksville for 29 years, where she received multiple awards and became involved in the Clarksville-Montgomery County School System. She was named Outstanding Classroom Teacher in 1998, sponsored Business Professionals of America Youth Organization for 25 years, served on Tennessee Vocational Association Board of Directors and served as President of Tennessee Office Education Teachers Association.

As a proud alumni, Bowers has demonstrated why she is a deserving inductee into the Phi Kappa Phi Hall of Fame.

RIVERS AND SPIRES

APRIL 19-21, 2012

Photos By: Brittney Sparr

Clarksville has been celebrating the rejuvenation of its downtown area since an EF4 tornado ripped through Clarksville in January 1999. For the past 10 years, Clarksville has celebrated its nationally known festival, Rivers and Spires.

Arts

While Clarksvillians attend the festival, they get a chance to buy art and crafts from local vendors that includes sculpture, jewelry, paintings, photography and more. Pictured above is the official Rivers and Spires poster, designed by APSU junior Lucas Freeze.

Culture

Clarksville is filled with life and culture. Rivers and Spires brings together the city's diverse, melting pot community.

Food

One of the best things about Rivers & Spires is the diversity of the food. People can enjoy enormous funnel cakes or have cajun cuisine.

Music

With six stages of different genres of music, a competition for aspiring artists and a headliner, the sounds of the festival are always lively.

As they passed me by
I saw love was in their eye.
I said hello there
I'm sure you've heard of heaven
But all they did was pass by

So busy with life
I guess that heaven can wait.
