Austin Peay State University and the Tennessee Board of Regents will sponsor the Science and Mathematics Academy (SAMA), a free two-week summer program for interested area high school students, from June 6-18.

SAMA will allow high school students, who will be 10th & 11th graders in Fall 2010, to obtain an enhanced view of science and math skills, free of charge. Participants will live in an APSU residence hall take college courses, attend various events and field trips, take college entrance exams, meet faculty and make new friends. A total of 50 students will be selected to participate in this year's program.

Anyone interested should submit an application. To apply, contact a high school guidance counselor to pick up an application packet or email at fountainv@apsu.edu or burtonw@apsu.edu. The guidance counselor must complete the discipline form. Due to school closures as a result of the flood, the application deadline has been extended to May 14th, 2010. Applications should be mailed to SAMA Program, c/o Dr. Willodean Burton, APSU Department of Biology, Box 4718, Clarksville, TN 37044.

Construction still continues on the chemical engineering technology building. APSU received a $6.4 million grant from the state for the new lab facility and the chemical engineering program unofficially began last fall. The building is set to open this fall.

History was made

In November 2009, it was announced for the first time in APSU's history, the student enrollment was above 10,000. The exact number was 10,088. "Behind every number is a student whose dreams are being realized here," President Tim Hall said during a public announcement.

APSU had 9,296 undergraduate students and 892 graduate students, which was a 8.37 percent increase from Fall 2008. APSU is the only state university that cannot file enrollment numbers until after the 14th day of classes during the Fall II term at the Austin Peay Center @ Fort Campbell.

HOMECOMING:

Before their numerous awards, Lady Antebellum performed at last year's Homecoming concert

Homecoming is a long honored tradition at APSU. Student organizations participate in several events throughout the week in order to earn points towards the Wyatt Award, which is the overall winner of Homecoming. Some of last year's events were a banner contest, step off, chili cook off, AP Apollo and float contest. During the week, there is also a concert and Lady Antebellum performed before they won their numerous music awards later in the year. At the Homecoming football game, the Homecoming King and Queen are announced. This year's Homecoming theme and concert artist has not been announced.

Judy Shepard spoke about 'unity'

At this year's annual Unity Celebration, equal rights activist Judy Shepard was the featured speaker. Judy Shepard's son, Matthew, was murdered 11 years ago because he was gay.

Recently, Judy Shepard joined President Barack Obama in the signing ceremony of The Matthew Shepard and James Byrd Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act, which protects individuals from violence based on the sexual orientation and identification.

The weekend before Shepard came to campus, Westboro Baptist Church had APSU down on their website to picket. Students quickly found out and organized a counter protest against Westboro.

The night of the event APSU students, faculty, staff, community members and visitors from other schools rallied in front of APSU at the intersection of College Street and University Avenue in support of Shepard's visit. Westboro did not show.
