TSA votes 39-5

Major legislation draws fire

By PAM ROBERTS

Major legislation was introduced at the sixth general assembly of the Tennessee Student Association last weekend in Memphis by Bonita Wilson, secretary of legislative affairs for the Austin Peay State University Student Government Association.

The legislation recommended that the TSA support the idea of a student on the Tennessee Board of Regents. After much heated debate concerning the intent of the resolution, it was passed by a 39-5 vote. This legislation could have important consequences for Tennessee students in future action by the board of regents. Also passed was a resolution nullifying a central committee of TSA endorsing National Student Association Life Insurance. This action was due to the lack of direct communication between Student Government and NSA, as well as lack of a written contract which could be brought before the senate for approval.

Women's rights legislation was passed which empowered TSA to compile and publish information on women's activities and roles as students and in society.

"As women comprise approximately 30 per cent of the students of Tennessee, it was felt that there was a lack of information concerning their roles both on-campus and in society," commented Wilson, a delegate to the TSA convention. The information on women's rights is to be compiled by a central committee of TSA and will be published in a monthly news bulletin which will be available in the TSA office.

Various other resolutions were presented to endorse child care facilities for students and to have students' recognized extracurricular activities listed on their permanent transcripts.

The Tennessee Student Association in operation since 1971, consists of approximately 21 member schools under the jurisdiction of the State Board of Regents and the Tennessee State Legislature. Each member school has four voting delegates. In this way, all schools have equal opportunity to get their legislation passed.

The purpose of the TSA as Ron Ladd, president of the SGA, stated is for "student governments to get together, pass around ideas and be a strong voice of appeal to the State Board of Regents, the Tennessee State Legislature and campus administrations. It is in no way radical, yet any recommendation

Revision of core represents new options at APSU

By DAVID MASON

A new general studies core curriculum for Austin Peay State University is now before the Tennessee State Board of Regents.

Though the proposed curriculum has been before the board for several months, no decision has been made.

The curriculum was designed and proposed by the university academic council, headed by Dr. Herbert Stallworth, vice president for academic affairs. The changes were submitted to

Dr. Joe Morgan (APSU president), the faculty and the student body, all of whom approved the changes.

Stallworth stated that the reason the old core, which has not been revised since 1963, is being changed is because "the present core does not give very many options to the students." He added that the new core "gives students more choice in how they satisfy core requirements."

Stallworth added that there was little difference in the amount of hours in the old and new cores. He also added that if it is approved it will go into effect next fall.

There was, however, some opposition to the changes. Dr. Clayton Powers, associate professor of health and physical education, voiced his disapproval of the cutting of physical education required hours to three (half of what it is now).

He also felt that more PE courses should be added in favor of courses like "Beginning Acting." Powers said that there had been plans to expand the PE program. He went on to say that health courses are vital in teaching sex education and a better understanding of drug abuse and drug related problems.

Sarah Wood, chairman of the physics department, felt that the hours in the new core were too long. (The B.S., B.A. and B.S.E.

will require 69 hours in their cores). She said it also makes it difficult for students to have double majors which she feels is necessary in today's diversified and competitive society.

'Milestone '74' displays for Trahern dedication

By SHARON RILEY

Over two hundred people attended the dedication ceremony of the new Margaret Furt Trahern Building, which was held in the theatre of the $1.6 million building at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

The dedication in honor of Margaret Trahern, a former Austin Peay State University teacher, represented the beginning of a new era for the art and drama departments.

President Joe Morgan presided over the activities. Dr. Duane Forderhouse, chairman of the philosophy department, gave the invocation. Dr. Charles Young, chairman of the art department and Dr. I. J. Filippo, chairman of the speech and drama department, introduced the faculty members of their respective departments.

Mrs. Clara Hieronymus, art editor for Nashville's The Tennessean and a leading art and drama critic, presented the dedication address. The title of her speech, "Too Many Friends, Too Few Lovers," depicted the proven need for advancement in the field of art.

"Friends are polite about art. We need to turn polite friends into zealous lovers."

Important issues covered

Beard, Schaeffer interviewed

LAST THURSDAY both major candidates for the sixth district U.S. congressional seat from Tennessee were interviewed by The All State.

Robin Beard and Tim Schaeffer, Republican and Democratic party nominees respectively, were in Clarksville campaigning. Beard came to Austin Peay State University for an interview and Schaeffer was questioned at a local radio station after a two-hour political broadcast.

This campaign is Rep. Beard's first re-election attempt since successfully defeating Democratic incumbent William R. Anderson two years ago. Schaeffer, 1970 campaign manager for Albert Gore in his unsuccessful U.S. senate re-election bid, is making his first congressional attempt.

THE CANDIDATES were quizzed on the same issues and not told the positions taken or accusations made by each other. The issues and answers are as follows:

ON COED DORMITORIES: Schaeffer: I don't see anything wrong with them, personally. It should really be left up to the individual school. I don't think it should be an act of legislation.

Schaeffer: I'm a little shaky on the coed dorm situation. I don't really see any need for them, although I'm rather cool on the subject. I think the decision should be left to the school or maybe the state. The closer you get to the situation is where the decision should be made.

ON FORD'S ECONOMICS: Beard: I agree with all of the President's new policy with the exception of the five per cent individual surtax. I think the American middle class are taxed enough.

The place to trim costs is in federal spending. I don't think there is a single federal program where some cost cutting can't be done.

Schaeffer: I am violently opposed to it, well, make that opposed to it. Number one, it presents us with a tax increase when people can't afford it. It is an unfairly placed burden on middle income families who are already paying more than their share. The surtax favors corporations.

ON WELFARE REFORM:

Beard: Welfare reform is sorely needed. Food stamp costs alone will soar from $2 billion this year to $6 billion next year. Nothing at all has recently been initiated in the way of welfare reform. The committee in charge of welfare control is largely ineffective.

I co-sponsored a bill preventing striking workers from receiving food stamps because I didn't feel that the taxpayers should have to subsidize strikes. This has turned the labor groups against me.

Schaeffer: I am in favor of welfare support for people who need it. Programs should be carefully administered to prevent laziness. The food stamp program is in need of reform. The Republicans have been in control and have mismanaged and allowed abuses.

ON ENERGY MONOPOLIES:

Beard: I don't have the insight into oil and coal and coal com-pаний to comment on this. These congressmen that tell you that they know it all and have all the answers don't know, either.

There's no way to know everything about the oil and coal situations. Only two congressmen from Tennessee voted for further anti-trust investigation by congress, one of them myself.

One thing that has helped is that President Ford has raised the price fixing penalty from $50,000 to $1 million. More of this 'get tough attitude is what's needed.

ON MARIJUANA: Schaeffer: The problem is that the Republicans haven't enforced the existing laws. The problem can be solved if the laws are enforced.

The Federal Power Commission should have jurisdiction over coal companies as it does over natural gas.

ON MARIJUANA:

Beard: I really don't know. I have an eight-year-old and a four-year-old child and I've seen so many kids messed up on drugs. Whether it's marijuana or hard stuff, I think the emphasis of punishment should be on the pushers or the ones who are making money selling on the black market. That burns me up.

Schaeffer: I'm not for legalization and sale of marijuana. However, I do feel that punishment may be a little strong for offenders.

CLOSING STATEMENTS:

Beard: John Ehrlichman was asked about his advice to young people considering politics. He said, "Keep out, stay away."

Conservatism may be modern virtue

REPUBLICAN INCUMBENT Robin Beard and Democratic contender Tim Schaeffer are, as is shown in the interviews below, at variance on many of the major campaign issues.

Beard, after his first two years in the house of representatives, has been labelled a conservative by his peers, while Schaeffer is considered the more liberal of the two. Their campaigns have been anything but boring, with Schaeffer hurling accusation after accusation at the Republican party for bungling the affairs of the country, while Beard speaks of himself as a target of organized labor and harps on restraint in government spending.

REP. BEARD seems to The All State to be the more desirable candidate of the two. He was far more frank and topical when questioned than Schaeffer, giving specifics readily and refusing to generalize as Schaeffer did so often.

Rep. Beard's stance on the economy situation is very impressive. His voting record has shown that he is strongly opposed to inflationary government spending. He seems to know where he stands and what he believes and puts the blame on his fellow congressmen for continued approval of spiralling federal expenditures.

Schaeffer, on the other hand, seems to simply put the blame on the Republican party for inflation. Mr. Schaeffer continually has used the Republicans as the scapegoat for political problems.

REP. BEARD has maintained a closer rapport with his constituents than any other representative for this area in recent years. He has come to Clarksville regularly for personal talk sessions at the courthouse and has regularly taken surveys of voter feedback.

He has had the fortitude to stand up and voice his opinion on matters where other Tennessee representatives have not. His legislative actions seem to closely follow his constituent's needs and his opinions correlate more closely with the polled opinions of those he represents than do Schaeffer's.

PERHAPS THE most enlightening thing about Robin Beard is his overall attitude. There is an openness, a hopeful air about him that Tim Schaeffer does not possess.

THE ALL STATE endorses Robin Beard for the sixth district congressional seat in next Tuesday's election. He's done a good job the last two years. We don't see any reason why he won't keep up the good work.

The search continues

Peaymania's still hiding

By GLENN DUBBIN

BULLETIN—Searchers at Austin Peay State University in Clarksville, Tenn., are still combing the campus in order to ascertain the whereabouts of "Peaymania."

The highly contagious sensation that sweeps the student body, faculty and community folk during basketball season remains in hiding despite extensive search efforts.

Peaymania begins at the onset of basketball season, reaches epidemic proportions by the midpoint of the schedule and departs almost as soon as the players trot back to the dressing room at the conclusion of the last season game.

The question now seems to be: What happens to this desirable emotional state between the end of the last basketball game and the tipoff of the red-white game the following year?

At any rate, Peaymania goes; leaving in its wake sluggish and grumbling football fans who must be well fortified with bloody marmite before they can manage to drag themselves and their seldom used red and white pomps to the game.

Come homecoming time, they all don new outfits, pin on the traditional corsages, cradle the ever present thermos bottles and make their ways to the football stadium to inquire as to why the football gods are ragged and why their class queen is this year.

MEMBERS OF the alumni, overcome with spirited memories of old college days gone by, wonder why the floats appear hastily assembled and why the class queens are only cheered by certain groups.

What the alumni sees at homecoming is rarely closely related to the kind of welcome it anticipates and is certainly not indicative of the welcome the student body is capable of issuing.

The floats are built amid accelerated confusion that stems from a deadline which approaches with frightening rapidity and work commitments from people who never show up to assist. Consequently, the floats are constructed by the class officers, a few dedicated seniors and perhaps one or two class members who refuse to believe, or have not yet heard, that in order to be cool in college one must be apathetic.

THE APATHY is reflected in class meetings, too, where queens are more often selected by their affiliation with a sorority or fraternity than by beauty or personality.

The end result of all the Austin Peay look is a less than eventful homecoming, devoid of red floppy hats, lacking buttons proclaiming victory wishes and minus spirit-led "Let's go Peay" yells.

Bachelor of fine arts program

New degree deserves praise

SPECIALIZATION is becoming more and more required of education in developing careers for after graduation. Colleges and universities must adapt their curriculum to include concentrated programs with more pre-graduate experience.

Last spring a new degree was approved for Austin Peay State University. This was the bachelor of fine arts (BFA) degree having majors with concentrations in sculptor-crafts, graphics, advertising design, painting and art education.

In comparing the requirements for the new degree with the standard bachelor of arts (BA) or bachelor of science (BS) in art, several advantages can be seen for those who want greater proficiency in a specific area of art.

THE BFA ALLOWS for many of the same courses as the BA or BS in its 60 quarter hours of general requirements. However, there are some course alterations that offer more specialization prior to the actual concentration.

A tremendous improvement over the two standard degrees is in the 16 quarter hours of concentration given to either of the five fine arts majors. Within this are two courses devoted to a practicum, possibly even involving preparation for an art exhibit.

Still a third advantage is the electives which give a variety of subjects that are useful in the thought behind and the application of art.

THE ELECTIVES for the concentration in graphics and painting include aesthetics, cultural history and industrial arts courses in engineering drawing, ceramics and metal work. The Sculptor-crafts even includes electives in plastics which shows how the BFA is better preparing the students for not only traditional art but also for a profession in today's synthetic society.

Advertising design electives include courses that better prepare students for the type job they are working towards. It offers communications-oriented courses in advanced and creative writing, journalism, speech and marketing.

Thus the BFA shows the extension from the strictly liberal arts aspect of art to its use in or as a profession. Besides, concentrating in one area of art, the BFA degree distributes that concentration over a variety of electives to give more depth and utility to that specific area.

Senate backs dryers

TWO RESOLUTIONS were unanimously passed by the Austin Peay State University Student Government Association senate Thursday.

A resolution to support placing a lighted intramural announcement sign on the main floor of the University Center was presented by sophomore senator Mary Dowlen.

James Hicks, senior class vice president, presented a resolution to place washers and dryers at the Emerald Hills apartment complex for married students.

The resolutions will now go to the desk to APSU president Joe Morgan for approval or disapproval.

Some just can't win

(CPS) — "NIXON'S REMARKS bugged me a little," said a physician at Memorial Hospital in Long Beach, Calif. Dr. Toumanjian, of American heritage, recalled the following exchange:

Nixon: Do you want to be rich?

Doctor: (taken aback) Yes, I want to be a good doctor and I want to be wealthy, too.

Nixon: Oh, if you want to be rich you should go into the Armenian restaurant business.

Doctor: I think I've gone a little too far in medicine to start a restaurant.

Toumanjian said Nixon then mentioned his favorite Armenian restaurant in San Francisco and its owner who had written a book on Armenian immigrants. He offered to send the doctor a copy of the book.

"What he said was like saying to a black: 'You've come a long way from the cottonfield,'" Toumanjian told reporters. "The stereo-type of an Armenian is that you have to be cleaning rugs or running a restaurant."

The rich get richer

(CPS) — AMERICA'S "SUPER RICH" are getting even more super, according to a recent study by the Urban Institute.

The study sets the number of super-rich at 4.4 per cent of the total population and reports that this group owns:

- 27 per cent of all privately held real estate;
- 33 per cent of all cash holdings;
- 40 per cent of non-corporate business assets;
- 63 per cent of privately-held corporate stock;
- 74 per cent of federal bonds and securities other than savings bonds;
- 78 per cent of all state and local bonds;
- Virtually all corporate and foreign bonds and securities notes.

If the $3.3 trillion that makes up America's total wealth were evenly distributed, the study theorized, every American over age 21 would have $25,000 a year. As it is, the super-rich average $200,000 a year while half the population averages no more than $3000 a year in net assets.

Dedication

Hieronymus also dedicated the Frank Clement Fine Arts Building when the art department moved there from the McCord Building.

Filippo expressed his impressions of the new building saying, "It will present an opportunity to better serve the cultural needs of the community." It will become the training ground for speech and drama partitioners.

Thomas Webb, a speech and drama major, and Katherine Anderson, an art student, presented the students' viewpoint of the new building. Webb gave a brief history of the drama department from 1927 when it was part of the English department through 1963 when it was given departmental status. Anderson commented on what the move meant to the art students. More up-to-date equipment and spacious studios were on the top of her list of improvements which the Trabern Building offered.

The grand opening of the Trabern Gallery was also held Sunday. Approximately 60 art faculty members from universities across the state exhibited samples of their works in "Milestone '74," the dedication show for the gallery. Many areas of the arts were represented, including water color, pencil, oil, ceramics, black prints, jewelry and statues of bronze and aluminum.

ROTC releases grant openings

Opportunities for high school seniors, both men and women, in the Clarksville area to win four-year Army ROTC college scholarships at any one of more than 280 colleges and universities across the country were announced today by Lt. Col. Pat McDermott, professor of military science at Austin Peay State University.

Over 1,000 Army ROTC scholarships will be awarded this year. In addition to providing full tuition and funds for textbooks and laboratory fees, the Army ROTC scholarships pay a monthly subsistence allowance of $350.

Upon graduation from college, the ROTC scholarship winner is commissioned a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army and is expected to serve on active duty for four years.

McDermott added that the application period for scholarships is from the present time through Dec. 31. Application packets may be obtained by writing, before Dec. 1 to Army ROTC Scholarships, Ft. Knox, Ky., 41021.

Selection of scholarship winners is based upon the results of the student's American College Testing program (ACT) or Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), high school academic record, participation in athletic and other extra-curricular activities, a physical examination and interviews.

Concerning MTSU senate

By MELISSA GANNAWAY

Continuing its study, the Austin Peay State University Faculty Council Feasibility Study Committee, met to hear a report concerning the Middle Tennessee State faculty senate from Martha Cooper, instructor in marketing, and Don Boren, assistant professor of business administration.

MTSU has had a senate in existence for ten years. It appears to be basically an advisory committee made up of faculty members only, according to the report.

Cooper stated that the MTSU faculty senate seems to have good relationships with the vice presidents and faculty. According to Cooper, the faculty senate also publishes a newsletter in order for better communications between the senate and faculty members.

Dr. Joe Morgan, APSU president, and Dr. Herbert Stallworth, vice president for academic affairs, led a discussion in ordering the council members to exchange information, views and questions.

Dr. Ernie Woodward, professor of education, questioned the views of President Morgan about how the faculty senate would be used. Morgan stated that the senate would study types of activities which seem to be workable.

The senate would also be a communication device.

Debate team scheduling events for coming year

The debate team of Austin Peay State University is scheduling debates for the year.

The team is made up of two varsity teams and one novice team. Judy Azana and Nancy Karlawich are on one varsity debate team. Last year's state champions in the novice division of the Tennessee Intercollegiate Forensic Association, Tony Boyd and Gary Wood are on the other.

This year's service team consists of Melvin Houghes and Bill Viverette.

On the road next weekend, the team will travel to Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green, Ky. to compete in debate action Nov. 8-9. At that same weekend, individual speech students will go to Southern Connecticut University in New Haven, Conn., to compete in individual competition.

Individual contests will include persuasive speaking, extemporaneous speaking, dramatic duet, after dinner speaking and other events. John G. Griffin, associate professor of speech and theater at APSU, will accompany the students.

On Nov. 22 and 23, the annual Ohio Valley Conference tournament for debate will be held at Tennessee Tech University in Cookeville.

Later in the year, the debaters will travel to Vanderbilt University for the Tennessee Intercollegiate Forensic Association contest. Also scheduled is a debate at Bellarmine College in Louisville, Ky.

Students interested in joining the debate team should contact Mike McDonald, instructor of debate at Austin Peay State University, room 230, Margaret Fuet Traders Building, or call 640-7144.

New education model studied

A Compensatory Education Program is currently being discussed at Austin Peay State University.

Dr. Hayden Jolly, professor of education, Dr. Elizabeth Stokes, professor of psychology, Dr. William Stokes, chairman of mathematics, Dr. Garland Blair, chairman of psychology, and Dr. Albert Bekus, associate professor of English, inspected some of the more effective compensatory education programs across the country during the last academic year, for the purpose of informing themselves about such education programs.

The group cooperatively designed a compensatory education program for APSU.

"I think it is an excellent design to launch with," said Dr. Herbert Stallworth, vice president for academic affairs.

"The cost of implementing the designed model is estimated conservatively at $50,000," continued Stallworth. "This would have to be $50,000 of new Twenty-three per cent of the total 1,174 freshmen at Austin Peay State University went to the polls Wednesday electing Jordan Beers, president; Martha Elizabeth Hawkins, vice president; and Lin Stubbfield, secretary (in a run-off election). Senatorial candidates were given a vote of confidence and approval. The newly-elected senators in the uncontested race were David Binkley, Sharon Boyd, Dale Hopper, Michael Martin, Diane Oakley, Patsy Simmons, Benny Skinner and Cheryl West. Anita Taverna received four write-in votes.

The final tally of votes for the freshman class officers was 155 for Beers, 68 for Wayne Gill and 48 for Eddie Holt.

Hawkins received 132 votes to Duane "Fate" Morgan's 108 in the vice presidential race.

In the run-off election for secretary, Lin Stubbfield received 59 votes to Sheila Ray's 29.

When questioned on his plans for the future, Beers, a political science major from Springfield, commented, "There's a lot to do. You just have to take one thing at a time, and right now we are concentrating on increasing homecoming participation."

Hawkins added in connection with participation on the freshman float entry, "It may be hard work, but it will be enjoyable." She hopes that this will be one way of getting freshmen to "come out of their shells."

Newly-elected secretary, Stubbfield would also like to get the freshmen involved in homecoming activities and the freshman float.

'Wit's Inn' message sensitive

By JEANIE BOYD

The message coming last Sunday night from "The Wit's Inn," an Austin Peay State University-sponsored coffee house that opened recently, was one of sensitive creativity.

As guests came in spasmodically and were seated, they became part of a darkly silhouetted group facing a mellow, light blue stage. They heard the sounds of a local student artist, Danny Colon, singing and playing guitar.

"JUST YESTERDAY, mornin' they didn't know you were gone...." echoed from a Mickey Newberry-Bob Dylan-type voice as he sang of ideas and feelings he wanted very much to communicate to his audience.

The poetry in the lyrics of some of Danny's own songs sounded out in a sensitive tone of self-expression.

"God bless the child, he's so far away, from the riches of life, and from the day."

CALVIN MOORE, another local artist sang next as the guests sipped coffee or tea in a dark, smoke-filled room.

In preface to his first song, he said "this is a place to get your heads together" and he sang the same message:

"... Nothing ever can be done, or nothing ever will be done about yesterday... there is no time to sit around and talk about tomorrow."

In a style similar to that of George Harrison, he sang some of his own songs also.

AN ALUMNUS OF Austin Peay

State University, Leo Adames came back to entertain again. He began with three numbers that had "problems" familiar to college students.

Guests and performers exchanged witty remarks in a mood of casual informality, while the night was filled with songs like "Brother Love's Traveling Salvation Show," "Sweet Caroline" and "Fire and Rain."

"The Wit's Inn," located in the left side of the old home economics building on Home Avenue is open every Sunday night and welcomes everyone to stop in. They are also anxious for any local musicians or poets to perform.

Vacek named veterans' rep

Bob Vacek has been named the Veterans Administration's representative for Austin Peay State University, according to Dr. Joe Morgan, president.

Vacek, 36, began his duties on Aug. 1, a native of Baltimore, Md., Vacek provides personalized service to veterans receiving educational assistance benefits under the GI Bill.

Under the new program announced in May by the VA, each college in the nation will have a Vet-Rep either on campus or have access to a traveling Vet-Rep from a nearby college on a regular schedule.

Remember 26-0 humiliation

Govs battle winless UT Martin Saturday

Austin Peay State University will take a break in conference action Saturday night when they will travel to the University of Tennessee at Martin.

Martin will enter the game winless for seven outings but the Govs must beware of a similar situation they faced last year when the Pacers also entered the game winless, but left Clarksville with a 26-0 humiliation of Austin Peay.

Calling the plays for Martin will be Jim Valdes, a 6-1, 190 pounder from Miami Springs, Fla. Valdes has connected on 42 per cent of his passes and has helped Martin average 130 yards on the ground this year.

Larry Washington is one of the Pacers' leading rushers. The 6-1, 190 pounder is averaging over four yards a carry this year and has scored two TD's.

Backing up Washington is David Brown, a sophomore from Niceville, Fla. Brown has used his 6-0, 190 pound frame to average better than four yards a carry.

To add a little more depth in the backfield is Bonnie McCellan, just a freshman, averaging better than three yards a carry. Valdes will go to the air when the running fails and has two fine receivers in Frank Mitchell and Chris Carroll.

Mitchell, a 220 pound sophomore from Miami Springs,

Fla., is the Pacers' leading pass receiver, averaging two receptions a game and averaging better than 10 yards a catch.

When Valdes is unable to find Mitchell, the will look for Chris Carroll, a freshman from Knoxville. The 5-10, 175 pounder, has caught six passes this year and carried one in for a touchdown. He also carries with him an impressive 15 yards per catch average.

Defensively UTM has two big linebackers that have been making most of the tackles this year.

Mike McConkey leads the linebacking corps averaging nine tackles and seven assists.

Besides bringing opponents to the ground, the 6-1, 190 pound junior has recovered two fumbles for the Pacers this year.

Doing the punting for Martin will be the quarterback, Valdes who is averaging better than 40 yards a kick.

Mickey Hamilton, a 6-0, 190 pound sophomore does all the kickoffs and kick scoring for the Pacers. So far this year he has kicked 4-7 extra points and is 1-4 in the field goal department.

Game time is Saturday night at 7:30 in Pacer Stadium in Martin.

Raiders roll by Gavs 45-16

There is a famous cliché used in football jargon today that "the team with the fewest mistakes will win the most football games," and it proved true Saturday when the Austin Peay State University Governors met the Middle Tennessee State University Blue Raiders.

Middle Tennessee, taking advantage of numerous mistakes by Austin Peay, rolled to an easy 45-16 win over the Governors.

"We went out there to try and control the ball but those two interceptions and those fumbles hurt us the most in the first half," declared Jack Busbush, head football coach of Austin Peay. Middle Tennessee opened the game by going 20 yards in six plays, capped by a three yard touchdown run by Dwaine Copeland.

Still in the first quarter, Robert Tripp caused MTSU's Copeland to fumble the ball on the Blue Raiders 17-yard line. Tom Welch recovered the ball and five plays later Henry Varber carried the ball one yard for an Austin Peay touchdown.

But the second quarter was all Middle Tennessee, as the Raiders tallied 21 points on the scoreboard and put the game out of reach of the Governors.

Capitalizing on four turnovers by the Governors, Middle Tennessee engineered touchdown drives of 35, 45, 30 and 37 yards, and capped the second quarter scoring with a 23-yard field goal by Archie Arrington.

Trailing at halftime, 38-7, Austin Peay took the opening kickoff and rammed 62 yards to the Middle Tennessee one-yard line where the Raiders' defensive line failed to yield a touchdown and took over control of the football.

But the Governors refused to yield.

Stopping the Raiders in four rushing attempts, Middle Tennessee was forced to punt.

Taking the snap, MTSU punter Mike Shawen attempted to kick the ball out of the Middle Tennessee endzone, but he was unable to do so. No sooner was the ball left Shawen's foot than Danny Gliden's hand got in the way and caused the ball to roll through the endzone for an Austin Peay safety.

A 15-yard touchdown run by David Fritts capped an 86-yard scoring drive to open the fourth quarter for Middle Tennessee.

Austin Peay added one more score before the final horn sounded when Rick Christophel hit a seven-yard touchdown pass to Richard Woods. This was the first touchdown pass of the season for the Governors.

Austin Peay is currently 1-3-0 in the OVC while Middle Tennessee is 2-2-0.

OVC football title race

As the Ohio Valley Conference football race enters its fourth week of the season, things are beginning to shape up for quite an exciting finish.

Presently there are three teams tied for the conference lead following the showdown last weekend in Bowling Green, Ky.

Western Kentucky University met Eastern Kentucky University, who at that time was leading the OVC. After 60 minutes of football the Western Kentucky Hilltoppers had managed to hand the Colonels their first conference loss of the year 34-24.

Meanwhile in Morehead, Ky., the Golden Eagles of Tennessee Tech University visited the Eagles of Morehead State University. It was a battle between the No. 2 and the No. 8 teams in the conference, but when the horn sounded the Eagles of Morehead State gave the Golden Eagles a kick in the tail feathers, 14-7.

Over in Johnson City, the Racers of Murray State University battled the cellar dwelling Buccaneers of East Tennessee State University. There was no redemption for the Buccaneers as the Racers of Murray State ran by the last place team 17-3.

Of course I mustn't forget the big battle in Murfreesboro, where the Middle Tennessee State University Blue Raiders romped the Austin Peay State University Governors 45-16 to make their homecoming a pleasant one.

So with the season better than halfway over, here are a few big games left in store that could very well decide the conference championship.

This Saturday Murray will visit Eastern Kentucky in Richmond, where both teams will carry a 3-1 conference record into the game. The Racers will be coming off a win last week while the Colonels will be trying to come back after a loss.

On the ninth of November, Eastern Kentucky will travel to Cookeville for a game with Tennessee Tech. If both teams should lose the weekend before this will also be a critical game to determine a conference leader.

But the big game will probably be November 23, in Murray, Ky., where the Racers of Murray State will face the Western Kentucky Hilltoppers. Murray, who was rated No. 1 in the preseason polls, will have to beat the defending conference champion, Western, to win the title and vice versa.

Grisby preferred Austin Peay to larger schools

By MIKE STACY

When you are an athlete that gets selected as a high school All-American in football, and can run the 100 yard dash in 8.2 seconds, you naturally draw the attention of many college scouts and coaches.

And that is what Austin Peay State University trackster Lavaris Grisy did when he attended Atlantic High School in Delray Beach, Fla.

Turning down offers from almost every major college in the United States, Lavaris chose the Peay after attending Lake City Junior College in Florida. Grisy turned down offers from such schools as Arizona State University, San Diego State University and University of

Grisy

Southern California.

Grisy played football, basketball and ran track in his school days at Atlantic High. He was selected as a high school All-American in football his junior year and his freshman year in college he was selected to the National American Athletic Union (AAU) college track team.

Lavaris ran a 9.2 100-yard dash in his freshman year at Lake City in a National Junior College meet held in Houston, Tex.

"I wasn't really surprised at my time because I had been running 8.3 and 9.4 consistently," states Grisy.

When Lavaris was asked who the most influential person in his life was, he replied: "Bob Clear, coach at Atlantic High. I suffered a knee injury playing football and an operation was performed. The doctors said I could no longer play football. My physical education teacher was the track coach and he asked me to go out for track and I've been running track ever since."

Bailey out for season

Austin Peay State University receiver Ron Bailey will be out for the season according to head football coach Jack Brubaker.

Bailey suffered a broken leg Saturday night against North Alabama. The break reportedly occurred in the tibia bone of the lower leg.

Currently ranked sixth in pass receiving, in the Ohio Valley Conference, Bailey is expected to be in a cast for five weeks.

"However, a group of faculty is exploring the question of how we might increase our compensatory education effort; even though we do not have the funds to launch the designed program of the faculty this year," concluded Stalworth.
